

Toy Auction Will Swell Christmas Fund for Needy

Each time the auctioneer's gavel falls at Maynard & Sons Dec. 19, Christmas will become a little brighter for the 500 most needy families in Greater Victoria.

The occasion will be the annual Christmas toy auction, run by Art Roberts, Jr., and Colonist carrier boys to raise funds for The Daily Colonist 500 Christmas Fund.

This will be the fourth straight year that the younger Roberts has taken over auctioneering duties at Maynard's for the 500 fund. Last year, response was so great that two auctions were held instead of one. This year the auction has been set for 1 p.m.

All toys auctioned off will be donated by the public. Old toys gathering dust in your closet now could mean the difference between a dreary and a merry Christmas for the 500 families helped by the fund.

Toys may be left at Maynard's any time between now and Dec. 19. Those wishing to donate toys are urged to turn them in as soon as possible. New and used toys of all types are urgently needed.

There are two ways in which toys will be auctioned off. On toys donated, the entire price received will be turned over to the fund. If people wish to sell their toys at auction, the regular auctioneer's percentage goes to the fund.

Roberts, who ran his first toy auction when he was 15, is coming back to Victoria from University of British Columbia to take over again this year.

Meanwhile, as plans for the toy auction are put into motion, cash donations to the fund continue to come in at a steady rate.

Donations, which are deductible for income tax purposes, may be sent to "The Daily Colonist 500 fund, 2631 Douglas Street." They may also be left at that address or at the downtown business office, 1215 Broad Street.

Coach Flays Quarterback

Bernie Faloney Grey Cup Goat?

Bombers Bubble Over

TORONTO—He wouldn't say so publicly but Hamilton coach Jim Trimble apparently places much of the blame for his Tiger-Cats' 21-7 loss to Winnipeg in the Grey Cup game yesterday on quarterback Bernie Faloney. (See pictures, story on Page 12.)

"We had a spotty performance offensively," he said after the game. "I'm not naming any names, so don't ask me."

But late in the game, after Faloney was thrown for a 16-yard loss on a passing attempt, Trimble was overheard telling the quarterback angrily:

"I thought you were supposed to be a professional quarterback. Why don't you play like one?"

To reporters, the coach, beaten by Winnipeg's Blue Bombers for the second straight year, had this explanation:

10 MINUTES

"They played 10 minutes of good football in the fourth quarter and that beat us. Their depth, youth and overall balance beat us, and we're an older ball club."

In the gloomy Hamilton dressing room, Faloney would only say he didn't think the score reflected the play. He did add the Bombers "were rougher and tougher than last year, but at half time I thought we had the game."

CHAMPAGNE

Over in the Bombers' bubbling headquarters, manager Jim Ausley was handing a bottle of champagne to each player as he came in and 10-year tackle and captain Buddy Tinsley, one of the heroes, was shouting:

"This was the greatest one ever. I guess they taste sweeter each time."

Players were pouring champagne over each other's heads as coach Bud Grant described Tinsley's recovery of a fourth-quarter fumble—with the help of defensive tackle Roger Savoy—as the turning point.

"It was tough up until then," Grant muttered. "Tinsley played the greatest game of his career. He was the top man out there, but they were all great."

WRITERS DISAGREE

Sportswriters from across Canada who covered the game disagreed with Grant, picking Charlie Shepard as the outstanding player because of his booming kicks and his winning touchdown, a score set up by Tinsley's recovery.

Shepard, who won a sports car as a result of the vote, said modestly: "Sure I had a good game, but I'm not really excited. The wind made my punting look better than it is and I had a lot of lucky bounces."

MR. YOUNG BONES

Kenny Ploen, a star at quarterback and defensive safety, kept looking at Tinsley and shouting his nickname: "Good old Mr. Young Bones."

Far into the night, Bomber backers parted their way through downtown Toronto, stopping anywhere for impromptu parades, singings and celebrations with liquid. Police reported no vandalism.

Hailed as the expert of all football experts was Winnipeg sports editor Jack Matheson. Matheson, who gained national fame this year by swapping places with a clergyman for a week, did it again by predicting on the front page of his newspaper Friday that the final score for the 50th anniversary Grey Cup game would be Winnipeg 21, Hamilton 7.

Sleeping Family Safe and Sound

Pilot died when this light plane crashed and burned on the roof of a Compton, Cal., home, but six sleeping occupants of the house, including four children, were unharmed. Harry

Court Helps Bookie

VANCOUVER (CP)—Magistrate Gordon Scott helped a bookie Saturday to live up to his business ethics.

When Sidney Miller, 54, asked for the return of records seized by police so he could pay off his losses, the magistrate ordered police to give him a copy of his list of bets.

He also fined Miller $200.

Elephant In Politics?

MANILA (AP)—A year-old 700-pound elephant presented to Manila's new city zoo by Thailand tried to toss Mayor Arsenio Lacson into a nearby moat during presentation ceremonies. Lacson, a former boxer who weighs in at 150, twice sidestepped and parried with a left before the elephant's trainer broke it up. "He must belong to the opposition," quipped the mayor.

Scurrah Annoyed

Vancouver After Island Ship Jobs

Mayor Percy Scurrah last night criticized what he described as "attempts to put the interests of one West Coast shipyard before the others" by a Vancouver delegation which is scheduled to meet Prime Minister Diefenbaker tomorrow in Ottawa.

The delegation, headed by Mayor Tom Alsbury, in a brief for presentation to the government, hits at the "disproportionate" number of civilian employees engaged in naval refit work at HMC Dockyard, Esquimalt.

It also calls on the government to abandon its present "policy" of confining to Victoria shipyards that portion of naval refit work which is let to private industry.

Mayor Scurrah said the Vancouver brief represents a departure from "the policy we have followed in the past of talking about the West Coast shipbuilding industry as a whole."

"At this time, when our shipbuilding industry is fighting for its very existence, we need more than ever before to present a solid front when seeking more government contracts for the West Coast."

The mayor said naval refit work is "comparatively incidental" to the grave problems faced by West Coast yards which must offset freight rates and higher wages to obtain more shipbuilding jobs in order to survive.

Mayor Scurrah also defended the government policy of carrying out much of its refit work at the naval dockyard. "They have the facilities and the technicians to do this work and we can't quarrel with that," he said.

Mayor Alsbury said shipyard employment in Vancouver has reached the danger point with a drop from 2,000 to 1,000 jobs in the past 12 months. He said there are prospects this figure might be well below 500 within the next few months if additional major work is not secured.

Soldier Killed In Gaza

OTTAWA (CP)—Army officials announced Saturday night that a Canadian soldier was shot and killed earlier in the day when a United Nations emergency force patrol was ambushed in the Middle East.

An army spokesman identified the soldier as Trooper Ronald Hawthorne Allan of Halifax, a member of the Royal Canadian Dragoons Reconnaissance Squadron.

Location and the details of the shooting were not known in Ottawa immediately. The squadron has been based in the Gaza Strip area.

The army said Trooper Allan was killed while on a border patrol.

An army spokesman said there was no word in the initial message received in Ottawa of any further Canadian casualties.

U.K. Cardinal

Moral Control Needed

LONDON (Reuters)—William Cardinal Godfrey, Roman Catholic archbishop of Westminster, called yesterday for government control of entertainment media to combat a threat of increased morality and dishonesty.

The cardinal said in a pastoral letter read in London churches that "a strong legislator would put aside all timidity and remove these corroding influences from our minds."

He warned that the public, particularly young persons, will start to regard as fairly normal conduct the portrayals of killings and shootings... infidelity in marriage, illegitimate children, dishonesty and the like...

"No doubt there would be the usual outcry against what would be called interference with personal freedom, yet this is simply the empty clamor of those who love license rather than a freedom worthy of the name."

Sired 27, Hankers For Twins

OWENTON, Ky. (AP)—Perry McComas is proud of his new daughter born here Saturday, but he wishes she had been twins.

"One thing I always desired was twins and they never did arrive," he said.

But children did arrive one by one—the new baby is the 27th.

Twenty-three of McComas' children are living, including all 12 born to his present wife, Euthena, 38.

His first wife, Myrtle, bore 15 children before her death. McComas will be 73 in February.

Cherry Home at Last

"Naughty Cherry" is what Miss Jessie Read, 1762 Pembroke Street, is telling the errant pheasant whose 13-day escapade on the town made bird-watchers out of thousands of Victorians (and fools out of many who tried to recapture it). Miss Read finally made the capture herself, with corn-baited trap in garden of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Gottfred, 1607 Belmont.—(William A. Boucher photo.)

'Must Be Warped'

City SPCA Joins Dog Killer Hunt

Two SPCA inspectors from Victoria are being sent to investigate the poisoning deaths of 17 dogs in the Duncan area during the past month.

William A. Leach, president of the SPCA branch here, said last night he is satisfied the deaths are the work of "a crank or dog hater."

"It is a very serious offence under the Criminal Code of Canada to lay poison in such a manner that it can be taken by pets or children," Mr. Leach said.

"Our inspectors will co-operate with RCMP in the investigation and when this sadistic-minded person is caught we will not hesitate to lay charges."

Meanwhile, in Duncan, Ald. Steve Saunders said he will suggest to Duncan city councillors tomorrow that they do something to advance chances of catching the person or persons responsible for the poisonings.

"No person who is in his right mind would do a thing like this," Ald. Saunders said. "The person must be warped."

His own dog, a golden cocker spaniel, is one of only two dogs alive of at least five that were poisoned on Wednesday.

Duncan SPCA inspector Harold Orrick said no poisonings were reported to him yesterday. His records show 15 of the 17 poisoned animals died.

Tear Gas Thwarts Violence

PANAMA (AP)—Panamanian and U.S. army troops joined forces Saturday night and staved off a menacing mob of anti-American demonstrators seeking to march on the Panama Canal Zone.

The thwarted mob turned back to spread mob rule within Panama City.

"Gringo, go home," the demonstrators cried at the boundary. They burned Uncle Sam in effigy and stoned U.S. soldiers.

Tear gas and fire hoses were brought into play at one point on the broad Fourth of July Avenue, which marks the line between Panama and the U.S.-run canal zone.

Eyewitnesses said the tear gas was fired by Panamanian troops while Americans manned the fire hoses.

BEATEN BACK

The gas and water beat back a crowd of about 300 demonstrators, mostly youths, trying to plant a Panamanian flag in the zone on the 136th anniversary of the country's independence from Spain.

Violence broke out on Central Avenue, the main thoroughfare. National guard headquarters said hoodlums shattered the window of a fashionable department store. Windows also were broken in the adjoining building of the Chase Manhattan Bank and at the All-American Cables offices.

Human Chain To Rescue

Passersby and police formed a human chain early today to rescue a woman thrown 20 feet down a sharp incline after the car in which she was a passenger crashed through a bridge rail near Mount Douglas Park.

Police, by press time, had not sorted out names of four persons taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital following the accident. Injuries were believed to be not too severe.

Monkey Sparks Spider Hunt

BERLIN (AP) — A little monkey from Brazil has started a nationwide hunt for spiders in East Germany. It seems that a monkey, Tamarin species, an inmate of East Berlin's zoo, prefers spiders in his diet. The zoo made a public appeal for spiders. Result: 400 to 500 nicely packaged spiders arrive at the zoo every day from many points in East Germany.

Book Calls Ahead

Trans-Pacific telephone calls on Christmas Day will be handled by appointment only, telephone officials said last night.

All calls will be handled through Vancouver. The 150 Victoria calls expected will have to compete with calls from across the province. Appointments may be made starting Tuesday.

Trans-Atlantic calls must also be booked in advance. For information regarding overseas calling, a telephone user should call the Victoria long-distance operator, who will connect him with the trans-Pacific operator in Vancouver, or the trans-Atlantic operator in Montreal or New York.

Medals Given To 4-H Club Judging Team

Roast beef and Yorkshire pudding was served to members of the Spoke-Saatch-Sidney 4-H beef club at their annual achievement banquet last night.

Medals were presented to club judging team members Albert Hull, Bob Allan and Karen Cronk for winning second place at the Pacific National Exhibition.

Karen Cronk, who distinguished herself by winning first place in the individual judging contest, did not receive her trophy (the Pym award) as it was damaged in transit.

The club was presented with the Kiwanis award by Gordon Scott for being judged the best junior farmers at the PNE.

Richard Aylard won the senior achievement award (16 years and over) while the junior award went to James Duncan.

One of the 14 B.C. winners of the national 4-H council trip to the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, Richard Aylard, gave a talk on the journey.

Among the guests were deputy agriculture minister William MacGillivray, Miss Ethel Lidster, B.C. supervisor of 4-H clubs, and Kenneth Jameson, district agriculturalist.

Gulf of Mexico

Ship Capsizes, 11 Men Lost

HOUSTON, Tex. (CP) — A search for survivors of a ship which overturned in the Gulf of Mexico continued Saturday without success.

The ship, which carried a crew of 11 men and a cargo of obsolete but still dangerous military ammunition, was spotted floating keel uppermost in the gulf on Friday.

The vessel "looked like a giant coffin afloat in the water," said Houston Chronicle reporter Chester Rogers.

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — It's just as well that Transport Minister Hees apparently relishes a good political scrap in the Commons because he seems to have another on his hands. During the session opening

Jan. 14 the Liberals are unlikely to overlook the fact that the National Harbors Board, for which Mr. Hees is responsible, took in $138,090 more in tolls on Montreal's Jacques Cartier Bridge in September and October than in the two corresponding months last year.

Mr. Hees told reporters there was "no evidence of dishonesty" among the toll collectors. Automatic toll collection equipment was installed on the bridge about three months ago.

Mr. Hees has been in political hot water almost since June 21, 1957, when he took charge of the transport department.

His warmest immersion was during the last session of Parliament in a land expropriation case involving John Pallett, Toronto Progressive Conservative MP.

The Exchequer Court said Mr. Pallett had sworn Mr. Hees had promised some of Mr. Pallett's constituents a higher evaluation on their properties.

A tugboat crewman climbed aboard the vessel and banged on the hull. He got no answer. A plane found the hulk of the National Pride late Friday, but not until Saturday was it identified as the Houston-based craft.

Planes and ships which hurried to the area found debris scattered over a two-mile area. But searchers found no sign of the two 30-man life rafts carried by the 135-foot motor ship.

New National Flag Bid Launched in College

A movement to bring about the adoption of a distinctive Canadian flag has been started by a group of students at Assumption University in Windsor, Ont.

Form letters containing a resolution to be sent to cabinet ministers and political figures all over Canada are being distributed on a nationwide basis. Victoria organizations have received their copies.

The resolution reads, in part: "Whereas Canada suffers from a lack of distinctive Canadian flag and Canadianism has been accorded lip service only, and whereas... our national maturity would be greatly strengthened by a bond springing from our midst... we recommend that a committee be set up to support the creation and adoption of a distinctive Canadian flag."

A Formal Invitation

SHORTLY after the Republican party was elected to power in the United States in 1952, an economy drive went into action to trim the expenditures of the predecessor governments. One of the casualties of the drive was the U.S. consulate in Victoria. On the grounds that one consul—stationed at Vancouver—was sufficient for B.C., the United States cut its diplomatic ties with the capital city. It was a move deeply regretted here both by city and government.

Six years later it has become evident that the duties of the American consul in Vancouver are becoming so heavy that a restoration of the consulate in Victoria might now be justifiable even to an economy-minded Washington.

Hundreds of U.S. citizens live in and around Victoria, without consular aid unless they make the air or sea journey to Vancouver. This amounts to a considerable inconvenience and expense, and by that fact it may influence some U.S. citizens to move from this area.

The absence of a U.S. consul in Victoria is also creating problems for Canadians who have many and varied ties with the United States. In one recent case a Victorian seeking a U.S. visa found the correspondence with Vancouver a tortuous matter, and in addition when he and his family had to meet the U.S. consul they learned they had over two weeks to wait to get an appointment. This delay is considered quite normal under present conditions.

Allowing for the fact that movement between Canada and the United States is becoming less complicated, it is nevertheless essential in many business and social interchanges to call upon consular aid. And an American consul at Vancouver does not exactly fill the bill for Vancouver Islanders.

There are other important reasons, not so evident in 1952 as they are today, why the U.S. should have diplomatic representation in the capital of B.C. Not the least of these is that B.C. is the only land stepping-stone between the U.S. and its new 49th state of Alaska. That and forthcoming negotiations between the U.S. and B.C. on the Columbia River should make it more desirable than before that Victoria should have a U.S. consulate.

If it happens that way, and we hope it will, a resident U.S. consul here would be assured that the city will open its doors to him, not as a stranger but as a well-remembered friend of other days.

Let Conscience Decide

JUSTICE MINISTER FULTON appears to be convinced that the Canadian Parliament in the session to begin on Jan. 14 will pass a bill to abolish capital punishment. Questioned in Ottawa about prospects of the bill's passage, the minister is reported to have replied: "We are on the way to such penal reforms."

Canada in point of fact already has virtually abolished the death penalty, but by government order rather than by statute. Since Prime Minister Diefenbaker's government took office convicted murderers with only isolated exceptions have had the inevitable sentences of the courts commuted to life imprisonment, in many instances without any recommendation for mercy from the juries returning verdicts of guilty. The exceptions have been cases in which the extension of clemency by government order could not possibly have been justified in the circumstances of the crimes, and would have been in patent controversy of the instructions of Parliament as expressed in the statute as it stands. The government has not attempted to deny that it is opposed in principle to capital punishment; but the minister of justice is the first to indicate government policy so plainly.

It is to be hoped, however, that the minister's confidence that the abolition measure will pass does not rest on the government's overwhelming majority in the House or imply that the vote will be taken on party lines. Abolition or retention of the death penalty is not and never should be allowed to become a political issue. No member should feel obliged for reasons of party loyalty to vote against what may be the dictates of his conscience. "Free" votes are rare in the Canadian Parliament, but this is one matter in which all considerations of party affiliation should for the moment be discarded.

Digging a Hole

SHIPBUILDERS lay the keels of new ships with some ceremony and special trees are planted with a touch of bally-hoo also. One hadn't thought of an ordinary new government building being launched with fanfare however. After all, the circumstance is merely the start of the digging of a hole in the ground.

The new courthouse perhaps is not an ordinary event, of course. It will be a great asset when it is built, but one cannot help remembering it was promised three years ago and only now is the first dent in the ground to take place. The delay might even have been thought sufficient reason for a less ostentatious beginning to the project.

However as it happens invitations are being sent out for the great occasion. The first sod won't be turned because it is made of rock, and so the Minister of Public Works will set off a dynamite charge. There will be a big bang and then possibly the concourse of civic, military, ecclesiastical and other guests may wonder if perhaps the fuss isn't rather out of proportion.

Come time for the cornerstone to be laid there will be another touch of pagantry and appropriate oratory. Later still, when the courthouse is all nicely completed and waits only for the front door to be opened with a golden key, there will be a further grand gathering of suitable on-lookers. By then perhaps one could be excused for thinking the fanfare was being overdone.

All will be forgiven however when at last jurisprudence is housed with the dignity it warrants, and members of the legal profession file into their handsome new quarters. If the building lives up to its advance notices the ballyhoo may have been justified; and as to a new courthouse being an event there can be no denial.

Fifty Nations in Default

By JOSEPH MACSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A NEW plan for financing the United Nations Emergency Force could knock the props from under one argument the Soviet bloc has often used against it.

All 82 members of the United Nations are supposed to contribute to UNEF on the same principle as they contribute to the UN itself. Russia never has contributed a kopeck, and it can point to many other delinquents.

When chided, the Soviet bloc's argument—sometimes stated, sometimes implied—goes like this:

"Don't look at us. Many other nations aren't paying for UNEF. Look at the Latin Americans, for instance."

The Soviet Union denies that UNEF was legally constituted or is a proper charge against member states. This burden, it says, should fall on the countries involved in the tangled events of 1956 when Britain, France and Israel sent troops into Egypt, leading to the creation of the peace force.

Other countries support the force and accept the principle of collective responsibility, but for one reason or another they question whether the principle is properly applied by use of the regular UN assessment scale.

Under the new formula now being debated voluntary contributions from the United States and Britain, and perhaps later from other countries, would be used to ease the load particularly on poorer nations.

This would be done by applying the contributions first to those countries with the lowest percentage assessments, reducing their levy by 50 per cent.

As stated by Canadian delegate W. Arthur Irwin, "We hope that this procedure will make it possible for member states which heretofore have not been able to meet their full assessments to pay the smaller amount."

If the fence-sitters can be persuaded to contribute the nine-nation Soviet bloc's position would become increasingly unpopular. But the Soviets can hardly be said to appear conspicuous when a total of 50 countries—a majority of UN members—have not paid their share so far this year.

An ironic angle was pointed out by Irwin when he commented that Russia did not vote against the establishment of UNEF—neither did any other country—and the Russians have since invoked the General Assembly resolution which created UNEF when it suited their purposes.

At $20,000,000, UNEF's budget for 1960 cannot be considered crushing, when applied to 82 countries, some of whose budgets are astronomical. But it is one-third the total UN budget, and observers say the shortfall in payments has tended to warp the financial structure of the world body.

... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

TYRONE GUTHRIE, the man who as initial director helped launch Ontario's now famous Stratford Festival, says he'd rather write on water than be remembered as an actor on film or tape long after his era was over. Posterity should live on the legend of Helen Hayes, for instance, and not on the resurrection of her image dated by a period hair-do and an acting style by then out of fashion.

A television watcher could say amen to this as he views 20 or 30-year-old films, which is akin to looking into the family albums of departed days, generally kept a family secret. Some screen idols must cringe as their old films are brought to light again. And perhaps not without wonder.

It is perhaps not their fault. Mr. Guthrie points out that acting talent in a movie star is irrelevant. Beautiful dimwits, as he puts it, can be guided to sustain the inspiration of a scene for the mere two or three minutes of a "take." The take can be retaken a score of times until it is just right, or, as so many films make clear until it's the best the "dimwit" can do. But the star has been created by the art of public indoctrination and so it is the "name" that is the criterion, not the play.

One name mentioned by Guthrie in the tasty paragraphs of his theatrical notebook printed in Maclean's, is that of Marlon Brando. The Stratford maestro is obviously not enamoured of film acting and it is thus not strange he should cite Mr. Brando as of the inarticulate-croak school. He is not far wrong either.

This current film idol's name was mentioned last week as a likely prospect for the role of T. E. Lawrence in a projected film of that legendary figure. One can fancy Alec Guinness as the ascetic leader of the Arabian revolt—he is to essay the part in a stage production of different genre—but scarcely Mr. Brando. One could wish the parts reversed if only because it is the Brando Lawrence and not the Guinness Lawrence that will become visible in due course to Victorians.

Here again the disadvantage is the film actor's, however, even allowing for his limitations. Films enjoy such a wide audience they entrain whole multitudes and thus more people who have read the Lawrence books will see the film than will see the Guinness stage play. Brando does not belong in the same thespian company as Guinness but he will be exposed to more critical audiences nevertheless, who have already formed a mental image of Lawrence of Arabia. With a book and its filming, or a film about a famous personage known through books, it is a matter of which gets to the reader or watcher first.

First impressions are hard to down, even when film scripts follow a book's recital faithfully, which is none too often. One of the mysteries of filmdom is the choice of a book or character as a subject and then the ruthless discard of content that frequently results. Once more it is the "name" that is the magic potion which will lure the customers, and "Lawrence of Arabia" is essentially that vintage. It is perhaps another mystery how he has escaped the screen so far.

A pity though, for this writer at least, that Brando and not Guinness will assume the celluloid role. Guinness is an actor of exquisite sensibility—he first learned his art on the stage, which makes the difference—and his Lawrence would be something to see. Insofar as it is possible he could be trusted to resurrect for posterity an image not yet rendered demode by change of style and period—unless it is that "civilization" is catching up with the Bedouin and his particular panache being destroyed.

Letter from London

Expanding the Grid System

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

SOME years ago, under the auspices of private industry, the power companies of Britain introduced what is known as the "grid." Basically it was a process of linking power stations all over the country so that loads and resources could be shared and breakdowns would cause the minimum of trouble.

It was said during the war that the grid did a great deal to save the country and preserve the nation's productivity. Since the war, under the auspices of the now national electricity industry, the grid system has been developed and enlarged so that almost any part of the country may draw on any other part for power.

What was good for electricity could, it was thought, be good also for gas; and so, soon after the war, the nationalized gas industry decided to create a gas grid on similar lines to the electricity grid. It meant the laying of large trunk mains all over the country and the job is still going on; but the principle has been established and there is no great difficulty in gas produced in London being used elsewhere in the country.

Indeed just recently we have been using gas made in the United States and transported across the Atlantic in a special ship—a development described as encouraging and which may have prospects for an export trade in British Columbia natural gas.

It was not surprising therefore that in this year of drought men's thoughts should turn to a water grid. Britain's water supplies are as many and varied as the concerns which control them. We have municipal water undertakings, private and public water boards, and private enterprise suppliers. We also have the garden well and farm bores.

Water is collected from large dams constructed in the Welsh hills; for places as far distant as Liverpool, Birmingham, Coventry and Rugby; in the Lake District for Manchester. It is taken from rivers and extracted from the ground. This year some places have done very well, others have been severely rationed, and the crisis is far from over. Many storage reservoirs are all but empty and even if we have a wet winter and plenty of snow it is most improbable that reserves will be anything like the quantity in store at the beginning of this summer. Our driest summer followed the wettest summer and the wettest winter on record, but averaged over the whole country there was not enough water to go round.

The logical solution seemed to be a water grid so that those places with adequate water supplies could pipe their surplus through the grid in the same way as gas and electricity are switched around according to demand.

But there will be no water grid, not because the companies and water boards will not co-operate but because it is too expensive. And, the reason it is too expensive is a simple, much too simple, scientific fact. Unlike gas and electricity, water will not flow uphill. A water grid would mean not only a network of pipes but thousands of pumping stations to force it uphill, and the cost would outweigh any advantage. So, because water will not flow uphill there will be no water grid in Britain.

THE Duke of Kent and Princess Marina of Greece were married in London, 25 years ago.

The beautiful princess and the youngest son of the King and Queen of England said their vows by candlelight before the Archbishop of Canterbury in Westminster Abbey.

The bells of the abbey pealed 5,040 changes as the wedding procession made its way back to Buckingham Palace for a second ceremony, the ancient rite of the Greek Orthodox Church.

The air of the palace chapel was heavy with incense. Archbishop Strinopoulos Germanos said the words, blessed the couple with holy wine and crowned them with three crowns.

London went wild. Half a million people cheered the duke and his bride through the streets to Paddington Station. From there they went to the Earl of Dudley's country home, Himeley Hall.

In Chicago, "Baby Face" Nelson, U.S. Public Enemy No. 1, shot his way out of a police trap with a machine gun. He killed one federal agent, seriously wounded another.

Sir Richard McBride's Conservative government was returned to Victoria by a landslide majority, in a B.C. general election 50 years ago.

The score: Conservatives, 38, Liberals 2, Socialists 2. The election had been fought on Sir Richard McBride's plan to throw the credit of the province behind the new Canadian Northern Railway line.

Captain Edward Barkley, 80-year-old retired Royal Navy officer, burned to death when fire destroyed his house at Westholme, 50 years ago.

He was the son of the Rev. William Barkley and grandson of the famous navigator, Capt. Charles William Barkley, who had cruised along the North Pacific Coast in the ship Imperial Eagle in 1787.

Also aboard the Imperial Eagle on that voyage had been Capt. Charles William Barkley's wife, the former Frances Hornby Trevor, the first white woman to visit the North Pacific Coast.

The diary kept by Mrs. Frances Hornby Barkley was one of the possessions burned in her grandson's house. Perhaps it cost Capt. Edward Barkley, RN, retd., his life.

"The fire broke out in the early morning, when Capt. Barkley and a Chinese were alone in the building, and both escaped. Capt. Barkley then remembered something he wanted to save and went back.

"He made one trip in safety and returned again, but this time did not emerge, and his charred body was found in the ruins of the house."

ONE hundred years ago it cost $1 to vote in the colony of Vancouver Island.

The British Colonist newspaper felt that the $1 registration tax was "unjust, and intended to deter many from voting, if possible."

"The tax is on a par, however, with the former ill-treatment and petty tyranny which the old settlers have been compelled to bear from the irresponsible agents of the Hudson Bay Company, aided and abetted by the agents of that Company in the Government."

"Nevertheless, it is the law of the land that each elector will have to send in to the Sheriff, before next Wednesday, his claim to vote, and pay his dollar at the same time."

"If he has a vote in more than one district, a claim to vote for each district will have to be handed in, with a dollar for each district . . .

"Our advice to every qualified elector is to . . . register your vote at once . . . The old settlers, who have borne starvation, imprisonment, and been deprived of the rights of Englishmen without redress, for 10 long years, should now strike a blow to end the combination of the Company with the Government to deprive them longer of their rights."

"Pay your dollar . . . and be prepared to vote for independent men."

There is some consolation, however. A government survey has shown that no area of the British Isles need be without water even in the driest summer. All that is lacking is adequate water storage. We need more reservoirs in the area to be served so that the water can flow downhill to the people who need it. Science has confirmed the profound utterance of the bishop who, when asked to pray for rain refused with the comment, "The good Lord provides all the rain we need. Dam the rain."

It seems that the government is going to encourage Britain generally to take the bishop's advice. Water authorities are to be encouraged through central government financial aid to increase their storage facilities so that they will be able to cope with summer droughts—the time when consumption rockets and supplies dwindle.

The water grid is out unless some genius decides to hollow out the top of Ben Nevis—then maybe it would be possible to reticulate Scottish water all over Britain because it would be flowing downhill all the way. The trouble there, of course, is that the catchment area is not big enough, which seems a pity. It is possible, however, that London may yet follow Birmingham's example and go to the hills of Wales, where it could flow down in comfort to London.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

"THE stupid Christmas look," says a floorwalker who rides the bus with me, "has already arrived."

"You know the expression I mean. All the rest of the year shoppers have a normal, intelligent expression on their faces. They don't come downtown unless they want something, and they know what they want. Briskly, purposefully, they stride into the store and go directly to the department they wish to deal with."

"But at Christmas," he said, heaving a big sigh, "the entire picture changes. Nobody knows what they want. Even when they arrive downtown they haven't the foggiest notion. They just realize it is time they did their Christmas shopping, and they come down hoping to see something that might do it. If it ideas they want. And the longer they stay downtown the fogger they get. I can spot a two-hour shopper from a three-hour shopper. The four-hour shoppers have a woebegone, bewildered look that can't be mistaken. After four hours of wandering around, growing more and more uncertain, they begin to just stand and stare into space. They're the ones you will notice blocking traffic in the aisles. They don't know where to go, which way to turn. If you pause beside them, you will hear them faintly moaning."

"It will grow steadily worse, now, until the day before Christmas. That last day, of course, everybody goes nuts. Like sleepers awakening, they will all come stampeding downtown buying anything, everything. It's a madhouse. Nobody still knows what they want, but they buy it anyway. Christmas is really a sort of hypnotic trance."

Like Alexander I will reign, And I will reign alone; My thoughts did evermore disdain A rival on my throne. He either fears his fate too much, Or his deserts are small, That dares not put it to the touch, To gain or lose it all.

Money Wasted

I am the parent of three children and I know how much it costs to have dental care for these children. Fluoridation, for a few cents each year, will decrease a great deal of this dental decay and allow our children better health. This money which is literally wasted could be diverted to useful purposes in our community rather than to the wasteful purchase of valueless dental extractions and fillings. I am very surprised that Victoria businessmen have not conducted an all-out campaign to foster fluoridation as this money, now spent for dental repair work, could be spent in our local shops for many articles. Our children are being denied an essential factor in our water and thereby have great amounts of dental decay. Every parent, and every grandparent should militantly campaign for fluoridation. No effort should be spared in instituting fluoridation in Greater Victoria. Business can place its part too and will be well advised to fully endorse this most worthwhile measure.

(MRS.) A. W. TASSELL

Misleading Statement

From Dr. McLuhan's statement: "Fluoridation is not mass-medication because medication implies a cure and fluoridation is in the nature of a preventative." True, it is intended to be a preventative and a preventative is a prophylactic. Cassell's New English Dictionary gives the following "Prophylactic, a. protecting against disease; preventive, n. a preventive medicine."

In view of this authoritative definition, I maintain that Dr. McLuhan's statement is quite incorrect and, whether intended to be or not, very misleading.

E. M. MOORE.

Safer and Easier

I think Mr. C. H. Lanigan is quite right. There should be no vote. Each child can be fluoridated right now. Individual treatment is many times cheaper, more effective, safer and easier to control than mixing the medicine into the water needed for gardening, bathroom, washing purposes and fire-extinguishing.

On this continent 165,000,000 inhabitants quite obviously think so, too, and I hope that Victoria as a tourist centre will side with this big majority.

I got quite a jolt this morning (Nov. 26) whilst reading the Colonist and taking my cup of "Lipton's Fluoride" when I saw the ad by our very much looked-up-to Symphony Society proclaiming and featuring the production of the "glorious" music of Oklahoma, in large print, then in small type, also, several words by the great masters; then all of this over the respected name of Mr. Hans Gruber.

Surely the person responsible for the using of the word "glorious" as applied to Oklahoma did so without reference to his dictionary.

Opportunity to Eat

With reference to the article in the Nov. 24 Colonist, "Keep out N.Z. Lamb," I think that the government has responsibilities to the consumers (who are also taxpayers) to give them an opportunity to eat.

It seems to me that if our sheep farmers cannot compete with New Zealand (who have the freight to consider added to their prices) they either have not the know-how or wish to make a fortune quickly.

If the farmers and butchers say they are not making fortunes, I would suggest that the government make every effort to find out where the leakage is between producer and consumer.

P. RAYNER.

At Expense of Freedom

Are proponents of fluoridation under the impression that adding fluorine to our water supply is something like adding chlorine? Nothing could be more wrong. Chlorine is a purifying agent. Fluorine would be added to our water to act as a medicine—a so-called deterrent to decay in the teeth of children.

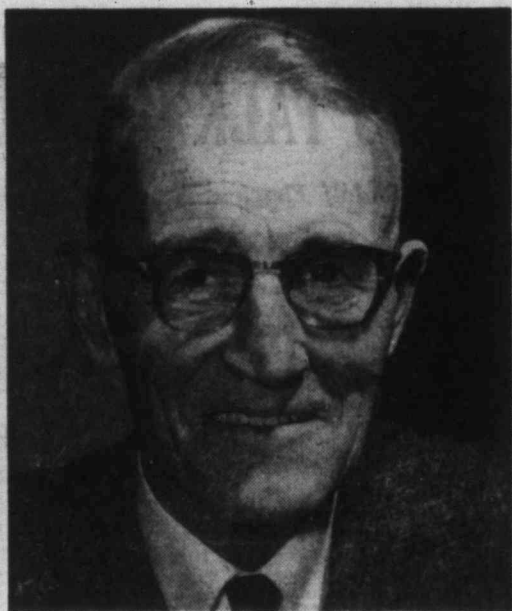

All our water supply would be fluoridated. Yet only about 1 per cent is used for drinking purposes. Not more than one-seventh of the part drunk is consumed by young children. It would appear that 99 per cent of the cost of fluoridation goes down the drain.

All parents wish to ensure that their children have good teeth, but must it be done at the expense of freedom of individual choice? At a cost of 24 cents per child per year tablets containing the recommended daily dose could be dispensed to those desiring them. It must be said here that proper feeding of children (a minimum of white sugar and its products) has had a proven excellent effect on the teeth.

Policy Acquires Character

When Canada Speaks Whole World Listens

By PHILIP SYKES

When 64-year-old Howard Green lands in Paris on Dec. 13 for the NATO council meeting that overlaps the Big Three's "western summit" diplomatic heads will turn. He will be noticed.

For two months of intensive diplomacy by the man who likes to be called Canada's "foreign minister" have made it impossible for him—or Canada—to be ignored.

Recapitulate the issues that have dominated world politics in these months—and you'll find not one in which Canada has had no voice.

On Sept. 24, Howard Green, in his first major speech before the UN General Assembly, called for a dynamic drive to shut down the refugee camps of Europe. He climaxed it with a dramatic offer to admit 100 tubercular people from those camps to Canada.

On Oct. 7 Green detailed to the world a Canadian plan for a worldwide study of the effects on humanity of deadly radiation—a plan that has been adopted without opposition by the United Nations.

On Oct. 21 he let it be known that Canadian dollars would back the program.

On Oct. 23, the career diplomats who work under Green played a key role in lobbying support for a historic resolution—when Russia joined the West in a declaration on disarmament.

Then, Green hustled off to Europe. He stiffened the morale of the NATO permanent council with a plea for closer teamwork.

work. He studied the baffling complex of Europe's rival trade groups, bluntly asked President de Gaulle to call off his bomb test, talked summitry with Macmillan, strategy with NATO's Norstad. Back in Ottawa on Nov. 4, he shook the platitude-mongers of the West with a flat declaration of his independence.

Canada was backing Communist Poland for a seat on the UN Security Council—it seemed logical to Canada to be a natural step after Camp David. If the U.S. and Britain were backing rival Turkey, so what?

"We won't have our arm twisted by anybody," snapped Green.

On Nov. 11, he made a public statement of Canada's "strong opposition" to the French A-bomb test.

On Nov. 16, he put into words what many Western diplomats had thought but hesitated to say. He asked for a thoroughgoing UN debate on the victimized youth of Hungary—a request that came to fruition in the steering committee last week.

What has all this activity achieved?

It has made Green a man to be listened to in world councils because Canadian policy-making has acquired a character—tough, independent, co-operative and constructive.

Dead Sea Scrolls Controversy

Was There More Than One Messiah?

By ARYE WALLENSTEIN
From Jerusalem

A restoration of one of the Dead Sea Scrolls that would attribute to a pre-Christian desert sect the Christian belief in a single Messiah—a Son of God—has been disputed by Dr. Yigael Yadin, one of Israel's leading scholars in the field of Dead Sea literature.

The scroll in question is described as "one of the most tantalizing of the whole Qumran literature," probably because it is believed to contain the only reference to a Christ-like Redeemer begotten by God.

Two gaps and a blurred word constitute the point of contention between Dr. Yadin and other scholars about the reading of the age-beaten leather scroll, preserved for 20 centuries in one of the Qumran caves near the Dead Sea until its discovery with the other pre-Christian writings after the Second World War.

The scroll, known to scholars as "1WSA," deals with a ceremonial to be observed on Messianic days. Eminent scholars such as M. D. Barthelemy and Frank Cross of Chicago have filled the gaps and deciphered the blurred word to make the texts refer to a single Messiah and to the whole ceremony being dependent upon the begetting of THE Messiah by God.

On the other hand, Dr. Yadin's alternative restoration of the gaps and blur make the disputed passage refer not to one Messiah but to two. He argues that his reading of the ancient original Hebrew, unlike those of Barthelemy and Cross, is not in contradiction to the known beliefs and creeds of the Dead Sea sect, whose writings repeatedly refer both to a priestly Messiah and to a lay Messiah.

This controversy serves as an illustration of the minute examination to which the Dead Sea Scrolls are being submitted.

In Jerusalem, two groups of scholars are studying the scrolls.

One group, in the Jordanian part of the divided city, is an international team headed by Pere Roland de Vaux, a French Dominican priest, who supervises the publication of the fragments of scrolls and leads the periodic expeditions to the Qumran ruins. Other noted scholars of the team are the Polish-born Father Joseph Milik and Cross, who is a Presbyterian.

Across the border is the Israeli group of scholars in the Hebrew University to whom the scrolls are a national treasure. Communication between the two groups is prevented because of the continuing hostility between Jordan and Israel.

Only seven scrolls, but perhaps some of the best preserved, now are in the hands of Israeli scholars.

These comprise two Isaiah scrolls, the Habakkuk Commentary, the Thanksgiving Hymns, the War of the Sons of Light against the Sons of Darkness, the Manual of Discipline and the Genesis Apocryphon.

All have been published in full except a part of the complete scrolls are due for publication. These are said to be a Book of Psalms, an apocryphal Book of the New Jerusalem and an Aramaic translation of the Book of Job.

While the scrolls now in Israel were discovered in 1947, the region of the Dead Sea has since yielded additional treasures, most of which are in the Jordanian side of Jerusalem. As yet, only a small fraction of the many thousands of fragments of scroll have been published. Reports indicate that at least three almost-

B.C. Bonds Unpopular On Market

By HARRY YOUNG Colonist Business Editor

The other day the city of Victoria sold $70,000 of serial debentures for a net cost to them of 6.44 per cent. Eight other bids were made.

About the same time B.C. called for tenders for $3,514,000 worth of serial debentures for a wide assortment of local purposes.

Despite the fact that these bonds were guaranteed by the province, there was only one unconditional bid, and as it worked out at a cost of about 6.8 per cent, it was turned down.

On the face of it, it seems remarkable that a trifling issue by the City of Victoria should raise a tender that is nearly half a point better than bid for fully-guaranteed provincial bonds.

When Mr. Bennett wiped out the provincial direct debt, it was his claim that he would be able to procure for his direct responsibilities such a splendid credit situation that provincially guaranteed borrowers would obtain a rate superior to anything they were likely to get under other circumstances.

However, dealers do not appear to be so happy as Mr. Bennett thought they would be about his "contingent liabilities."

The objection to B.C.'s offering of $3,514,000 was that the bonds were so involved and complicated, that underwriters shied away from them on the ground that they would be extremely awkward to sell.

Very Difficult to Sell

Some of the items were $160,000 for Golden Hospital; $33,000 for Arden; $26,000 for Fulford Harbor water works; $50,000 for Northfield Fire Protection District, as well as various municipal borrowings for Burns Lake, North Kamloops, Lake Cowichan, Taylor and Warfield.

One dealer put it this way, "It is not that we think the City of Victoria is a better risk than the various bonds guaranteed by the province, but it is very difficult to sell serial bonds for little-known districts, except to institutions specializing in that sort of paper."

The objection to purchasing bonds of Shuswap, Cherry Creek, Savona, South Peace or Skeena is that even with the provincial guarantee there would be practically no open market for trading such securities.

The underwriting opinion is that if this polyglot parcel of $3,514,000 of serial bonds had been issued in one lot under the label of Province of British Columbia they would have met a ready market and certainly a better rate than that paid to the City of Victoria.

But the acceptance of a local financing into the direct debt of the province is just what Mr. Bennett has been most determined to avoid.

Meantime Mr. Bennett is going to find it hard to explain to the local authorities that his guarantee system of selling their bonds is working out according to expectations.

New Industry for B.C.?

The B.C. Research Council has selected the manufacture of polyethylene and polypropylene as a possible new industry for British Columbia.

John W. Gouge has prepared for the council a review of the chances of setting up B.C. plants for the production of what he describes as "the largest and fastest-growing of all plastic materials."

Canada imports substantial quantities of polyethylene from the United States, although there are four plants manufacturing it in Canada—two at Sarnia and one each at Edmonton and Montreal.

Mr. Gouge believes that a Vancouver plastic manufacturing plant might prove very profitable.

Polyethylene is produced usually by processing of natural gas or oil, and the raw materials for the job are available in the Vancouver oil refinery area.

City Hotels Half Full

The Victoria Hotel Association has come up with the astonishing report that during the past two years its members have been operating at just slightly over half occupancy.

Members of the association are Churchill Hotel, Dominion Hotel, Douglas Hotel, Empress Hotel, James Bay Hotel, Royal Olympic Hotel and Strathcona Hotel, with a combined total of 1,076 rooms.

Keith Olson, association president, says that in the 12 months ending Sept. 30, 1959, the average daily occupancy of these rooms was 53.3 per cent, and during the tourist season from June to September the average was only 71.53 per cent.

No Blame Portioned

The sum asked, according to the hotel association, is only half of one per cent of the estimated $106,000,000 that comes into the province every year through the tourist industry.

The association does not attempt to apportion blame for dwindling volume of business done by its members although it mentions overbuilt accommodation and the trend to camping out.

At the same time one must wonder if additional advertising is the main requirement for the development of Victoria as a year-round tourist mecca.

Most of the attractions this city has to offer are those that can be enjoyed only when the weather is fair and friendly.

Even the staunchest admirer of the Victoria climate has to agree that the prize attractions such as fishing, golfing, the Buchart Gardens and sightseeing are of dubious appeal on a wet, stormy winter's day.

Apart from these, what has the city to offer the tourist in inclement weather?

Not every tourist will stay indefinitely around these parts to see the Provincial Museum, the Art Gallery, the Crystal pool, sundry movie houses and cocktail lounges.

The truth is that downtown hotels are mainly built for commercial business, and whether the tourist trade disagrees or not, the loss of such industries as Sidney Roofing has delivered a sorry blow to the economy of the district.

The real effects of this departure are now being felt.

Big Unions Call Strike

PARIS (Reuters)—France's three main trade union federations—Catholic, Communist and Socialist—have ordered a 24-hour strike starting Wednesday of civil servants and public service workers.

In simultaneous statements, the three federations protested the "obstinacy of the government in refusing to grant new funds to end the lag in civil servants' salaries and pensions."

Some 13,200 tons of railway spikes were produced in Canada in 1958, a 7 per cent increase over 1957.

'Beaver' Back from Battles

Back from a season of racing in England is T. A. Beaver's green-and-white Twin Cam MG. Two of the four team members are also back—Al Finney, left, one of the drivers, and Maurice Ford, mechanic and occasional driver. Don Wells and Alex James are still overseas. Well-tried MG may race in Pacific Northwest next season.

The Car Corner

Sporty Little Nipper Is a Prinz of Cars

By J. T. JONES

If you're sportily inclined and haven't much money, the NSU Prinz deserves more than a passing look. Driving this little nipper is quite an experience.

Small though it is on the outside, the Prinz devotes its interior room to the comfort of its front-seat riders, who fare very well. The back seat makes no pretence at being full-size; it's good and roomy for children, passable for one adult, and tolerable for two.

NO TIN TOY

This is no tin toy—it's a beautiful job of engineering, sturdily built and neatly finished. And economical—hoo boy! I won't make any promises, but 55 miles to the gallon would be no surprise at all.

The works of the Prinz are an engineer's delight: air-cooled rear engine with single overhead camshaft; all-synchromized four-speed gearbox; independent suspension on all four wheels; rack-and-pinion steering; finned, light-alloy brake drums with steel liners; unit-construction body.

UNUSUAL FEATURE

The engine is a 32-cubic-inch, 24-horsepower twin with an unusual feature—the camshaft, instead of being driven by gears or a chain, is turned by a connecting rod that links matched eccentric discs on the camshaft and on a spur gear run by the crankshaft. The result is a combination of simplicity and silence.

Valves are inclined and operated by short rocker arms, an efficient setup.

NSU offers a 36-horsepower version of this engine at extra cost, and it must make the Prinz quite a bear. There's also a rakish sports car in the line, selling for less than many small sedans.

TWO MODELS

(I'd better make clear here that there are two models of the regular Prinz, the Prinz I and the Prinz II, one standard and one de luxe. I drove the II, and would recommend the extra expenditure on the basis of a more pleasant transmission and better bumpers alone.)

Construction of the bodies of both is light and tight—the Prinz II weighs in at 1,113 pounds with a full load of gasoline. This means that even 24 horses give it brisk performance.

It also means something more important: the brakes are enormous for the amount of work they have to do on a car so light, and with their excellent cooling they are right up to the standards expected of racing cars. They will positively not fade under the toughest use this car could give them.

Orange Tree Thrives Deep in Gold Mine

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (CP)—The apple tree that grew for 17 years at the 3,150-foot level of the Sylvanite Gold Mine here died this summer, but a Florida orange tree still flourishes in the 70-degree temperature deep in the mine.

Both were grown from seeds by Leo St. Onge, now a retired miner.

Without sunshine, neither produced fruit. Seasons were ignored with leaves sprouting and falling at will.

Stately Setting Set For Tower of London

LONDON (AP)—A $70,000, 000 plan to provide a more stately setting for the Tower of London, was announced Friday.

Actually the historical landmark overlooking the Thames River is a cluster of about a dozen towers.

The plan was announced by designers of two municipal bodies, the corporation of the old city of London, in which the tower is situated, and the London county council.

MORE ACCESSIBLE

The idea is to make the tower, where the crown jewels are housed, more accessible to tourists.

Several busy streets in the vicinity would be closed and automobiles barred from them.

EASY APPROACH

Wide ramps would prove an easy approach to tower hill.

Terraces and gardens would give new backgrounds for the tower itself as well as for the monuments of Trinity Square, the Customs House and All Hallows Church.

There is extensive provision for playgrounds, office buildings and shops.

LET'S TALK

By Rudolf Flesch

How large is your dog's vocabulary? I don't mean his barking vocabulary, of course. I mean his listening vocabulary—the number of English words he can distinguish.

Mr. Richard Katz, the German author of "Solitary Life" (Reynal), says that almost all dogs understand the following seven words: "eat," "walk," "sugar," "lie down," "foot," "good boy" and "ugh."

I have made the necessary experiments with our black poodle Babette and think that Mr. Katz is right—with minor variations. (Babette knows "walk," "down," "here," "bad," "supper," and "good girl.") However, all of that is child's play—or puppy's play, I should say. Mr. Katz, who was the bearded owner of two Sealyham terriers while he was writing his book, has far more astonishing data to offer. He maintains that his male Sealyham, Rio, knew 21 words.

Unfortunately, Mr. Katz doesn't give a complete list of those 21 words. Those he does give us are the following, in addition to the basic vocabulary of seven words listed above:

Knows Enemy's Name

"Teddy." (The name of Rio's worst enemy, a sheep dog. At the sound of "Teddy" Rio rushed to the door, with his coat bristling.)

"Lolo." (Another enemy dog. Same reaction.)

"Rex." (Another enemy dog.)

"Mimi." (An enemy cat.)

"Bath." (When Rio heard that word he ran off to hide.)

"Chocolate." (Ah!)

"Hex." (The German word for "witch.") This was the name of the neighbor's dog, with whom Rio was in love. At the sound of "Hex," he moaned longingly. Mr. Katz swears that Rio could clearly distinguish between "Hex" and "Rex."

In collaboration, he quotes another student of such matters whose dog went wild when his master was about to go out for a walk, but lay down sadly when he said, "I am going to church." He did not do this, however, when his master said "lurch" or "birch" or "search."

Mr. Katz' other dog, the female Sealyham, Bamba, didn't quite match Rio's record. Her vocabulary was only 19 words. Some of them were also in Rio's vocabulary, some others were not. For instance, she knew her puppies by name, and responded to "dog biscuits" (which Rio disliked) and "beg" (which Rio considered undignified).

Well, there you are. Right now, I am conducting some further experiments with Babette, but am not ready yet to report my findings.

Of course I know anyway that her IQ is terrific.

New Mill Boosts Profits

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. boosted its profit more than four fold in the year ended Sept. 30, the company reported Saturday.

Net profit was listed as $3,224,503 or 94 cents a share compared with $718,943 or 21 cents a share in the 1958 fiscal year. The increase was credited on production from a new kraft pulp mill at Crofton, and an increased demand for pulp and lumber products.

Flu to Blame?

LONDON (Reuters)—Influenza contracted by expectant mothers may be responsible for the birth of many deformed children, a leading British medical journal reported today.

Britain Lends India Millions

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain will lend India a further £19,000,000 ($50,730,000) under an agreement signed in London this week.

The loan forms part of a joint program of assistance to India agreed upon in Washington by the United States, Canada, West Germany, Japan and Britain last March under international bank auspices.

'Refits' Close Busy Sky Year

The tricky job of taking three helicopters apart and putting them together again has begun for Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd.

The machines, along with four leased craft, have flown a total of more than 2,500 hours—104 days—during the summer from southern British Columbia to Aklavik in the Northwest Territory.

"We had a record flying-hour year," operations manager Robert Taylor said yesterday, "but we have to strip them clean to assure an accident-free season come spring." Mr. Taylor along with a staff of helicopter mechanics was trained by Bell Aircraft Co.

Minor repairs and check-overs are given each machine in the field during the summer, as they are needed. This summer's work entailed oil surveys, geological exploration, forest inventory and hydro surveys in most sections of western Canada.

All overhauls will be done in the company hangar at Patricia Bay Airport.

Paint is also removed from the machines to aid inspectors in checking for structural weaknesses, he said. Each machine is valued at more than $30,000.

ANASTAS MIKOYAN... cheery adios

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—

Anastas Mikoyan, Russia's busiest travelling salesman, yesterday ended a Mexican tour that stressed Soviet friendship against Yankee "imperialism" across the border.

Observers agreed that in 10 short days the first deputy premier, who doubles as Russia's trade expert, had sowed the seeds that could flower into greater Mexican popular acceptance of Russia and more opposition to the United States.

Mikoyan flew home with a cheery "adios" from the steps of his Russian airliner without any concrete trade agreements.

He said the main purpose of his tour had been to open the Soviet industrial and agricultural exhibition in Mexico City.

A Mexican who stopped in amazement before the dazzling

Soviet housing exhibit said,

"We didn't know Soviet workers lived so well."

"Neither did I," replied the Russian attendant.

Kiwanis Villagers Await Neighbors

James and Florence Emery sat in their comfortable living room, looked out over their well-kept lawn, and smiled the smiles of absolute contentment.

Does BLADDER IRRITATION MAKE YOU NERVOUS?

Thousands are now discovering how much stronger and better they can feel by combating ordinary kidney or bladder irritations. These irritations often occur after 35, and may make you tense and nervous from too frequent, burning or itching urination both day and night. Secondly, you may lose sleep and suffer from headaches, backache and feel old, tired, depressed. In such irritation, CISTEX usually brings fast, relaxing comfort by curbing irritating germs in strong, acid urine and by giving analgesic pain relief. Safe for young or old. CISTEX at drugists. Feel better fast.

Mr. Emery is 79, his wife, 69. Their home, containing everything necessary to make life comfortable for the aged, is one of 50 units at Kiwanis Village. As Mr. Emery explained to visitors, "We are very, very lucky."

NO DRAFTS

"I don't think there is another place in Canada as good as this for the aged," he continued. "There are no drafts, no need to be carting wood for the fire, or any other inconveniences. They've put every mortal thing in here for us. It couldn't be better for old people."

It is especially convenient at Kiwanis Village for Mr. Emery, a cripple who must use a wheelchair to get from place to place. With no stairs in the units, his task is that much easier.

BIG JOB

It's a big undertaking, this Kiwanis Village. It has taken seven years of hard work and $350,000 to put the establishment in its present modern, immaculate state. But it isn't enough.

Tuesday night at 6.30, Kiwanis canvassers take their case to the public in their annual porch light campaign for funds. In years past, the drive has helped build the present village. This time the objective is the construction of Kiwanis Villa.

38 COTTAGES

The villa, 38 additional cottages adjacent to the village, will be used to house from 75 to 100 elderly citizens. To be built at a cost of $500,000, it will be used primarily to house single people. Kiwanis Village is made up mostly of elderly couples, and the new unit will give the Kiwanis project the flexibility needed to do a thorough job.

The Emerys were talking over the prospect of more new neighbors, and were delighted with the idea.

"We've been here since December, 1954," Mr. Emery said. "The lot where the villa will be looks bad now, but it will grow into something wonderful just as we have watched this village grow. It's a wonderful, wonderful thing."

Pope Asks Catholics For Aid

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Pope has urged Roman Catholics everywhere to aid the mission activities of their church.

The 78-year-old pontiff made his plea in an encyclical letter issued to bishops Saturday on the anniversary of a similar encyclical mission appeal made 41 years ago by Pope Benedict XV.

HAVANA (AP)—About 500,000 Cuban Roman Catholics assembled for a rally Saturday night, 24 hours after Prime Minister Fidel Castro has accused his foes of trying to use the meeting to turn the church against him. The Pope is to address the meeting by radio.

Eight Referendums Authorized

School Borrowings At Market's Mercy

Education Minister Leslie Peterson said yesterday his department has authorized eight school districts to seek approval of owner-electors to borrow $5,893,688 for school construction.

But, he explained, because of the tight money situation, school boards are being asked to defer the submission of referendums except in the case of extreme emergency.

"Even if the owner-electors assent, neither the school boards nor my department can be assured of the availability of funds on the bond market, or temporary bank borrowings, to enable construction to proceed.

None of the school building referendums are slated for Vancouver Island.

"This present tight money situation, adversely affecting the construction of schools as it does, and seriously affecting much needed winter employment, is of grave concern to me," Mr. Peterson said.

Senators Unveil Payrolls

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators' payrolls, long cloaked in secrecy, will be made public Monday.

The name, job title, and salary of each employee of individual senators will be published under the terms of a resolution adopted by the Senate last summer.

The resolution requires the Senate secretary to compile the information and to make it available to the public every three months.

The payrolls of House members are open to public inspection, and news stories earlier this year about House members with relatives on their payrolls led to demands that similar information be made public about senators.

Mao Challenged At China's Top?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Intelligence reports reaching here from inside Red China debunk the idea that Mao-Tse-tung is the unchallenged master of 650,000,000 Chinese.

The reports confirm previous fragmentary evidence of failures, popular resistance and desperate policy shifts in the first year of Mao's peasant communes. These are the foundation of the Communist leader's mass mobilization of China's agricultural manpower on which Mao has staked his reputation.

CHERISHED DOCTRINES
The reports show that opposition in the Communist party to the extremes of both the commune and "great leap forward" industrialization drives became so bold and widespread last summer that Mao was forced to repudiate several cherished doctrines.

At the crucial August party meeting, he was able to muster a counter-attack against Conservatives and doubters, who were denounced en masse as "bourgeois rightists," opportunists and tools of the imperialists.

POSITION WEAKENED
But in winning renewed endorsement for the communes, Mao incurred an obligation to the party left-wing which may weaken his position.

In the Soviet Union, the losers in a vital ideological struggle would have been candidates for banishment or liquidation. This has not been the pattern in the Chinese Communist movement. But some experts here insist that a big purge is inevitable in Red China.

Sale of Liquor in Grocery Stores Idea Gets Mixed Reception in City

A proposal to change provincial liquor laws and allow the sale of beer and wines in grocery stores has met with mixed reaction from city grocers.

One of a list of sweeping changes called for recently by the Vancouver Tourist Association, the proposal drew about equal numbers of yes and no answers in a survey here. No matter which way they thought, all those contacted were emphatic in their opinions.

"I think the tourist business should keep its nose out of the grocery business," said Bill Okell, proprietor of Langford Lake Store and one of those most violently opposed to the plan.

"I'm not against relaxing the liquor laws, and I wouldn't mind bonded stores selling liquor as they do in California, but let them leave the grocers out of it."

"Why should we be asked to lower the standards of community life by stocking it where everyone from two to 80 comes in to buy things? There would be a credit problem, and a juvenile problem."

"If it can be sold as just another grocery item, I'm for it," said J. D. Maloney, of The Busy Bee Store, 1134 Hillside, "but if it is to be under the Liquor Control Board, no!"

"We would have to check ages and hours, and with home deliveries it just couldn't be done."

"Definitely not," was the reply of Mrs. Ellen McWilliams of Mac's Marigold Store, 675 Marigold. "There are enough places where they can get it now as it is."

The "yes" side of the story was told by Jimmie Little from his store at 2017 Quadra Street.

"It's the best news yet. How soon can we have it?" he asked.

"I'd run it in a special section of the store that could be locked up at certain hours. I don't think there would be a juvenile problem, because no level-headed businessman is going to risk losing his licence by selling to them."

"They're getting it somewhere now, anyway. At least this way we would have some control over it."

"I was born in a pub," he added, and it didn't do me any harm."

"Yes. More than yes," opined P. W. Willis of Up-lands Grocery, 2491 Cadboro Bay Road. "It will bring more people into the stores, and you have to look at it more or less from the selfish point of view."

"But there would have to be a condition. Juveniles would be required to show proof of age, and storekeepers would have to face loss of licence after two convictions on selling to minors. That way it would work."

Harassment of U.S. Troops

Congressman, Ambassador Continue Angry Exchange

Better Re-examine Policies Philippine Envoy Advises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Phil Weaver (R-Neb.), who has accused the Philippine government of condoning harassment of U.S. servicemen, suggested yesterday that Ambassador Carlos P. Romulo return to Manila for a re-examination of Philippine-American relations.

Touist Group:

Sunday Beer Mistake

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver Tourist Association official said Saturday his association definitely doesn't want beer parlors open on Sundays. It just wants beer and wine served with meals.

Jack Melville was quoted as saying a brief prepared by the association asked the provincial government to allow beer parlors to remain open on Sundays, among other changes in the Liquor Act.

He said his original statement was misunderstood.

Mr. Melville said the proposed liquor revisions approved by association directors must still be studied in committee.

Romulo replied immediately with a suggestion that the United States take another look at its foreign policies for an explanation of recent anti-American incidents in Cuba, Panama and Tokyo.

"I was in the Philippines recently and I do not have to be told by fly-by-night visitors the conditions in my homeland," the envoy said.

The exchange coincided with reports from U.S. installation near Manila that armed Filipinos had infiltrated a restricted area and trussed up an air force sentry.

Weaver and Romulo have been trading barbs since the Congressman charged earlier this week that a "graft-ridden" Philippine government had been condoning mass theft of U.S. property and harassment of military personnel.

Romulo charged that the Congressman was spreading lies about the Philippine government. Weaver shot back that the ambassador was demonstrating a "do-nothing, say-nothing" attitude.

This prompted still another statement by Romulo who suggested that the United States—not the Philippines—should re-examine its policies in view of what "is currently happening in Cuba, Panama and Tokyo." There have been anti-American demonstrations in all these nations.

Missing Son's Parents Offer Reward

The parents of a 32-year-old man missing from his home since Nov. 29 offered a reward of $100 last night for information about his whereabouts.

Mrs. Edna Clifford, 1010 Balmoral, said her husband has gone up-Island this weekend in an attempt to find some clue to their son's present location.

George Clifford is six feet tall, about 160 pounds and has fair hair. He was wearing a grey topcoat when last seen.

Spare Controls Networks' Plea

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Broadcasting Company told the public in newspaper advertisements Saturday that recent television quiz show scandals are no cause for drastic measures against the broadcasting industry.

The network repeated a previous pledge that it will guarantee the integrity of all its programs in the future.

It said that reprehensible conduct of a few individuals was no reason for such a drastic measure as government control.

Too Poor to Pay Tax

Half B.C. Doctors 'Struggle to Live'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver paper quotes an unidentified Vancouver doctor as saying almost half the physicians and surgeons in British Columbia did not make enough money last year to pay income tax.

"Many have to struggle to make a bare living," the newspaper quoted him as saying. "Many are so deeply in debt that their credit has been cut off."

The paper said the doctor, who insisted on anonymity, blamed the financial situation on the opinion that medicine in B.C., and especially in Vancouver, is an over-crowded field.

Recent figures showed Vancouver with one doctor for every 568 persons. The rest of B.C. had one doctor for 1,132 persons.

Medals Restruck For Numismatists

New, 47-year-old medals were presented to about 100 members of the Victoria Numismatic Society at the group's annual dinner last night.

The medals are "restruck" of the Trail Bridge medal, made from the original dies.

The original medals were issued in 1912, at the opening of the Trail bridge, which was built by the provincial government. They are not available any more for collectors.

Only about 100 of the new-old medals were restruck for the society's annual dinner. They were made in aluminum. Guest speaker was Cmdr. George Gray, RCN, who told "Interesting Stories On Coins."

Democrats May Split Over Support for Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conference of congressional leaders with President Eisenhower Monday may preface a Democratic split over support of administration foreign policies.

Eisenhower obviously hopes to win from House speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.), Senate majority leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) and other congressional Democrats, advance approval of the good-will crusade he is expected to pursue on his forthcoming trip to 11 non-communist countries.

If this can be accomplished, it would be likely to counter to some extent the sharp condemnation of the administration's international policies expected at the democratic advisory council meeting this week, shortly after Eisenhower's departure.

Balloonists Aloft To 'Snap' Venus

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Two balloonists, aloft to study the planet Venus, drifted over Nebraska at nearly 80,000 feet late Saturday sealed in a gondola attached to a huge plastic balloon.

Veteran navy balloon pilot Cmdr. Malcolm Ross and Scientist Charles B. Moore carried with them on the scheduled 24-hour flight a powerful telescope to view and photograph the planet's atmosphere from about 81,000 feet.

Navy tracking crews following the balloon said the trajectory apparently would carry the big plastic bag to the St. Louis, Mo. area. Earlier it was thought the balloon would land near Lafayette, Ind., but northerly winds altered the course.

Seattle Police Link Arsenic and Old Goo

SEATTLE (AP) — Police speculated Saturday that the person responsible for arsenic poisoning of 11 city employees Monday was the same one who squirted goo in the courthouse locks.

The lock-sticking incident occurred the weekend of Nov. 15 when someone squirted a heavy substance into all 20 exterior locks of the County-City Building. The goo hardened and each lock had to be removed and cleaned.

Although unable to give comparison figures for the same week last year, building inspectors agreed that value of permits issued in dollars was much higher than last year.

Largest construction project is an apartment project in Saanich consisting of seven buildings, each containing 16 suites to be built at 3498 Lavat. The job is valued at $400,000.

Also in Saanich, permits were issued for 14 new houses valued at a total of $130,000, a medical dental building valued at $8,000 and alteration permits valued at $5,000.

A Saanich building official said "by the end of the month a sharp increase in the rate of building should be noted over previous months."

In Esquimalt construction began on a $162,000 marine launching ways at Yarrow's Ltd.

Contractor J. A. Pollard said the project should be completed in four or five months. During peak construction 25 to 30 men will be employed, he said.

Other permits in Esquimalt totalling $3,200 were issued for a basement suite and minor alterations.

In Oak Bay four house permits were issued along with six for garages and minor alterations, totalling $60,000.

Alf's House Held Up By Old Wallpaper!

LONDON (TNS)—Alf Smith, 38, a London gas-fitter, decided yesterday to paper his kitchen. When he started to peel off the old wallpaper some plaster came away, too. Then part of the wall fell out, the door fell off, the roof fell in and the chimney collapsed into the garden.

When Alf climbed out, covered with plaster but unhurt, he had a new respect for wallpaper. "It must have been just paper holding up that corner of the house," he marvelled.

NHA Ceiling on Mortgages Cuts Private Loans Source

OTTAWA (CP)—The pace of new home construction picked up in October, apparently under the impetus of direct mortgage lending by the government in late summer and early fall.

Builders started work on 10,667 housing units in the month, compared with 9,775 in September, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation said last week in a report covering communities of over 5,000 population.

The total was down some 16 per cent, however, from the 12,678 construction starts in October last year.

The total of new homes started in the first 10 months of the year was still well below last year at 87,224 compared with 101,257.

Direct mortgage lending by the federal government was

The six per cent ceiling on interest for NHA loans may be removed early in 1960 in order to make the loans more attractive to private investors.

National Builder Magazine reports that the National Home Builders Association and other building industry groups have asked the federal government to make the move. It would increase the carrying charges on new NHA mortgages, but draw in more money, they believe.

Loss of Millions

Condensation Can Be Costly

Excessive condensation in Canadian homes causes millions of dollars worth of needless damage each year, according to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Condensation damage usually centres around wooden structural parts of a home, untreated nails and screws, some parts of the plumbing system, paint and insulation.

It is caused by excessive moisture in the air. Condensation begins when some 15 to 20 lbs of water gets into the air of the average home, and the living habits of a family of four can easily put 33 pounds of water in the air in a single day.

EVEN BREATHING

Cooking meals for four will put four pounds of water into the air, washing a floor will add more than two pounds, a 10-pound washing will add 10 pounds, each shower will add half a pound and just one person breathing will add three pounds.

Aside from the water which comes from the living habits of a home's occupants, more is added if there is no concrete-floored basement and still more from the heating system.

COOL WINDOWS

Further moisture comes when the warm air inside the house comes in contact with windows cooled by the cold air outside.

Hardwood floors can be seriously damaged if the condensation formed on windows runs down to floor-level, and walls and window sills can be damaged simultaneously.

Condensation which creeps into mortar joints in masonry walls can freeze, then destroy the mortar when it thaws out.

ADJUST HABITS

First, the amount of water added to the air can be reduced by an adjustment of living habits.

A person taking a shower adds twice as much water to the air as a person taking a bath.

Remedy Easy, Cheap

By taking fewer showers, or by spacing baths so fewer occupants bathe on the same day, the water content of the air can be brought below the danger level.

OPEN WINDOWS

Where a home is not equipped with exhaust fans which will move moist air outside, windows should be opened occasionally, even during the winter months, and especially on days when it is known that the inside moisture content is high.

Since warm inside air can contain five times as much water as outside air on a cold day, moist air will move out of the house rapidly enough through open windows to prevent chilling of the home to an uncomfortable degree.

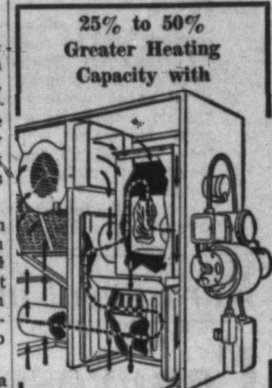

Humidifiers attached to a heating system are sometimes responsible for excessive moisture, and where cost is not a major factor, dehumidifiers can prevent condensation.

AIR THE ROOM

When a floor is scrubbed it is wise to leave the doors to that room closed for a short time and to open the windows.

But, in curbing sources of moisture a word of caution—a certain amount of moisture is needed for health and comfort, and too little can also cause home damage.

The Woman's Angle

Time to Think Of Christmas

By BETTIE BRADLEY

This is the season when austere good taste gives way to sentimentality. We over-decorate our homes; we indulge our appetites. The rest of the year is time enough to hew to the rules of decorating and dieting.

Children's talents should play a part in decorations. A shaky angel—made by a little girl—will have more meaning atop the Christmas tree than the most expensive angel from a store.

BUILD SNOWMAN

Even a tiny child can help make a big snowman. Start with a huge sheet of cardboard and cut out the shape of the snowman. Now coat the entire sheet with home made paste (flour and water). Next, fluff up layers of cotton batting and completely cover the piece of cardboard.

Dress the snowman with a gay scarf around his waist. His eyes, nose, and mouth can be fashioned from pieces of colored construction paper or from bits of colored wool from bits of colored wool.

PLACE MATS

An older child can help you make Christmas place mats. With a beautiful Christmas paper, some cardboard and paste you can make a set of mats that can be used for many years.

Cut your cardboard to size and, angle the corners. Next, cut your Christmas paper about one inch bigger than the cardboard forms. Paste the paper on the cardboard and lap the extra one inch over the back. Finally, cut pieces of plain white paper about one-half inch smaller than the mats and paste the plain paper on the back. This eliminates warping. Leave them for a day until the paste is thoroughly dry, and then coat your place mats with a clear varnish or shellac.

Five-Day Festival

Now Official:
Hawaii No. 50

HONOLULU (UPI) — The 50th state, its famed beach resorts overflowing with tourists and visiting dignitaries, celebrated its first admission day on Friday.

Hawaii's Governor William F. Quinn, as grand marshal, led the biggest parade in island history along a three-mile route on Ala Moana Boulevard from Waikiki to downtown Honolulu.

Islanders were enjoying a five-day celebration that winds up Monday.

Madam Pele, the volcano goddess, added her bit when Milauea Iki crater on the island of Hawaii blew up again with a 16-hour show of nature's fireworks.

The 40-year-old governor, first to hold the post by election instead of appointment, led a parade that included 2,500 men in the military sections alone.

BANDS, FLOATS

There were bands from the army, navy, coast guard, marine corps, air force, national guard and reserves. Twelve floats displayed the history and culture of the islands and there were floats or entries representing each of the other 49 states.

The Royal Hawaiian Band, long a feature of steamship arrivals, and the Aloha Week royal court in colorful Hawaiian costumes were other parade features.

It was estimated 100,000 persons lined the parade route.

Sweden Hit
By Epidemic

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Swedish doctors believe scarlet fever in Sweden is increasing to such a degree that it can now be called an epidemic. More than 19,000 cases are expected to be reported by the end of the year, triple the normal rate.

STERNWHEELER CASCA ON YUKON RIVER

Yukon Dusts Off History to Mine
Tourist Gold in Rush of 1960Sternwheeler May Ply
North's River of Riches

OTTAWA (UPI) — The aura of the Klondike gold rush of the 1890s is going to be recreated for American and other tourists wending their way through the Yukon to Alaska.

As a start, the federal government has bought four old sternwheelers which were consigned to the ways at Whitehorse, capital of the Yukon, when river travel became too expensive following the Second World War.

Northern Affairs Minister Alvin Hamilton said one of the old white vessels, bearing such gold rush names as the "Klondike" and the "Caska," will be restored and made into a museum—probably next year.

He said he would like to interest some businessmen into outfitting one of the other vessels and running tours up and down the Yukon River. He visualized trips through Lake Lebarge, on whose "Marge" the legendary Sam McGee was cremated, and down to Carmacks, named after the co-discoverer of the Klondike rush. He added that he would like to see "gold rush types" manning the vessel.

Airline's Project Failed

Hamilton's enthusiasm for the project is not dimmed by the fact Canadian Pacific Airlines several years ago leased one of the sternwheelers from the White Pass and Yukon Railway and conducted tours, but gave up the project after one season.

The minister feels that this time the tours would be part of a larger project, the details of which, he said, would be announced after Christmas.

Among other proposed features would be the establishment of the first national park in the Yukon.

Tours would also be organized on the White Pass and Yukon Railway, the narrow gauge line which follows the "trail of '98" from Skagway on the Pacific to Whitehorse.

Gold Rush Attractions

Tourists would be able to visit such well-established attractions as the museums in Whitehorse and Dawson City, the hub of the gold rush whose population dwindled from 50,000 to 500, and the cabin of poet Robert Service.

Hamilton said a "new frontier" will be opened up in the Northwest Territories when the Hay River-Yellowknife road linking the Great Slave Lake gold community with the outside world is completed next year.

The minister believes that the lure of the "new" or "last" frontiers of North America, coupled with the desire of Americans to see their 49th state, will bring a flood of tourists up the Alaska highway and through the Yukon.

Hamilton said he thinks more British tourists will also be visiting Canada now that restrictions of the amount of money that can be taken out of Britain have been relaxed.

Territory Records Smashed

Thousands Went North
For Holiday This Year

All tourist records were broken this summer in the Yukon Territory and tourist officials report that many were from Vancouver Island and other parts of southern B.C.

In the first nine months of the year, close to 80,000 people went in and out of the Yukon at the Snag Creek customs office near the Alaska border.

PRIVATE PLANES

During the period April 1 to Aug. 31, some 770 private planes landed at the airport in Whitehorse.

Visitors who make the sea trip up the famed Inside Passage from Vancouver — there were more than 10,500 who entered the territory from Skagway this year — make the 110-mile trip to Whitehorse on a narrow gauge railroad.

WHITE PASS

The train travels through breath-taking scenery in famous White Pass used by the gold seekers on the Trail of '98. The train stops at Lake Bennett while passengers enjoy home-cooked meals served family style.

Another 3,765 visitors entered the territory by bus over the Alaska Highway.

New Zealand has tapped its large geyser region with a power plant capable of producing 69,000 kilowatts of electricity.

Mashed Box

Contained Girl

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Ben F. Sessions, 58, was driving a trash truck to the city dump when a large cardboard box blew off.

On the return trip, he told patrolmen, he saw the box on the roadside and decided to drive over it to mash it so it wouldn't blow away again.

He drove over the box and killed Rosa Olivia Black, 9, and seriously injured Edgar Moore, 11, who were playing inside.

Christmas All Month
In Colorful Mexico

Victoria is only a few air-hours away from Mexico City, centre of a sun-splashed land which makes every month of a year a fiesta and December the brightest of them all.

Among hundreds of celebrations throughout the country are a Christmas festival honoring radishes, and a pilgrimage to a famous shrine by race track jockeys and touts.

These activities, unusual to visitors from Canada, can be understood only when the history, traditions and religious sincerity of Mexicans are considered.

PATRONESS

One of the most important religious festivals of the year takes place Dec. 12 at the shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe in the suburbs of Mexico City.

Hundreds of thousands of pilgrims, in slow-moving groups with banners proclaiming the 428th anniversary of the apparition of Mexico's patroness, will jam the roads leading to the shrine. Some penitents arrive on their knees, having made their journey in this manner from far-off places.

Among them, carrying flowered horseshoes, will march the jockeys, trainers and hangers-on at the race track, going amber and red lights have gone out, apparently for the last time. The parliament buildings were bathed in a pure white light last night.

Criticism by local citizens and tourists of the multi-colored lights installed earlier this year, was believed behind the dimming of the colorful floodlights.

One New Yorker objected to the "carnival and circus" look which he said disfigured the buildings.

to ask Guadalupe's mercy in keeping them alive.

In Oaxaca, famed for its brightly-costumed Indians, fine pottery and archaeological ruins, a Festival of Radishes takes place Dec. 23. This event is so called because huge radishes are carved in weird shapes and sold in the plaza.

Nation-wide celebrations for Christmas start Dec. 16 with the nine-day "posada" season. The posadas are traditional parties recalling the Holy Family's journey to Bethlehem. In addition to being family affairs, they are observed by organizations as neighborhood affairs.

The "pinata"—a clay pot covered with crepe paper and filled with gifts—is Mexico's equivalent of the Canadian Christmas stocking. It is hung in a room and blindfolded guests are given a stick to hit and break the pot, scattering gifts.

Note to tourists—The Day of the Innocents, Dec. 28, is a kind of Mexican April Fool's day and not a good time to lend money.

Victoria residents can reach Mexico City easily by taking the Canadian Pacific Airlines service from Vancouver. Mexico City is a jumping-off place for such "sun in December" spots as Mazatlan and Acapulco on the Pacific coast, or Veracruz, Tampico, Tuxpan and Cozumel on the east coast.

Champagne 'Shampoos' Were Popular

21-7 victory over Hamilton to take the Grey Cup yesterday. Teammate doing the dousing was not identified. (CP Wirephoto.)

Royal York Jammed With Cup Celebrants

TORONTO — Fifty victory-happy Winnipeg football fans jangled cowbells and sang "Glory, Glory Hallelujah" and "When My Baby Smiles At Me" in the jammed main lobby of the Royal York Hotel last night.

Their joyous sing-song seemed to be the centre of celebration as thousands of happy characters turned downtown Toronto into one big party after Winnipeg Blue Bombers beat Hamilton Tiger-Cats, 21-7, to win the 50th anniversary Grey Cup.

Even Hamilton supporters were joining in the fun, mainly at a big dance in the Royal York. Police reported no vandalism and were busiest when trying to rescue a young Winnipeg fan who decided to hang from the first balcony by his hands over the Royal York lobby.

Crowd of 10,000 is expected at Winnipeg airport today when the Bombers come home. During the game, downtown Winnipeg was all but deserted and many in the small crowds of shoppers had the game blaring away on portable radios.

WELCOME HOME
In Hamilton, more than 1,200 people braved sub-freezing temperatures to welcome the losers home. Their greatest cheerers were for coach Jim Trimble and veteran middle guard Vince Scott, described by Mayor Lloyd Jackson as "this old bald-headed son-of-a-gun."

Wettest party anywhere was in Bombers' dressing room at Canadian National Exhibition stadium, where everybody had champagne and seemed to be pouring as much of it on someone else's head as they were drinking.

Reactions on both sides:
Bomber coach Bud Grant: "Buddy Tinsley (with Roger Savoye) getting that fumble in the fourth period was the turning point. Tinsley played the greatest game of his career. That old Mr. Young Bones was just marvellous. There was too much pride on our team; they knew they were defending champions and they played like champions."

Aging Bomber captain Tinsley, pushing through teammates hugging and kissing each other: "This was the greatest one ever. Pretty soon I'll have to give it up."

Winnipeg end Farrell Funston: "I didn't think pro football could be so much fun. I could go out there and beat them again."

Loud post-game celebration took the edge off the annual parade, held under partly cloudy skies and on slushy streets. Crowds were three and four deep along the long route. Everyone enjoyed it, except for children who noticed that someone had forgotten to put a Santa Claus in the parade.

And it was probably just as well the game was in Toronto this year despite the moisture. In Vancouver, heavy rain and recent frost combined to make Empire Stadium "very soggy."

Bombers Win Grey Cup Second Year in Row

Fourth-Quarter Burst Beats 'Cats

TORONTO (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers, led by quarterback Kenny Ploen and block-busting fullback Charlie Shepard, sprang to life with an 18-point fourth-quarter scoring onslaught to defeat Hamilton Tiger-Cats 21-7 Saturday and win the Grey Cup again for the West.

The Bombers, down 7-3 going into the final quarter, scored two converted touchdowns and four singles to wipe out Hamilton's lead and beat the eastern champions for the second straight year in the East-West classic.

A crowd of 33,133 saw a tensely-fought struggle for the first three quarters. A fumble by Hamilton halfback Gerry McDougall paved the way for the westerners' first touchdown and turned the tide in their favor as they went ahead 11-7.

INSPIRED BOMBERS

The inspired Bombers took command at that point and were never seriously threatened after that while adding another three single points and a converted touchdown with 10 seconds to play.

It was the fifth victory for the west in the last six years and the second in three years for Winnipeg.

The Bombers, who beat Hamilton 35-28 last year after losing 32-7 to the Tiger-Cats in 1957, gave up a 3-0 lead they took in the first quarter in the rubber match as the Big Four champions scored a single in the second quarter and two field goals in the third to move in front 7-3.

TOOK CHARGE

It appeared the underdog Tiger-Cats were headed for victory until Ploen and Shepard took charge in the fourth quarter, backed by a rugged and hard-hitting defensive squad which stemmed the eastern champions in their desperate efforts to catch up.

Ploen, who starred for Iowa in the 1956 Rose Bowl and was the losing quarterback in Hamilton's 1957 win over the Bombers, came up with two great passes in the westerners' touchdown strikes. Shepard crashed over for the first from three yards out after Ploen fired a 40-yard pass to end Farrell Funston. Ploen tossed a 33-yard pass to end Ernie Pitts for the other.

CONVERTS BOTH

Left-footed Gerry James converted both touchdowns and in the first quarter booted a 21-yard field goal. Shepard, the top ground-gainer of either team, also kicked four singles in the fourth quarter to score a total of 10 points.

Place-kicking specialist Steve Oneschuk booted field goals from the 10 and 27 yards out to account for six of Hamilton's points. Their other point went to Vince Scott after he blocked a kick and the ball bounced into the end zone.

Tiger-Cats were hemmed into their own end of the field throughout the fourth quarter as Shepard's booming punts—three of them second-down quick kicks—drove the surprised Ti-Cats back.

FORCED TO KICK

The Tiger-Cats couldn't get an offence going and punter Cam Fraser was forced to kick from inside the Hamilton 25-yard stripe.

Winnipeg moved the yardsticks only four times in the first half and they got into Hamilton territory only once—the first time they laid their hands on the ball after the kickoff when they got to the Hamilton 14, in easy field-goal kicking distance.

Winnipeg didn't get another first down until near the end of the third quarter when they moved from their own 11 to their 24. A first down on the first play of the fourth quarter moved them into Hamilton ground for the second time in the game.

TURNING POINT

The turning point came in the early minutes of the fourth quarter after Shepard, whose kicking in that period kept Hamilton on the defensive, booted a 37-yard single to cut the Ti-Cats' lead to 7-4.

The westerners struck swiftly for the touchdown that sent them ahead for the second time. McDougall, the leading Hamilton ground gainer, fumbled and Buddy Tinsley, who played one of his greatest games in his 10 years with Winnipeg, pounced on the ball at the Ti-Cats' 43.

Funston, a giant and speedy end who was picked up in mid-season from New York Giants, got behind young Len Chandler to take a pass from Ploen at the three-yard line. Shepard barreled over for the touchdown and then added three more singles, the first going for 76 yards and the third for 68 yards.

The second Winnipeg touchdown came after a third-down gamble by the Tiger-Cats backfired. The Bombers took over on the Hamilton 33 when McDougall was a yard short of a first down on a pass from quarterback Bernie Faloney.

Ploen wasted no time in striking for the touchdown. He caught Pitts, who scored a record-equalling 16 touchdown passes in the regular Western conference schedule, with a toss into the end zone.

Hamilton had two chances for touchdowns and in each case were thwarted. In the second quarter they marched from the Winnipeg 36 to the one-yard line where they were stopped after McDougall gained only two yards on two plays. They settled for the first of Oneschuk's field goals on that occasion.

In the second quarter they only got a single when Scott blocked a Shepard kick on the eight-yard line. The ball bounded into the end zone and Scott fell on it, but it squirted loose and linebacker Jack Delveaux grabbed it to save the bombers from a touchdown.

The game was played at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium on a slightly slippery field in 30-degree temperature. The ground was in fairly good condition after being protected by a tarpaulin from a three-inch overnight snowfall. The Bombers' superiority also showed in the statistics. Shepard gained 50 yards in 14 carries as he led them to 122-yard total along the ground. They gained 94 yards passing as Ploen completed four of 11 passes. The Tiger-Cats, with Faloney throwing all but two of their passes completed nine of 21 attempts for 87 yards. The Bombers picked up 12 first downs, one more than Hamilton.

This was the 32nd meeting between the East and West for the Grey Cup. The West now has won it nine times and the East 23. It was the sixth time that Winnipeg and Hamilton teams have met in the final and each have now won three times.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

I don't know how you feel but as a fellow who bet the West and wanted it to keep the Grey Cup for other reasons, I can't help but feel that the Winnipeg Blue Bombers were just a bit fortunate yesterday. This observer, for one, wouldn't give any points if the same two clubs were to play a rematch.

Between their big opening, which produced a field goal, and the fourth quarter, the Bombers were a beaten club, outplayed by a Hamilton club that might not have had too much in the way of offence but which had a line as tough as anything the Bombers have faced up to this season.

Take a look at the statistics. After putting the ball in play on their own 28-yard line following the kick-off, the Bombers looked superior as they got four successive first downs and weren't stopped until they reached the Hamilton 16-yard line—a 66-yard march which put them close enough to give Gerry James an easy shot for a field goal.

That score came with the game only five minutes and 18 seconds old. Between then and the start of the fourth quarter, the Bombers never got out of their own end of the field with the ball, spent most of the time inside their 35-yard line on offence. They were forced to scrimmage at least four times inside their own 15-yard line, made only two first downs—about 20 minutes apart—in a space of 40 minutes.

It was a combination of a lot of things that enabled the Bombers to stay close in that 40-minute stretch, close enough to start the fourth quarter only four points behind. You have to credit the Blue Bombers with some of the reasons. Their defensive line yielded grudgingly and the first two of Charlie Shepard's four quick kicks baled them out of trouble twice. And then there was a bit of luck when Vince Scott had the ball squirt out from under him in the end zone after he had blocked a kick and a Hamilton touchdown seemed assured.

Just the same, when Steve Oneschuk kicked his second field goal, seconds before the end of the third quarter, it looked as if the Tiger-Cats were all but the new Canadian football champions.

Bombers did get another rush started after the field goal but were stopped after making three first downs and had to settle for a deadline kick. Tiger-Cats immediately started to move, then ran into the two plays which took the play, and the Grey Cup, away from them.

The first came when Roger Savoye jolted the ball out of Gerry McDougall's arm and Buddy Tinsley fell on it on the Hamilton 43-yard line. The second came immediately after when Kenny Ploen threw that long pass to Farrell Funston, which put the ball in play only three yards out and set up the winning touchdown. Len Chandler, young Canadian defensive back, was in front of Funston and certainly should have batted the ball down or away. But, somehow, it escaped him and Funston made the grab.

It was all over when Shepard plunged for the go-ahead points. The Bombers came on, the Tiger-Cats wilted, and it needed only safe football for the Winnipeg team to stay in front.

Which brings up what was probably the game's most spectacular play

West Ham Whitewashed, 7-0; Preston Takes First Place

LONDON (Reuters)—Preston North End moved into first place in the English soccer league's first division Saturday as front-running West Ham United was walloped 7-0 by Sheffield Wednesday.

Sheffield Wednesday, new to the first division this season, pulled off its second upset over a top club. Last month it stopped Tottenham Hotspur's unbeaten run and helped shake Tottenham loose from first place.

Preston, a 3-1 winner at Luton, goes to top of the division for the first time this year. It has a two-point lead over Tottenham, which tied 2-2 with Blackpool. West Ham is in third place, equal on points with Tottenham but with an inferior goal average.

Three points off the race are the defending champion Wolverhampton Wanderers. Wolverhampton beat Chelsea 3-1 and ran its unbeaten home win string to 18 games.

Sheffield Wednesday led 4-0 at halftime and kept up the pressure in the second half with three more goals.

Inside left John Farnham scored Sheffield's first two

Encore Merchant Drops Meringue For Meaty Music

(A Canadian music critic now living in Paris, Ken Winters is author of weekly articles on music and art for The Daily Colonist.)

By KEN WINTERS

PARIS (Special)—The musical season here, like most musical seasons, is mainly a celebration of standard fare, one big festival of established masterpieces. But this past week two concerts gave the 20th century an innings.

Tuesday Darius Milhaud led the Orchestra National in a program of his own works; and Friday Pierre Boulez, possibly the most admired composer of Europe's far-out avant garde, and a fine conductor as well, marshalled the Sudwest-funk Orchestra of Baden-Baden through a 3 1/2-hour stretch of music by Stravinsky, Schoenberg, Bartok, and two of their heirs presumptive: Luciano Berio and Roman Haubenstock-Ramati.

The Milhaud concert might have surprised the many Canadians who know this composer only through too many performances of his "Scaramouche Suite."

As the 67-year-old composer-conductor came onto the stage, walking with two canes, his great pale face jutting forward with the effort of negotiating the distance between wings and podium, he was greeted with applause that expressed much affection and respect.

I saw the reason for the quality of this applause when he seated himself before his players and launched a crisp, controlled reading of his Eighth Symphony.

This work is something very much finer than the meringue-like trifles of Milhaud the encore merchant, or those tedious, factory-made "premiere" pieces with which he floods the banks of the summer festivals. It was alive from beginning to end.

It has a grotesque, thin, complicated first movement, a poised, harmonious slow section, a tumbling scherzo, and a finale built on thread-fine braided counterpoint which thickens with wonderful time-lines into knots of broad sound reinforced by brass and percussion. I thought it a splendid piece.

Mental Health Scheme

Think of Patients In Gift Season

A gift of a box of chocolates or a sports shirt might start one of the 6,000 patients in B.C.'s mental hospitals on the way to complete recovery.

This small act of kindness by a Victoria resident could give the patient something to build on, Mrs. Douglas

GLENN FORD... natural humor

He Donned Uniform To Hit Top

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—I like to laugh," says Glenn Ford, and I figure everybody else in the world wants to laugh, too.

Thus Canadian-born Ford explains how he shifted his career from serious dramatic roles to comedy-in-uniform parts and became the movies' top box office star in the process.

His block-busting movies that shot him atop the list of Hollywood's top 10 money-makers included such as "Tea-house of the August Moon," "Imitation General" and "Don't Go Near the Water." He also made a western the same year. Despite its forbidding title, it was one of the comedy hits of the year: "The Sheepman."

Ford explains why he chose service pictures to exploit this new-found comedy talent. "The greatest natural humor in the world is found among servicemen. One of the most laugh-filled times of my life was during my hitch in the marine corps during the war. Inexplicably, things that happen to servicemen are much funnier than the same incidents with civilians."

Hawkes, chairman of the Christmas gift committee of the Victoria branch, Canadian Mental Health Association, said last night.

"It lets the patient realize we know they are still alive and that we want them back," she said.

The B.C. division of the CMHA has sponsored the gift campaign for four years. Last year, Victoria residents donated 2,093 items.

"This year only 500 gifts have been received," Mrs. Hawkes said. "Our campaign ends the first week in December."

Each patient's gift is wrapped and his own name attached to it, she said. This gift "may well be the only contact they have during the year with other than the hospital staff."

Christmas parties will be held at all the hospitals. The Victoria association will be making personal delivery at the Colquhoun Mental Home.

A complete list of all gifts advised by the CMHA may be obtained by phoning the Victoria association office, 738 Fort Street, at EV 5-7811. Association workers will pick up a gift when it is ready.

Artificial Artifacts by Shiploads

Tokyo Redskins Reap Indian Curio Profits

Tourists Unaware, Don't Care

By ERITH SMITH

When you buy "genuine Indian (or Eskimo) artifact" in stores or curio shops for souvenirs, do you know if they're genuine?

Or do you care?

Chances are, says an expert in the field, that whether you care or not you've bought something turned out production-line style in a factory that's not only not Indian, and not Eskimo, but perhaps not even North American.

FIELD MAN

J. G. Cathcart is the expert. A field man for the Glenbow Foundation in Calgary, he's in Victoria for a few days on one of his periodic continent-wide junkets to visit museums and native art shops.

He knows what he's looking at—and for. The foundation maintains the largest Indian museum in western Canada, the Luxton Museum at Banff. Mr. Cathcart for years has been dealing in genuine Indian handicrafts and art work, and in Eskimo craft as well.

PRIVATE MUSEUMS

"It's getting so that genuine objects of Indian art have almost disappeared altogether from the market," he says. "Most of the best have gone into private collections or museums."

"In their place I find curio and souvenir stores throughout Canada and the United States stocked with cheap imitations, ground out by machines in factories not only here but in Japan."

"Next time you see small totems in a store, check for a label. Chances are it will say 'made in Japan.'"

Payola Helped

Rock 'n' Roll Rage Fast Dying Out

NEW YORK (UPI)—Rock 'n' roll is going the way of the charleston, the big apple and the black bottom.

The music craze that set teen-agers to writhing on the dance floor and started Elvis Presley gyrating along the road to fame is dying out, according to disc pockeys, movie makers and record distributors.

Payola is partly to blame, but the decline of rock 'n' roll had set in before the current revelations of payoffs in the music business.

FREED DISMISSAL

Rock 'n' roll began fading away early this year after riding high on the jazz wave for five years, experts on popular music reported.

The most dramatic event to shake rock 'n' roll was the termination of disc jockey Alan Freed's radio and television programs in New York last week.

BALLAD SINGER

Freed, who is said to have coined the term rock 'n' roll, is being replaced on six hours a week of TV programs by a handsome young baritone, Richard Hayes, who sings the kind of ballads the middle-aged parents of today used to sing and sway to 20 years ago.

An official of New York's WNEW-TV, the station that carried Freed's programs, said rock 'n' roll hit its peak around January of this year and started down after that. "Its decline was sudden."

WON'T MAKE IT

"I refused to make that trash."

In Hollywood, two top producers of movies for teen-agers pronounced "rock 'n' roll" films dead. Both Sam Katzman and Albert Zugsmith said nothing

One's Real, One's 'Genuine'

Rock-Roll King Admits Payola

NEW YORK (UPI)—Rock 'n' roll disc jockey Alan Freed admitted Friday he had received cheques from record companies but denied the cheques constituted payola. He made the admission after a wildly sentimental final performance of his teen-age Big Beat television show.

'Salad Days' Run Sets U.K. Mark

LONDON (Reuters)—A whimsical comedy that never has had any big-name stars will end at London's Vaudeville Theatre next February as the world's longest-running musical.

"Salad Days," a musical about a magic piano that first was written to wind up the season for a provincial theatre, will close Feb. 27 after ousting the New York run of "Oklahoma!" in the long-distance stakes.

It will have had 5 1/2 years and 2,282 performances in the West End theatre. It will catch

Hole in Bylaw Saves Fines

DED DEER, Alta. (CP)—More than 100 parking meter violation charges were withdrawn in magistrate's court last week on the grounds the bylaw under which they were laid did not properly locate the meters.

The city has since plugged the loophole by revising its bylaw.

'First Child Last' Says Skittish Kitten

LONDON (UPI)—Brigitte Bardot says she hopes her first baby will be her last.

The sex symbol of modern France says she didn't find pregnancy a joke and shouted "no, no, a thousand times no" when asked if she hoped to have more children.

Miss Bardot admitted she was frightened by the coming birth but added, "I'm afraid I cannot find any way of avoiding it."

Variety Show Delights

By BERT BINNY

There was all manner of jollification at St. John's Parish Hall yesterday afternoon when the Royal Bride Chapter, IOOE, presented "The Teddy Bears' Picnic," a Christmas variety bill of especial delight to those whose Christmases have been few.

The hall was packed to overflowing. So, at times, was the stage.

Richard Reeve made an excellent emcee.

Liz Improves, Husband Checks Out

NEW YORK (AP)—Elizabeth Taylor was reported in good condition Saturday in Columbia Presbyterian Medical Centre, where she is confined with double virus pneumonia. Eddie Fisher, her husband, who has spent the last two nights in a room near his wife's, said he was checking out.

This WINEGARD colorceptor antenna will make your TV set work better—

Here's why:

If you live at a great distance from stations you need terrific power sensitivity to pick up and strengthen even the weakest signals. The patented Electro-Lens design of the Color-Captor provides that power, works equally well on all 12 VHF channels and with any TV set, black and white or color. And Color-Captor sharpens directivity to shut out stray signals from co-channel interfering stations.

If you own or plan to buy a color set, an antenna is far more critical on Color reception than on black and white. Winegard Color-Captor has been proven in thousands of color installations.

Color-Captor looks better on your home... you will like the sparkling gold anodized finish, the low neat silhouette. The elements are straight and strong, made of lightweight, reinforced high tensile aluminum that won't bend or sag—wind-tested to 100 m.p.h.

Exclusive Color-Captor features

• Pat. Electro-Lens design concentrates the full signal—feeds it to your set, bright and clear—free of interference.

'Song of Norway' Uses All Talents

By BERT BINNY

The fourth pair of symphony concerts take place this afternoon and tomorrow evening following a preliminary canter at Duncan on Friday.

There are two overtures on the program, Tchaikovsky's "1812" and Rossini's "La Gazza Lutra." Also to be heard are Gounod's ballet suite from Faust, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony (No. 8) and "Oklahoma." Three Strauss polkas are there.

Just about every branch of theatrical art is being combined to produce "Song of Norway" at Victoria High School, Friday and Saturday.

There are actors, actresses, singers, dancers and instrumentalists. Only a very few are not students at Vic High. The ballet finale is a product of the Wynne Shaw Dance Studio. "Maiden Norway" is Sandra Begg and "North Wind" is Mark Metcalf. "Ice Madiens" are Julie Banfield, Gina Hisecock, Rosina Lane, Sharon Kirk, Lovey Moloy and Lydia Watt.

Student leads are Barbara Oldnall, Darlaine Frewing, Judy Roberts, Bill Hossie, Rino Elverhoy, Bill Hubbard, John Roberts and Kevan Hull.

Tickets—more for Friday than Saturday—are still available from any Vic High student or by phoning EV 2-4812.

Tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday, the Victoria College Film Club is sponsoring the Russian production, "Don Quixote," at the Fox Theatre. Showings are at 6:55 and 9:00, and there is no advance in regular admission prices.

Wednesday, Dec. 9, is the date set for presentation at Metropolitan United Church of the "Messiah." Joining the Victoria Choral Society with director, Stanley Hoban, are soprano, Ruth Champion, contralto, Eleanor Duff, tenor, Michael Rogers, and bass, John Dunbar.

Organist will be Richard Proudman and the orchestra will consist of Victoria Symphony players.

The cast of "The Rainmaker," to be directed for the Theatre Guild by Victor Mitchell, has been announced.

"Liz," the only female part, will be played by Helen Peaker and the men in the affair include James Dugmore, Gerald Guest, Ralph Kendall, Alan Robertson, Herb Comstock and Cliff Clarke. Production date is Feb. 6.

SIR JOHN GIELGUD

SIR ALEC GUINNESS

Clue to Success

Big British Stars Prefer Perfection To Amassing Riches

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The British are coming! Coming? Heck—they're here!

The United States has always been a happy hunting ground for British performers, but never has there been such a wholesale invasion as this year. Sir Laurence Olivier and Sir Alec Guinness have brightened what has been a fairly dismal television season.

IMPOSING LIST

Among the others imported for American movies, TV and stage plays: Dirk Bogarde, Laurence Harvey, Richard Burton, Margaret Leighton, John Gielgud, Robert Morley, Trevor Howard, John Mills, Hayley Mills, not to mention the more permanent visitors: David Niven, Deborah Kerr, Jean Simmons, James Mason, etc.

How come? I asked one of the latest and loveliest of the invaders, Ann Todd. She is here to do a Playhouse 90.

KNOW OWN CRAFT

"Perhaps it is because we know our craft," she explained.

"Any young performer who shows some promise in England goes through a rigorous training in the classics. That background is invaluable."

Hollywood stars have trouble understanding why performers like Olivier, Harvey and Miss Todd will devote a half-year playing at the Old Vic at something like $90 a week.

IT'S WORTH IT

"You work hard for ridiculous pay, but it's worth it. The artistic rewards are enormous. You get to do things you wouldn't ordinarily do in the commercial theatre."

"I know this doesn't sound right, but I'm really not interested in making a lot of money. I think a lot of the English stars feel the same way. We live comfortably, and we enjoy our comfort. But I don't believe we're so determined to amass riches as actors are in Hollywood."

Miffed

Autry Draws Bead

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A fighting mad Gene Autry, miffed at TV western heroes claiming they can outshoot singing cowboys, offers to bet $10,000 that it just isn't so.

"I've got a 16-year-old boy who works for me and I don't think any guy on TV can outshoot him," Gene wagged. "In fact, I'm willing to put up $10,000 that he'd win a quick-draw contest with the TV fellows."

Setting up some ground rules for the "duel," Gene said, "the two contestants would draw, then shoot at a target tossed into the air."

"Those TV actors say they can do everything better than the singing cowboy," Gene complained. "If that's the case, why is it that whenever they go on rodeos they try to sing?"

"Outside of two or three of them, they just walk the horse in and out of a scene. You know, I don't think most of them could stay on a fast running horse."

Cho risters Wanted Mid-Teens to Forties

A new city choir is to be formed. Sponsored by the Victoria Welsh Society, the choir is to have "a flexible age limit stretching from mid-teens to the forties." Members do not have to be Welsh. Anyone interested should call Mrs. Walter Marmo, EV 2-7372.

friends

There are new footnotes to Canadian history in this intimate story of an enduring friendship between two great Canadians, and their influence on major national and international events of our times.

See in the light of the intimate friendship between Lord Beaverbrook, the dynamic newspaperman and British Cabinet Minister and Viscount Bennett, former Canadian Prime Minister, important events of our time, achieve a fascinating new perspective. Especially momentous is the revelation of Bennett's dream of a great cooperative trade relationship between the United Kingdom and Canada—and how his personal vanity caused its downfall. In the author's crisp style, an affectionate yet frankly critical portrait of Bennett is sketched with unusual perception. In the process, Beaverbrook gives some quite unexpected clues to his own character.

"Friends" is reading of assured significance and interest for every serious observer of Canada's political evolution. Excerpt from Toronto Telegram Review by John Bassett. "Friends" is recommended without hesitation for interest, for knowledge and for entertainment."

SUSY PARKER... beauty betrayed

Guileless Beauties Cruelly Deceived

By CLYDE GILMOUR

A modern career-girl's withering view of her masculine colleagues is the curious attraction offered to the public in The Best of Everything, an extremely glossy widescreen soap opera. (It's at the Royal.)

The females in the story are shown to be honest and lovely creatures, pathetically anxious to Get Ahead in the World but utterly without guile and cruelly deceived by the men upon whom they bestow their simmering affections.

Hope Lange manages to get her heart broken twice. Gorgeous Susy Parker falls madly in love with a cad.

Wide-eyed charmer Diane Baker finds herself pregnant but still a spinster.

Garden Notes

Starve Out Fungus

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

LAWN FUNGI (B.C., Victoria)—The "toadstools" in your lawn grow from an underground root system that feeds upon decaying organic material in the soil. Quite often, a patch of fungi originates from dead tree roots or other rotting wood buried in the lawn, but these lawn fungus growths are increasing nowadays as a result of using rotary power mowers and leaving the mowings on the lawn. While somewhat unsightly, I don't think they do any real harm, and many of these lawn fungi are edible.

One way of clearing them out is to punch holes through the sod with a garden fork and drench the infested area with a solution of permanganate of potash in water, half teaspoonful per gallon, and about one gallon per square yard. The effect of the permanganate is to oxygenize the organic material in the soil, speeding up its decomposition, and leaving the fungus without food.

NEW GARDEN (F.R.C., Royal Oak)—If the garden to which you are moving has been cultivated reasonably well, it is unlikely that a lot of rich manure or heavy dosages of fertilizer need be dug in. When you plant roses, shrubs, fruit trees, ornamentals and perennial flowers, the ground does not need a great deal of enriching—in fact, too much stimulation could be an embarrassment to the plant, encouraging too much top-growth before the roots are well established.

The chief need is to see that the soil is reasonably open, and free-draining, and of a texture congenial to the plant roots. Use peat moss and bone meal freely in the planting sites, but leave the more stimulating fertilizers until the plants have established good root systems.

GREENHOUSE RIGHTS (M.J., Oak Bay)—I think you would be very foolhardy in putting up a greenhouse on rented property without getting legal advice first. For all it costs, such advice may save you all kinds of headaches when the time comes to move your greenhouse to a place of your own.

I have only a layman's knowledge of the law, with its usual quota of misinformation, but I have a distinct impression that any kind of permanent foundation for the greenhouse would render it part of the property and prevent you from moving it.

ROSE GALLS (G.N.L., Ladysmith)—Those swollen growths with prickles which have appeared on the stems of your roses are rose galls, popularly known as Robin's Pin Cushions.

These are caused by a tiny wasp, which lays her eggs in the rose stem, at the same time injecting an irritant substance which causes the stem to swell, creating a comfortable home where the grubs can live and feed upon the rose tissues until ready to pupate and hatch out into adult gall wasps.

Obviously, no spray or dust can reach the eggs or grubs within the gall, and all you can do is to cut out the infested stems and burn them.

CHICKEN RUN (V.S.S., Saanich)—The ground used previously as a chicken run will be quite rich in nitrogen, fairly rich in phosphates, and poor in potash, and almost certainly compacted and sour. Dig it over as deeply as possible, incorporating lots of chopped straw, which has a wonderfully invigorating effect on such soil, and dress with sulphate of potash, half cupful per square yard.

Potatoes on this ground would likely come scabby. Carrots, onions, peas and beans would find the soil too rank and strong, but with the addition of some lime, I think lettuce, spinach, cabbage and any of the leafy vegetables should do well as a first crop.

Ratings Immoral, Degrading

The news that ratings will be investigated is welcome only if it is a thorough and fearless and intelligent appraisal. Never has such a huge industry been so hopelessly cowed by a set of cold, hopelessly unreliable, totally meaningless numbers.

Statisticians are assuming the vestments of the clergy and of that latter-day clergy, the psychiatrists. All statisticians open their pronouncements by telling you that statistics are an exact science and you must not question their figures, unless you are another statistician, in which case you would have more sense than to open your yap.

But no statistician has ever been able to explain to me why, if one dentist is listening to Bob Hope, all other dentists must be assumed to be listening to Hope, too. I am willing to concede the statisticians (while not really believing it) the ability to predict with reasonable accuracy how many times a flipped coin will turn up heads. But the measurement of taste, I think, is something way beyond the power of figures.

There is a wild, wonderful variability in the preference of people about even such incontestable personalities as Dinah Shore or George Gobel. There are people who don't like these worthy folk and these mavericks are what make a democracy what it is.

There are some people who like Gobel some night and don't on other nights. There are nights when Gobel is more likable than other nights. There are other nights when Gobel is at his most lovable, but the viewer's digestion or his relations with his wife are in such grievous state that the guy loathes Gobel anyhow.

It's conditions like these that make a mockery of a set of figures. Especially when you remember that Nielsen, the biggest figure juggler of them all, takes roughly a thousand sets to project a case and habits and action of 170,000,000 individuals—any million or so of which might be in a cantankerous, non-statistic bearing out mood that night.

I have many objections to the ratings, but the most violent of these is the assumption that we're all sheep. My second objection is that ratings simply don't square with my own ideas. There are high-rated programs that are so obscure no one I know has ever seen or heard of them. Other low-rated programs seem to have been seen by everyone I know.

Lastly, I'm against ratings because—even if they were accurate—I think they are totally immoral. The worship of ratings to the exclusion of any respect for quality led to the quiz show scandal. The quiz shows were buying an audience, pandering to a vicarious feeling of greed, reducing the viewer to his lowest element.

Ratings assume that a man—any man—has only one dimension, forgetting that even the best of us have our low taste. By appealing to that low taste, the broadcasters assume that that is the whole man. This is degrading to the viewer and it degrades television and that is the real sin of rating worship.

Hollywood Today

Sinatra Faithful to Old Flame

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Frank Sinatra is always faithful in his fashion. The only photograph in his Palm Springs bedroom, I'm told, is of Lady Adele Beatty, his last year's romance. Now, Lady Adele is expected to marry director Stanley Donen.

Debbie Reynolds meant it when she said she was selling her big Beverly Hills house because she would be living abroad during part of next year. One of her films in Europe will be "Night Without End," in London, Paris, Munich, with William Holden.

Of course there will be some rock 'n' roll in Elvis Presley's next movie, "GI Blues." But producer Hal Wallis promises some ballads as well. "The story is about lonely GIs in Europe, and the girls they meet, French, Italian and German." Rossana Fodesta was wanted for the Italian girl, and Nadja Tiller for the German, but both are now on the stork's calling list.

Bing Crosby's boys make their combined British television debut on the Palladium show in February. Gary, 26, Dennis and Philip, 25, Lindsay, 21, will get the highest salary ever paid a quartet over there—$12,000, and all expenses.

From Jamaica, B.W.I., I hear that, last year, the late Errol Flynn sold a fabulous resort, Devil's Island, near Port Antonio, for $120,000. His sister Rosemary opposed the sale. Now the family wants to know, where did the money go?

John Wayne paid for a stand-in and valet to come all the way from England for Laurence Harvey, who plays the young man's role in John's "Alamo." . . . Metro will continue to pay the couple when Larry moves into their "Butterfield 8" with Elizabeth Taylor.

Eva Gabor is flying in all her relatives from Hollywood, Mama Jolie, sister Zsa Zsa, for the great big soiree her father-in-law, Saul Brown, is tossing for newlywed Eva and groom Dick Brown. "I am even bringing Zsa Zsa's ex-husband, Connie Hilton, to New York," Eva said, "but not her last husband, George Sanders—he's such a bore."

Talking of Mr. Harvey, Italy is the only country in the world where his "Room at the Top" movie was not a success. It was terrifically popular in the U.S., Canada, England, France, Germany, everywhere. But not in Italy. You figure it out.

Chatted with Arthur Loew and his bride Debbie (widow of Tyrone Power). Arthur, grandson of the man who helped to found Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was full of play-producing plans for Broadway in conjunction with Julie Styne. Their first joint biggie is a musical version of "The Ghost Goes West," with Cyril Ritchard in the role played by the late Robert Donat in the movie.

Robert Preston will most likely star in the movie version of "The Music Man."

Talk about temperament! When Julie Andrews kept painter Annigoni waiting for their portrait appointment he locked his studio, so that she couldn't come in when she arrived! But she got her own back when he agreed to be interviewed on her big television show on the BBC, for which he was paid about $15. For painting her portrait Julie had to pay close to $8,000.

Director Jack Clayton ("Room at the Top") says Jean Simmons is not the type for the Hal Wallis movie version of "Sunset and Smoke" and, unless he can get Joanne Woodward or Shirley MacLaine or Audrey Hepburn, he can be counted out.

I see that Robert Morley joins Molly Picon for the London stage version of "Majority of One." Robert could use a hit, having had three floppos in a row.

Shirley MacLaine spent most of her time in New York working on her "Operation Typhoon" project. Husband Steve Parker flew off to Japan with the $30,000 collected to date for the typhoon victims, when Shirley flew off to Washington to see President Ike.

Sleigh-Rigged 'Copter Brings Santa to Sidney

When they say Santa Claus dropped in to see them, Sidney residents aren't fooling. At 1 p.m. yesterday Santa landed by helicopter right on the village's main street.

Young and old children thronged the street as the helicopter made a low pass at the village, then came in for a landing.

Cries of "There he is!" from the youngsters were taken up by their parents as the helicopter settled slowly to the ground.

The helicopter was made up to look like a sleigh with large red sleigh-shaped cut-outs attached to both sides and the initials S.C. painted on them.

Santa was invited to Sidney by an appliance firm that was celebrating its grand opening.

Improve Without Paying?

A civic election program featuring a tax incentive plan which would not penalize property owners who improve their homes and grounds was outlined by Victoria alderman candidate Sally Rogers.

Mrs. Rogers, a Victoria Ratepayers' Association candidate, said that if she is elected she will work towards establishment of a Victoria better business bureau and elimination of inequalities in the school tax structure.

She said she will seek "active, intelligent and conscientious welfare administration and would try to have five additional polling stations set up during civic elections.

These would be situated in Victoria West, James Bay, Gorge-Burnside, Fairfield and Jubilee area.

She noted that she has no personal business interests and "will be available to serve as a full-time alderman."

Candidates Named At Sidney

Two new candidates for the Sidney village commission have been nominated by the Sidney Ratepayers' Association. They are Mrs. M. Roberts and A. W. Freeman.

They were introduced to the meeting of the ratepayers' association Friday, where each formally accepted the nomination.

The candidates have been nominated to fill the seats left vacant by Joseph Bilgeri and J. E. Bosher, both retiring from public office.

The third seat involved in the vote Dec. 17 is that of commission chairman Dr. C. H. Hemphings. Rate payers have nominated the doctor again.

Novel Credit Cards Buy Family's Needs

OTTAWA (CP)—A novel adaptation of the ubiquitous credit card has caught on fast in Ottawa in the last six months. Its sponsors now are setting their sights on tapping a vast consumer credit market in cities across Canada.

Credit cards of individual stores are nothing new, but this one has a potent gimmick. It's tailored to cover virtually all of a family's day-to-day buying.

For example, the single card is an open sesame to credit for food and clothing, taxi rides and movie houses, hair permanents and car repairs, dry cleaning and house painting. Altogether it embraces more than two dozen types of stores and services. It's the brainchild of Alfred Ritchie, 49, former finance commissioner for Ottawa, who early this year left city hall after 15 years to set up Master Credit Service Limited.

The service began in May with 250 stores where the holder of an MCS card could buy goods and services. It has spread to more than 400 stores.

MCS mailed its card to heads of households in Ottawa, adjoining Eastview and neighboring Hull, Que.

More than 35,000 cards have been issued so far, Mr. Ritchie said in an interview. "Eventually there will be upwards of 50,000."

"Sixty per cent of the business done in the city is done on credit."

If Loan Not Passed

Shift Hours School Fear

REGINALD SINKINSON

Trustee Issues Warning

Four schools in district 53 will be forced to use shift system next year if the Dec. 17 $799,000 school loan referendum is not passed, trustee Reginald Sinkinson said last night.

"Royal Oak, Mt. Newton, North Saanich Junior-Senior High schools and Cordova Bay elementary are already tremendously overcrowded," he said. Brentwood and Saanichton elementary schools are also possible candidates for the system.

TOO MANY

"I can't see any possibility of handling all the youngsters now in the schools plus the expected increase in the present accommodation," he said.

"We are already using many kinds of substandard accommodation. In Royal Oak High, the lunchroom has been divided into three bulging classrooms, and in North Saanich High, classes are even conducted on the stage."

ONLY 25 PER CENT

"Only 25 per cent of the $799,000 asked will be paid by the school district," he said. "The rest of the bill will be footed by the provincial government."

The money, if granted, will be spent on three new schools and extensions to many of the existing schools.

A new junior-senior high on Wesley Road between Halliburton and Claremont would draw off the overload from Royal Oak and Mt. Newton, he said. The site has already been purchased.

TWO SCHEDULED

Two elementary schools have been scheduled for the Claremont and Santa Clara, Lochside and Royal Oak areas. These will ease the overcrowding at Cordova Bay and Royal Oak and handle the students who now travel to Cordova Bay by school bus.

Extensions are planned for Saanichton and Keating Elementary Schools and to Mt. Newton High School.

Naden Rites

Inquest On Boy Tomorrow

An inquest into the death of eight-year-old David Achtzner will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow by deputy coroner Dr. J. H. Moore.

The child was fatally injured Friday afternoon near Parson's Bridge, when wheels of a gravel truck passed over his body. He died 30 minutes after he was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Funeral services will be held in Christ The King Chapel, HMCS Naden at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow, with Father L. M. Le Fontaine officiating.

Interment will be in Hatley Memorial Gardens.

McKinnon Fund Closing

Tuesday will be the official closing date for the "Archie McKinnon fund" which has now reached $2,954.

The money was donated by hundreds of Greater Victoria residents for a convalescent trip.

Mr. McKinnon suffered severe injuries last month while taking part in a comedy act at the Crystal Garden.

Reeves 'Softens' Attitude to Court

Greater Victoria is closer to a four-municipality family and juvenile court today than it has been for months.

Reeves of the two "hold-out" municipalities, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, last night conceded their councils have not closed the door on the proposal and outlined certain conditions under which the unified court plan would be more acceptable.

Reeve George Murdoch of Oak Bay thought his council might endorse the plan on three conditions:

1. If total costs are reasonable.
2. If costs are apportioned among the participating municipalities on the basis of use.
3. If the family and juvenile court judge would circulate and sit on each municipality's cases within that municipality.

Reeve A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt also said his council would be happier with the plan if it involved a circulating judiciary.

He said that if Esquimalt residents had to travel to a central court in Victoria, especially when so many cases are adjourned on several occasions, it would be a hardship upon them.

Not only that, a central court would cost too much in police overtime when constables had to appear as witnesses.

Chief objection to the plan in Esquimalt, Reeve Wurtele said, is that cost estimates so far have been too "vague," and details of the court too "obscure."

He said that even if Esquimalt stayed out of the court, it would ask to share in use of its probationary service and would be glad to pay its share of the cost of that branch.

Probationary work in Esquimalt, currently carried out by Chief Gilbert Stancombe, has achieved "outstanding results," the reeve added.

Baby Sitter Wins Fire Chief's Praise

A teenage baby-sitter last night was praised for extinguishing a kerosene fire and calling the fire department to come and see if the blaze was really out.

Two small boys broke a jar containing kerosene on a cement walk at the rear of their parents' home in Saanich. The alert baby-sitter, Georgina Dobbins of 1602 Bank, doused Victoria High School students who may seek careers in the hotel industry were taken on all-inclusive 2½-hour tour of Empress Hotel by manager Cyril Chapman, right foreground, yesterday. Here the group of potential executives inspects the raw material for a lavish dinner, later were shown Royal suite.

Students See Empress

Hotel Tour Eye-Popper

A dozen high school students yesterday made a garret-to-cellar tour of the stately Empress Hotel and left convinced there is more to hotel operation than sending ice upstairs and paging errant tycoons.

"I kept their eyes popping out for 2½ hours," said Empress manager Cyril Chapman, who hopes to work out a monthly hotel tour program with Victoria school board authorities for students considering a career in the accommodation industry.

The youngsters, ranging from 14 to 18 years old, were guided through every nook and cranny of the impressive CPR hotel to the tune of a rapid-fire explanation of hotel operating procedures from Mr. Chapman.

At the conclusion of the exhausting tour they were luncheon guests of the manager.

Mr. Chapman said following the tour that there are excellent opportunities in the hotel industry today, plus rapid advancement for qualified employees.

He pointed out that in terms of capital investment the industry is now the third or fourth largest in the United States and that the demand for trained employees is constantly expanding.

"Of course," he added, "you've got to start at the bottom, just like anything else."

'Lid Will Blow Off' If Raises Spiked

"The lid will blow sky high" unless the federal government grants civil servants the higher salaries recommended by the civil service commission, Bob Coey, a Victoria postal employee said last night.

Mr. Coey is spokesman for the Victoria branch of the Canadian Postal Employees' Association. He was commenting on a report that the Vancouver branch president, Bill Kay, advocates a strike vote for civil servants.

Mr. Coey said postal workers here support the recommendation of a joint action committee of federal employees that the issue should be aired when the House of Commons reconvenes Jan. 14.

"I'm quite sure, however, that if there still is no action taken by the government after January to implement recommendations of the civil service commission for higher salaries, then the lid will blow sky high."

Mr. Coey said Victoria postal workers will not support any efforts by the Vancouver branch to launch premature strike action. He added: "We take our directive from the national office—not from Vancouver."

But he also added: "This is not just a few radicals stirring things up. There definitely is unrest all across the country."

Ailing Girl Collapses

An eight-year-old girl weak from influenza collapsed on a city street yesterday while running to catch a bus.

Ruth Sullivan, of 886 Dunsuir, was taken by police ambulance to Royal Jubilee Hospital for a check-up after she collapsed at Government and Johnson at 3:40 p.m.

Meters Hardhearted

'Armless Bandits' Lacking in Mercy

The quality of mercy built into Vancouver parking meters just isn't to be found in their Victoria counterparts.

A recent test in Vancouver showed that meters there give the motorists an extra two minutes, no matter how much money is put in the slot. Despite this clockwork charity, the city takes in about $30,000 a month in pennies, nickels and dimes.

But meters in Victoria aren't so lenient. Six of them were checked by stopwatch in various parts of the city yesterday with depressing results.

Four gave exactly the amount of time paid for, and one gyped the motorist by a full minute. The last one, in a burst of generosity that will probably be rectified next repair day, gave a 30-second Christmas present before leering "Violation" at the watcher.

City engineer J. C. Garnett admitted that as far as meters are concerned, charity is nothing but a word in the dictionary.

"They are set to give you the time you pay for," he said. "Since they are just machines, there may be the odd one that is a little generous, but not many."

The green and greedy little coin machines may deal in pennies and nickels, but they have become big business to the city. Each year their take is higher, and last year it amounted to $140,000.

"What's more," Mr. Garnett added cheerfully, "the take is liable to be even higher this year."

Motorists who consider the armless bandits personal enemies may not be quite as cheerful.

Greater Victoria motorboat owners will either comply with proposed Elk Lake marine regulations next summer or they will be banned from the lake altogether, a Saanich municipal spokesman said yesterday.

"Enforcement is the weakest part of the proposal," said Councillor Stan Murphy, chairman of the lands and planning committee which recently approved Elk Lake regulations for submission to council.

He said the municipality could not afford to put a police boat on the lake and will have to depend for enforcement upon public complaints and the efforts of lifeguards sworn in as special constables.

"But if we find in the early weeks of next season that the regulations are not being complied with we will have no alternative but to ban power boats, from Elk Lake," he added.

"We must stop the dangerous boat operators before they kill somebody."

"Hundreds of children use the lake for swimming and if they are not actually struck by a speeding boat they are going to be swamped by its wake and drowned."

The regulations approved by lands and planning committee and by the Elk Lake Ratepayers' Association bar power boats from the east side of the lake completely.

Victoria's complete election slate of 12 aldermanic and two mayoralty candidates have accepted invitations to speak at a Junior Chamber of Commerce civic forum to be held Dec. 4, a Jaycee official said yesterday.

Brian Small, chairman of the committee arranging the forum, said yesterday that "all signs point to a record attendance."

The forum will be held in the 2,000-seat Central Junior High School Auditorium commencing at 8 p.m.

Mayoralty candidates Mayor Percy Scurrell and J. Donald Smith will speak for 15 minutes each, and aldermanic candidates for five minutes each.

Retarded Pupils To Act As Hosts

Victoria Retarded Children's Association will hold an open house Tuesday at its school for retarded children, 1075 Joan Crescent. Mayor Percy B. Scurrell, members of the school board, and social workers in the Greater Victoria area will be guests of honor at the reception, which will be held from 2:30 to 4 p.m.

Pupils at the school will prepare and serve lunch to the guests.

Should Offer BCHIS Coverage

Gorge Road Hospital Warned by Martin

Victoria's controversy-ridden Gorge Road Hospital should be among the first in the province to offer BCHIS-covered chronic care, Health Minister Eric Martin said last night.

His statement came a short time after an official of the hospital said the Gorge Road staff was preparing to convert about half its 100-bed capacity to chronic patient treatment but that "planning has to be done in the dark" due to lack of details of government's proposal.

The health minister denied this, pointing out that all of the mechanics of the plan necessary for the hospital to anticipate its needs were released in 1957 and that the Gorge Road hospital has "at least one copy of this to my knowledge, and they can always come to us for more."

But he warned that hospital officials should understand that the federal government's interpretation of "chronic patients" will be that accepted by BCHIS if the legislature passes the program announced by Mr. Martin last month.

"They must understand that very clearly," he said, adding that the federal government, in its offer to contribute just under half of the cost of the program, makes a clear distinction between "chronic" cases and "terminal" cases.

In order to qualify for BCHIS chronic care coverage a patient will have to be able to respond to treatment or rehabilitation measures, Mr. Martin said.

Once qualified, a patient would pay the standard $1 a day fee for hospital care.

At present, once discharged from an acute care hospital, a chronic patient must pay the full cost of care in such hospitals as Gorge Road.

For this reason, Gorge Road hospital has never actually fulfilled one of the purposes for which it was built at a cost of nearly $500,000.

Polio Victims 'Still Serious'

Still in serious condition at the Royal Jubilee Hospital's polio treatment centre are three-year-old Gerald Rafter of Chemainus and Walter Hackwell, 30, of Port Alberni.

Six-year-old Robin Erickson of Lake Cowichan yesterday was transferred from isolation ward to the children's ward, while three other persons in isolation were reported to be "showing improvement."

Bertrand Ogden, 30, of West Coast Road, fully recovered from an attack of polio, was discharged from hospital several days ago.

The Rafter boy, suffering from respiratory paralysis and still in an iron lung, has had all three anti-polio shots. He received the last injection in November, 1957.

Lane Wants 'Bastion' To Become Victorian

A replica of a Victoria street in the 1860's is envisaged by tourist officials as part of scheme which would revitalize the historic Bastion Square area of the city.

Sam Lane, head of the Chamber of Commerce tourist trade group, said last night discussions have already been held with the provincial government with the aim of including the courthouse in the project.

He said the project would follow similar lines to the old Spanish section of Los Angeles, which has been recreated along a section of Olvera Street in the heart of the city.

"They have spent millions at Disneyland on buildings that take you back into the past," Mr. Lane said. "Here we have the original buildings still standing. But all we do is think of them as decrepit buildings that should be yanked down."

TV Missing From Store

A portable TV set valued at $250 has been missing for two months from a downtown furniture store, police learned yesterday.

Mr. & Mrs. 1400 Government, said the 1955 Philco set was "presumed stolen" from the store sometime after Sept. 15.

Attendants Wear Gowns Of Maple Leaf Brocade

St. Andrew's Cathedral was decorated with chrysanthemums for the wedding, last evening of Dorothy Erna Ochs to Mr. George Herbert Varley.

Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Ochs of 456 Niagara Street are parents of the bride. The groom is son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Varley, 5025 Santa Clara Avenue, Royal Oak.

Rev. Father M. O'Connell officiated at the ceremony and Mrs. William Rogers sang Ave Maria accompanied by Miss M. MacKay, organist.

The bridal gown had a fitted bodice of lace over satin with a scalloped lace panel set in the front of the skirt which was long and extended to a train. A crown bordered with tiny white pearls held a lace veil with an edging of inset lace roses. Spice roses and white feather carnations made up the bride's cascade bouquet.

Attendants were dressed in striking gowns of brocade with maple leaves over a white background. Their headresses were of sequined net and they carried bouquets of autumn toned chrysanthemums. Maid of honor was Miss Norma Ochs, sister of the bride. Miss Irma Kenkel of Vancouver and Miss Ann Cameron acted as bridesmaids.

Mr. Donald Gibson was best man with Mr. Robert Lindsay and Mr. Alvin Meyers as ushers.

At a reception in the White Eagle Hall, Mr. Jack North proposed a toast to the bride. When the newlyweds left for a honeymoon on the mainland, the bride was wearing a dress of peacock blue with matching hat and gloves and a chocolate brown coat with a rose corsage. Knitted Wear, Food Sell Fast at Bazaar

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church annual Christmas bazaar is always an outstanding event of the pre-holiday season and this year it was no exception.

Crowds started arriving before 2 o'clock when Mrs. Lillian Wilson, introduced Rev. J. L. McLean, officiated at the opening.

The Kirk Hall was decked out with cedar boughs, reindeer driven Santas and other colorful Yuletide decorations, the handiwork of Mrs. J. L. W. McLean who was there yesterday to receive the many guests.

The home cooking stalls laden with cakes, pies, cookies and other mouth-watering food, the home-made chocolates and fudge, preserves and delicatessen food was bloomed with customers until depleted.

Hand knitted garments, another well known specialty to be found at St. Andrew's bazaar, also found ready sales and without a doubt, many bought yesterday will find their way into Christmas gift packages.

There was a line-up all afternoon waiting to get into the roped off tea section where sandwiches and little cakes were of the usual high standard.

MEN AT WORK

The Couples Club with Mrs. G. Hedge, Mrs. A. McCoy and Mrs. D. Munro acting as hostesses, were in charge of the tea arrangements. Husbands were put to work in the kitchen and serving, speeding up things in general.

Proceeds of the tea go to the Club's project of buying a movie projector for the hall.

CONVENERS

The Fairfield Group with Mrs. J. R. Howard as convener looked after the home cooking section: Oak Bay Group, Mrs. W. Whyte, convener, candy; James Bay, Mrs. A. Crofts, superfluities; Lake Hill, Mrs. J. Robertson, aprons; Uplands, Mrs. F. A. Lindsay, miscellaneous; Beacon Hill, Mrs. Robert Green, knitted goods; Fernwood, Mrs. J. W. Cameron, needlework.

The men's stall where garden produce was sold had Mr. F. Yeomans in charge and Miss Pamela Bellak was in charge of the Young People's stall where decorated candles and novelties were offered for sale. The Explorer Group with Mrs. P. S. Watt in charge supplied surprise packages in the fish pond.

The grand total of approximately $1,200 was raised at the event and will go toward the building fund.

Effie Atkins Loves Hats and Horses

Miss Effie Atkins, busy at her work table creating a hat to enhance some woman's costume.

Odd Combination Proves Exactly What She Wants

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

Designing high fashion hats and breeding race horses may seem an odd combination to most people but not to Miss Effie Atkins.

She is one of those fortunate persons who are doing exactly what they want, for she loves hats and horses with an equal fervor.

Miss Atkins started her millinery career with the old David Spencer firm. Later, she opened her own shop on Douglas Street and now has moved to an attractive little place on Fisgard.

The tiny store, not much bigger than the average living room, and not as large as many, is a perfect foil for the feathers and furs that trim many of Miss Atkins' creations.

Soft Speech, Quiet Manner

The walls are light muted rose, the carpet almost an almond green that is repeated in the velvet-covered stools and the antiques furniture.

Tall and slim, slightly greying, Miss Atkins' soft speech and quiet manner somewhat belie her strong views on hats.

Miss Atkins, herself, dresses conservatively—and that goes for hats, too. However, even though she invariably wears a dark suit to business, a lovely Schaparelli pin at the neckline shows her flair for the "right touch."

The shape of the face is the first thing to consider when choosing a hat, according to Miss Atkins. For instance, broad cheekbones call for width in the crown and the opposite for a long, narrow face.

A basic line of symmetry is the initial aim when Miss Atkins starts creating a hat for an individual. The width and height of the forehead, the length of the face, and the shape of the jawline are all taken into consideration.

All-in-One-Piece Look

"It almost breaks my heart sometimes as I watch women on the street. So few look really well-dressed, you might say about a dozen out of 100 achieve that all-in-one-piece look," Miss Atkins says.

And, as Miss Atkins adds, "It certainly isn't the money that has been spent on an outfit."

Studying hat fashion magazines carefully is one good way to learn what type of hat goes with a face type, Miss Atkins thinks.

Now we'll leave Miss Atkins unpacking lovely swaths of pheasant feathers she cured herself, and take a peek at her private life and her horses.

Family Built Their Road

Her grandfather, Thomas Atkins, and her father, also Thomas, came to Victoria when the latter was 18. The family settled on property now bordered by Atkins Road—Miss Atkins' father and uncle literally made the road.

Thomas Atkins died at the age of 81, and although he subscribed to the Colonist during his lifetime, he never paid his bill more than once a year. It was a touchy subject when the paper changed collections to once a month, and led to more than one exchange of angry words—but the old man refused to change.

Miss Atkins has always loved horses, has kept them and looked after them herself. At present she has a mare, Susie C., who has won her share of races, and Susie's promising filly, Federal Lady. A life-long ambition of Miss Atkins is to go to the Dublin Horse Show. "I don't know why, but I would rather see the Dublin show than Ascot or any of them." But she wouldn't say she had any plans to put her ambition into action.

Mrs. E. D. Emery and her daughter, Miss Barbara Emery, choose attractive hats for the holiday season. The Emerys have recently returned from several months abroad, visiting in Italy, France and the British Isles.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hargreaves have been holidaying in Victoria at the Glenshiel Hotel since leaving their ranch at Mount Robson.

Bagged World Record For Big Horn Sheep

Visitors in Victoria this week taking a well-earned rest are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hargreaves.

The Hargreaves have recently sold their ranch at Mount Robson and are taking a holiday as the spirit moves them. They haven't any definite plans other than going to Oregon sometime this winter.

As far back as 1913, when Mr. Hargreaves was a contractor in Jasper, he used to take hunting parties out into the Mount Robson area during the season.

After serving in the First World War, Mr. Hargreaves came back to Canada and put into action something he had wanted to do for a long time. He moved permanently to Mount Robson, where he took up 1,000 acres bordering the national park and built his first log home.

MORE CABINS

Since that time the place has grown into a going concern. The original house still stands but now there are log cabins close by. There are more cabins 18 miles away on the shores of Berg Lake, where Tumbling Glacier moves icebergs into the water, making it so cold that fish can't live in it.

As the place has grown so have the Hargreaves' friends, until they are legion in number. During the years, Roy Hargreaves' fame as a big-game hunter has spread and he has been written up in Outdoor Life and other sports magazines.

FAMOUS NAMES

Early-day Hollywood moguls who came year after year for the hunting included Daryl Zanuck and Hal Roach, Sr.

Richard K. Mellon and Texas oil magnate Herb Kline were also regulars and James L. Clark of New York, one of the best-known taxidermists in the United States, was also a frequent visitor.

Ray Hargreaves is justly proud of holding the world's record for the largest bighorn sheep ever shot. L. S. Chadwick took the first shot but Hargreaves did the finishing job. The horns measured 52 1/2 inches and now are a source of wonder to visitors at the Museum of Natural History in New York.

More than a little reticent, Roy Hargreaves hesitated to recall any dangerous experiences but Mrs. Hargreaves came up with the story of the grizzly.

The last time Mrs. Hargreaves went out as cook on the trail, Mr. Hargreaves was taking along a Col. C. B. Hughes from Georgia. Hunting all morning, they sat on a rock in the sun while having lunch.

GRIZZLY CHARGES

Roy recalls turning to Col. Hughes and saying, "I can smell bear," and Hughes' rejoinder, "I can feel bear." The words were hardly out, when with a roar they saw a grizzly charging up the hill.

Roy jumped from the rock and made a dash for the horses, where the guns had been left—his only hope, the horses wouldn't bolt. Col. Hughes' thought was to throw his mackinaw, with his hat to follow, to stop the charge. Within 20 feet, the grizzly veered off into the woods, confused no doubt by the double action of the hunters.

And that, Roy says, is the only time he recalls that he was really on the spot.

Nancy Craig, Valerie Druce

Club Has Only Two Women Members

Numbers are not in proportion to the keenness of the Victoria Table Tennis Association, and although the membership ranges in age from teens to the 70's, the same bright spirit appears to prevail.

Men far outnumber the women players; in fact, at the present time, there are only two active women. However, they do their share in upholding the honor of the club, as Nancy Craig is Western Canada women's champion and eighth in the Canadian rankings. Valerie Druce, vice-president of VTTA, won the Western Canada doubles with Carl Cole and has number 13 for her Canadian ranking.

OLDEST PLAYER

George Clark believes he is the oldest active player in Canada at 72 years. He has won the veterans' championship about five times and now ranks seventh. Young Rick Gough won the Canadian championship two years ago for boys of 15 and under.

The Ngai brothers, Eddie and Art, are two of Victoria's best. Two years ago Art was named No. 2 man in Canada and Eddie now ranks fourth in the men's open.

Jim Davison joined the club when he came from England 12 years ago. He is now Victoria veterans' champion and runner-up in the Western Canada veterans' event.

APRIL TOURNEYS

At the wind-up of each season, tournaments are held in April. Last year's Centennial tournament was won by Portland player, Carl Cole.

Western Canada and B.C. tournaments alternate between Vancouver and Victoria, and this year Victoria will be host for the B.C. events. Players come from the Pacific Northwest and Western Canada.

MANY HOMES

The club, which was organized about 15 years ago, has had many homes—basement of the Strathcona Hotel, Crystal Garden, Gibson's, Westholme Hotel and the Sirocco—before moving to their present quarters.

Keith Olson is president of the club; Mrs. Druce, vice-president; Rick Kelsall, secretary, and Mrs. R. Gough, treasurer.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband was in an automobile accident two years ago and suffered a back injury. He was out of work for three weeks.

He has used that back injury ever since as an excuse to get out of mowing the lawn, raking leaves, carrying wood for fireplace and doing small chores around the house. I've never said one word about it.

Last night we attended a Moose Lodge affair. He got into a tap-dancing contest and won first place. He did a hand-spring, a back-flip and a few other fancy stunts that I never even knew he could do. Needless to say, I was very much surprised at his performance.

NOW do I have the right to insist he do a little manual labor around the house? Thank you.—THE CHAMP'S WIFE.

Dear Wife: Any man who can do a back-flip and a hand-spring has sufficiently recovered so that he should be able to rake a few light leaves.

Just tell the Champ that you can't present him with a silver cup for juggling the wood or mowing the lawn, but you hope he'll settle for a wifely thank you.

Going Steady Out

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please help us teenagers out by telling our parents that GOING STEADY does not mean we are on the verge of getting married?

All going steady means is a sure date to a big dance or party. In other words it is SECURITY. The girls who have steady dates are always certain they will not be left sitting at home no matter what comes along.

This letter is being written by four high school junior girls who are being driven buggy by old-fashioned parents. Please help us.—FOUR-LORN.

Dear Four-Lorn: Sorry, chickens, you came to the wrong place. I don't think much of going steady and I consistently urge teenagers to avoid it as they avoid the plague.

It may mean "social security" but you pay too big a price for it. When you go steady you limit yourself in important ways. You deny yourself the opportunity to learn how different types of human beings function. Wide-range dating enables you to learn to deal with a variety of personalities, moods and problems.

And going steady has a tendency to promote intimacy which could lead to trouble. Steadies get to feeling they "own" each other. It's tough to keep all the emotions in check when you have a possessive feeling about someone and see him day and night, to the exclusion of all others.

The chemistry of youth is potent—and the flesh is sometimes weak. The word from here is "No."

Are you going steady? Making marriage plans? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Before You Marry—Is It Love or Sex?", enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Stew Mighty Fine Pre-Holiday Fare

By LOUISE MOORE

Three cheers for a good beef stew.

It's a budget saver, and who isn't trying to keep down costs to keep up the Christmas spending?

Believe me, the festive season will be here before we know it and what with turkey and plum puddings, gift giving, Christmas cheer, etc., etc., we sure can make good use of those economy meat cuts and turn them into stews, meat pies, braised meats, etc., for a goodly saving in the food budget.

CHANGE NAME

If the children are inclined to turn up their noses at a stew, tag it with another name—a ragout, beef Burgundy—and dollars to doughnuts, they will lap it up—mind over matter, so to speak.

SAVORY BEEF STEW

Choose 1½ pounds of good stewing beef and cut it into 1½-inch pieces, removing any gristle and membrane. Put in a pot with 3 cups water, 2 sprigs parsley, ½ bay leaf, 2 celery sticks with leaves finely cut and 1½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. black pepper. Bring to simmer, cover and simmer gently until meat is almost tender. About 2 to 2½ hours. Add 3 potatoes peeled and halved unless they are small, 6 small onions peeled, 6 carrots scraped and cut in pieces unless they are very small, then leave them whole. Now you can take your choice and add 1 or more medium-sized parsnips cut in circles or after the vegetables have cooked 30 minutes or until tender, add 1½ cups, whole kernel corn and cook 10 minutes longer. Make paste of 2 tbsp. flour and 3 tbsp. water and gradually add to stew. Stir constantly until thickened and smooth.

One cup red wine may be substituted for beef Burgundy.

The Glamour Trail

Billions of dollars are spent every year by men and women trying to improve their appearance. One of the most practical ways of enhancing your appearance is to wear the correct frames. You should have several pairs for different uses. Call in at one of our offices listed below where you will find a wide variety of becoming styles to choose from.

708 VIEW, at Douglas

By Harry Juster

Clothes Make Your Man

Dear Mr. Juster: I always go with my husband when he buys a suit. Invariably the coat will have wrinkles in the chest and back. The tailor always tries to explain that the way it's supposed to be. If it were up to my husband, he'd take it, wrinkles and all.

But I insist on having these breaks removed. Don't you think I'm right in demanding this?—MRS. T.R.M.

Yes, if your husband were as stationary as a park statue. He has a habit of bending, twisting and turning. A smooth, wrinkle-free coat just can't give the freedom needed in our normal movements. Demand a good fit, but forget the few wrinkles. He has to live in his clothes, not pose in them.

Dear Mr. Juster: My husband went shopping by himself and came home with an Ivy League suit—charcoal color with a faint plaid pattern. He's 44 and looks his age, though he is tall and well-proportioned. Now he's worried for fear at his age Ivy is wrong for him. What is your frank opinion?—MRS. J.L.F.

A man's proportions should be the basis for the style he selects, not his age. I've seen men 20 years younger in Ivy who'd do well to forget it because of short, stocky builds. Ivy styling with its natural shoulders, high button spacing and straight hanging design looks best on a tall, well-proportioned man. He's doing all right shopping by himself.

FIT IMPORTANT

Dear Mr. Juster: For years I've worn size 11B shoes. Recently I went into a shop for a shoe I saw in the window. The clerk said "B" widths were unnecessary so they never carried them. First he tried to sell me a 10½C, then an 11C. Provoked, I walked out. Actually have "B" widths been dropped?

If you're buying stretch socks, size is no worry. Shoes aren't made that way—yet! Fit is important. True, in some instances a different width than normally worn may work out. However, for any store to ignore completely a width that you and many men wear makes about as much sense as a shirt department not offering half sizes. Shop where you'll be fit properly.

Dear Mr. Juster: I have heard and read many reasons why a man should dress well. To me the only reason I have for dressing as well as I can is that it makes me feel better and gives me a feeling of security. Don't you think this is the best reason?—E.S.

I can't think of a better one. Looking better makes you feel better. Knowing that you look well dressed to others develops poise and a certain assurance. Thanks for your letter. You put the case for dressing well into simple, easy-to-understand language.

TIP FOR THE DAY

Now's the time to jot down the sizes the men in your family wear. Take a peek at their shirts, pajamas, gloves, slippers and other items. List the various sizes and keep in your purse. You'll avoid disappointments on Christmas morning and save yourself the chore of making exchanges.

Next week: The difference between being overdressed and well dressed.

Wedding Dec. 6

Mr. and Mrs. Munshi Singh Juhl of 2311 Blanshard Street, wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Ranjit (Randy) to Gurdev Sangara, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Singh Sangara, 1275 Mitchell Road, Vancouver, B.C. Wedding will take place Dec. 6.

Pulp and paper manufacture is Newfoundland's leading industry, with shipments valued at $63,000,000 in 1957.

Reception Follows Old Country Style

An Old Country formal wedding breakfast held at the Villa Marina, followed the recent wedding of Doreen Margaret Halme to Mr. Ross Harvey Sheldon.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Halme of New Highlands Apartments, Haultain Street, are parents of the bride. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marten Sheldon of 857 Victoria Avenue.

The doubling ceremony took place in the First Baptist Church.

The bride wore a floor-length gown, princess style, of cameo pink with a bodice of embroidered lace. Rosettes of lace, encrusted with tiny seed pearls, edged a scooped neckline. A flared skirt of ribbed nylon taffeta, was appliqued with lace. A bandeau held her veil and her jewelry was a gold necklace and earrings, inset with seed pearls. Red roses and stephanotis formed her bouquet.

Sister of the groom, Miss Carell Sheldon, attended the bride, in a short gown of embroidered green organza, matching shoes and headress. Her bouquet was of pale pink carnations.

Mr. Marten Sheldon was groomsman. Mr. Robert Halme and Mr. William Johnson acted as ushers.

For her going-away outfit, the new Mrs. Sheldon chose a hyacinth blue wool suit and grey accessories.

After a honeymoon at Brenta Lodge the newlyweds will live at Westchester Apartments, Fort Street.

Rich Plotted to Grab 'Madman' Roosevelt

NEW YORK (AP) — Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. says some wealthy Americans plotted to make a captive of President Franklin D. Roosevelt at the time of his third-term election in 1940.

In an autobiography to be published Monday, Vanderbilt says that rich industrialists and others, who met around fashionable dinner tables in New York, Newport and Washington, conspired to get "that man" out of the White House by force.

"I use the word conspiracy," Vanderbilt writes. "I really am talking of a plot — a serious, long-discussed plan to — shall I say — capture the president."

A precipitating motive, Vanderbilt says, was to prevent Roosevelt interfering with chances for large profits in the developing war crisis.

Vanderbilt, a writer, an associate of Roosevelt, and himself a member of a wealthy society family, says he was privy to discussions among the anti-Roosevelt financial group that "really meant business."

"I heard here and there, and bit by bit, pieces that fitted together," he says, and finally concluded "a real conspiracy" was afoot. He said some of the group once met at his mother's home.

But he says they never went through with the scheme, after he was allowed to tip them off that Roosevelt and the FBI knew about it.

The FBI had no comment to make when informed of the story in Vanderbilt's book, but U. E. Baughman, chief of the Secret Service which guards presidents, said he had never heard of such a plot.

The Secret Service chief at the time Vanderbilt says the plot was hatched, Frank J. Wilson, now retired, also said he had no recollection of such a scheme.

Recounting the alleged plot in "The Man of the World: My Life on Five Continents," Vanderbilt writes:

"The idea was to impose a firm restraint, for the good of the country; to hold this dictator, this madman—well cared for, of course; well treated, but well guarded—while sane

'Overhaul' Labor Department

A new and better labor department is needed in British Columbia and a workable labor-management law should be devised, says Glen McMaster, chairman of the provincial Progressive Conservative labor-management policy committee.

A report prepared by Mr. McMaster calling for a public inquiry into all aspects of labor problems in B.C. was presented to the Oak Bay Progressive Conservative Association.

The report calls for an inquiry into the practices of both labor and management, and at the same time affirmed "the right of employers to the lockout and the employees to the strike," subject to limitations of public interest and governed by new legislation.

"Distrust is bred in both parties under existing B.C. labor legislation. The Industrial Conciliation Act, in the hands of the present B.C. department of labor, needs an overhaul," the report says.

Western RED CEDAR Bevel SIDING

"Keystone" clear kiln dried siding is the finest available — a quality material for all applications where perfection is required.

With its "grow-in" workability, weather resistance and lasting good looks, "Keystone" clear Western Red Cedar Siding has long been recognized as the standard of quality home construction.

It has a distinctive "shadow line" which enhances any architectural style in any setting, and is used to create a variety of interesting decorative effects on indoor surfaces as well as exterior.

5 GRADES

"CLEAR" Bevel SIDING

Siding of this grade is designed for use where perfection is demanded. It is well milled on face and edges, making a smooth surface, usable in length without waste, and wider siding is vertical grain (V.G.) for a thick edge or from thick edge.

"A" Bevel SIDING

Siding of this grade is selected for use where exceptionally fine appearance is desired. It is usable full length without waste and may be mixed grain (M.G.).

"B" Bevel SIDING

Appearance slightly approaching that of the higher grades is often achieved with siding of this grade which contains slightly more characteristics and some cuttings in longer pieces. Craftsmen of even moderate skill find it easy to apply. It may be mixed grain (M.G.).

"C" Bevel SIDING

Pieces of this grade have one or more characteristics which are such size or number that the piece is not of a higher grade. It is a random grade with no specified percentages.

BRIDGE QUIZ

Before opening the bidding, be sure to consider your rebid potential. Basic rules must sometimes be broken to insure a convenient rebid. For instance, with a minimum hand
you may open a strong four-card major in preference to a five-card minor — bearing in mind that a reverse bidding a lower-ranking suit, followed by a higher-rank suit at a higher level would indicate considerable strength.

The bidding:

"The government must define what it means by the word 'chronic,'" Mr. Perrault said.

Moralist Dickens 'Lived in Sin' To Protect Child

LONDON (AP) — A distinguished actor charged yesterday that Charles Dickens, the great moralist of Victorian fiction, lived in sin with a pretty actress and flouted the law to hide the birth of their illegitimate child.

The accusation came from Felix Aylmer, a star of the London theatre for more than 40 years, in a book called Dickens Incognito.

It has for some years been accepted that Dickens near the end of his life was in love with Ellen Ternan, an actress of great beauty, and would have married her if divorce from his wife had been possible.

Aylmer claims to have established beyond doubt that Dickens in fact lived with her as man and wife in Slough, 25 miles west of London.

He takes his evidence from a cryptic diary for 1867 which Dickens lost in New York. It now is in the Berg collection of the New York Public Library.

Aylmer went to Slough and by studying rent books and local tax records, found that Dickens lived there with Ellen Ternan under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Tringham.

He then investigated a diary entry for April 13, 1867. It said: "At SL at 2 1/2 arrival." He took this to mean the arrival of a child at 2.30 that afternoon.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal space agency has blamed the premature release of a protective nose shroud for Thursday's moon shot failure at Cape Canaveral.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said fragments of the 372-pound payload, which was supposed to go in orbit around the moon, were found on the Atlantic beaches about a mile from the launching pad.

Washington Outraged

Marine Tied, Beaten By Red Chinese

BOMBAY, India (UPI) — U.S. Marine Corps Sgt. Robert Armstrong of Martinez, Calif., was seized, held for five hours and beaten when he followed a turn-about Communist defector into the grounds of the Red Chinese Consulate-General Friday.

The state department in Washington called the affair a "high-handed, outrageous thing."

Indian police later rescued the American sergeant.

The Communist official first had asked for asylum in the United States consulate-general here, made a tape recording about his views, and then changed his mind and went back to the Reds.

Armstrong thought he had stolen the consulate-general's tape recorder and had stepped inside the Red Chinese grounds when he was seized and bound.

A consulate-general official said that Armstrong was held for five hours in the Chinese Communist consulate garage and beaten with his hands tied behind his back.

Eight-Inch-Long Rat Bites Baby in Crib

MONTREAL (CP) — An 18-month-old boy was treated in hospital Thursday after being savagely bitten on the face and hand by a rat while he slept in a crib beside his parents' bed.

Young Richard Cantwell was treated at Montreal Children's Hospital and then allowed to go home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Cantwell. He had three bites on his right hand and three over his right eye.

The Cantwells were awakened early Thursday morning by their baby's screams.

"As we looked into the crib," Mr. Cantwell said, "we saw a black rat, about eight inches long, jump to the floor and run out of the room."

The Cantwell $38-a-month apartment is in a depressed area of Montreal, commonly known as "Goose Village," an area near the slaughterhouses.

Ike Great Leader Mountbatten Says

LONDON (UPI) — Earl Mountbatten, Britain's top-ranking military official, Wednesday night came to the defence of President Eisenhower's record as supreme allied commander during the Second World War.

Speaking at an American Thanksgiving Day dinner, Earl Mountbatten called Eisenhower a "great commander" and asked: "Who else on the allied side, or on the other side, could possibly have done the job that General Eisenhower did as supreme allied commander?"

He said Eisenhower must have felt terribly alone when the time came to give the order to invade France on D-Day with the greatest invasion force in history.

"He gave the word to go, and I believe that single order was one of the greatest orders anyone was called upon to give, and history has shown how right that decision was," Mountbatten said.

Toy Auction Will Swell Christmas Fund for Needy

Each time the auctioneer's gavel falls at Maynard & Sons Dec. 19, Christmas will become a little brighter for the 500 most needy families in Greater Victoria.

The occasion will be the annual Christmas toy auction, run by Art Roberts, Jr., and Colonist carrier boys to raise funds for The Daily Colonist 500 Christmas Fund.

This will be the fourth straight year that the younger Roberts has taken over auctioneering duties at Maynard's for the 500 fund. Last year, response was so great that two auctions were held instead of one. This year the auction has been set for 1 p.m.

All toys auctioned off will be donated by the public. Old toys gathering dust in your closet now could mean the difference between a dreary and a merry Christmas for the 500 families helped by the fund.

Toys may be left at Maynard's any time between now and Dec. 19. Those wishing to donate toys are urged to turn them in as soon as possible. New and used toys of all types are urgently needed.

There are two ways in which toys will be auctioned off. On toys donated, the entire price received will be turned over to the fund. If people wish to sell their toys at auction, the regular auctioneer's percentage goes to the fund.

Roberts, who ran his first toy auction when he was 15, is coming back to Victoria from University of British Columbia to take over again this year.

Meanwhile, as plans for the toy auction are put into motion, cash donations to the fund continue to come in at a steady rate.

Donations, which are deductible for income tax purposes, may be sent to "The Daily Colonist 500 fund, 2831 Douglas Street." They may also be left at that address or at the downtown business office, 1215 Broad Street.

Coach Flays Quarterback

Bernie Faloney Grey Cup Goat?

Bombers Bubble Over

TORONTO—He wouldn't say so publicly but Hamilton coach Jim Trimble apparently places much of the blame for his Tiger-Cats' 21-7 loss to Winnipeg in the Grey Cup game yesterday on quarterback Bernie Faloney. (See pictures, story on Page 12.)

"We had a spotty performance offensively," he said after the game. "I'm not naming any names, so don't ask me."

But late in the game, after Faloney was thrown for a 16-yard loss on a passing attempt, Trimble was overheard telling the quarterback angrily:

"I thought you were supposed to be a professional quarterback. Why don't you play like one?"

To reporters, the coach, beaten by Winnipeg's Blue Bombers for the second straight year, had this explanation:

10 MINUTES
"They played 10 minutes of good football in the fourth quarter and that beat us. Their depth, youth and overall balance beat us, and we're an older ball club."

In the gloomy Hamilton dressing room, Faloney would only say he didn't think the score reflected the play. He did add the Bombers "were rougher and tougher than last year, but at half time I thought we had the game."

CHAMPAGNE

Over in the Bombers' bubbling headquarters, manager Jim Ausley was handing a bottle of champagne to each player as he came in and 10-year tackle and captain Buddy Tinsley, one of the heroes, was shouting:

"This was the greatest one ever. I guess they taste sweeter each time."

Players were pouring champagne over each other's heads as coach Bud Grant described Tinsley's recovery of a fourth-quarter fumble—with the help of defensive tackle Roger Savoie—as the turning point.

"It was tough up until then," Grant muttered. "Tinsley played the greatest game of his career. He was the top man out there, but they were all great."

WRITERS DISAGREE
Sportswriters from across Canada who covered the game disagreed with Grant, picking Charlie Shepard as the outstanding player because of his booming kicks and his winning touchdown, a score set up by Tinsley's recovery.

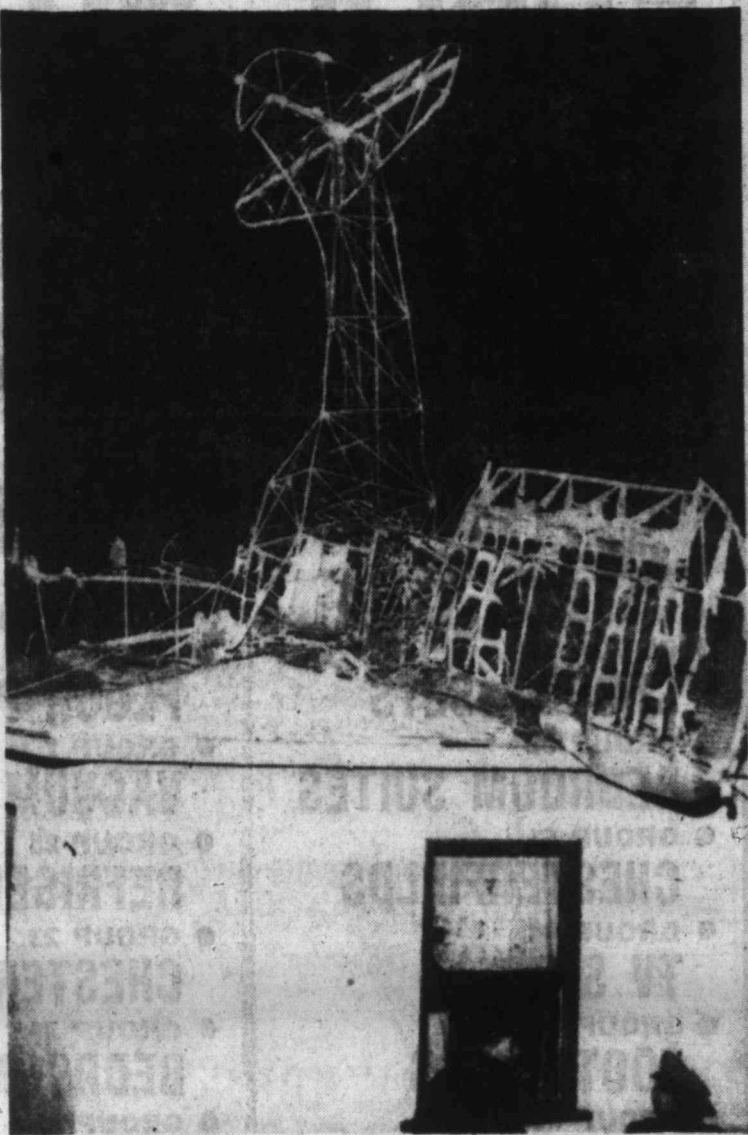

Shepard, who won a sports car as a result of the vote, said modestly: "Sure I had a good game, but I'm not really excited. The wind made my punting look better than it is and I had a lot of lucky bounces."

MR. YOUNG BONES
Kenny Poon, a star at quarterback and defensive safety, kept looking at Tinsley and shouting his nickname: "Good old Mr. Young Bones."

Far into the night, Bomber backers parted their way through downtown Toronto, stopping anywhere for impromptu parades, singings and celebrations with "liquid."

Police reported no vandalism. Hailed as the expert of all football experts was Winnipeg sports editor Jack Matheson.

Matheson, who gained a national fame this year by swapping places with a clergyman for a week, did it again by predicting on the front page of his newspaper Friday that the final score for the 50th anniversary Grey Cup game would be Winnipeg 21, Hamilton 7.

Sleeping Family Safe and Sound

Court Helps Bookie

VANCOUVER (CP)—Magistrate Gordon Scott helped a bookie Saturday to live up to his business ethics.

When Sidney Miller, 54, asked for the return of records seized by police so he could pay off his losses, the magistrate ordered police to give him a copy of his list of bets.

He also fined Miller $200.

Elephant In Politics?

MANILA (AP)—A year-old 700-pound elephant presented to Manila's new city zoo by Premier Sarit Thanarat of Thailand tried to toss Mayor Arsenio Lacson into a nearby moat during presentation ceremonies. Lacson, a former boxer who weighs in at 150, twice sidestepped and parried with a left before the elephant's trainer broke it up. "He must belong to the opposition," quipped the mayor.

Scurrah Annoyed

Vancouver After Island Ship Jobs

Mayor Percy Scurrah last night criticized what he described as "attempts to put the interests of one West Coast shipyard before the others" by a Vancouver delegation which is scheduled to meet Prime Minister Diefenbaker tomorrow in Ottawa.

The delegation, headed by Mayor Tom Alsbury, in a brief for presentation to the government, hits at the "disproportionate" number of civilian employees engaged in naval refit work at HMC Dockyard, Esquimalt.

It also calls on the government to abandon its present "policy" of confining to Victoria shipyards that portion of naval refit work which is let to private industry.

Mayor Scurrah said the Vancouver brief represents a departure from "the policy we have followed in the past of talking about the West Coast shipbuilding industry as a whole."

"At this time, when our shipbuilding industry is fight-

Soldier Killed In Gaza

OTTAWA (CP)—Army officials announced Saturday night that a Canadian soldier was shot and killed earlier in the day when a United Nations emergency force patrol was ambushed in the Middle East.

An army spokesman identified the soldier as Trooper Ronald Hawthorne Allan of Halifax, a member of the Royal Canadian Dragoons Reconnaissance Squadron.

Location and the details of the shooting were not known in Ottawa immediately. The squadron has been based in the Gaza Strip area.

The army said Trooper Allan was killed while on a border patrol.

An army spokesman said there was no word in the initial message received in Ottawa of any further Canadian casualties.

U.K. Cardinal

Moral Control Needed

LONDON (Reuters)—William Cardinal Godfrey, Roman Catholic archbishop of Westminster, called yesterday for government control of entertainment media to combat a threat of increased morality and dishonesty.

The cardinal said in a pastoral letter read in London churches that "a strong legislator would put aside all timidity and remove these corroding influences from our minds."

He warned that the public, particularly young persons, will start to regard as fairly normal conduct the portrayals of killings and shootings... infidelity in marriage, illegitimate children, dishonesty and the like...

"No doubt there would be the usual outcry against what would be called interference with personal freedom, yet this is simply the empty clamor of those who love license rather than a freedom worthy of the name."

Sired 27, Hankers For Twins

OWENTON, Ky. (AP)—Perry McComas is proud of his new daughter born here Saturday, but he wishes she had been twins.

"One thing I always desired was twins and they never did arrive," he said.

But children did arrive one by one—the new baby is the 27th.

Twenty-three of McComas' children are living, including all 12 born to his present wife, Euthena, 38.

Cherry Home at Last

"Naughty Cherry" is what Miss Jessie Read, 1762 Pembroke Street, is telling the errant pheasant whose 13-day escapade on the town made bird-watchers out of thousands of Victorians (and fools out of many who tried to recapture it). Miss Read finally made the capture herself, with corn-baited trap in garden of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Gottfred, 1607 Belmont.—(William A. Boucher photo.)

'Must Be Warped'

City SPCA Joins Dog Killer Hunt

Two SPCA inspectors from Victoria are being sent to investigate the poisoning deaths of 17 dogs in the Duncan area during the past month.

William A. Leach, president of the SPCA branch here, said last night he is satisfied the deaths are the work of "a crank or dog hater."

"It is a very serious offence under the Criminal Code of Canada to lay poison in such a manner that it can be taken by pets or children," Mr. Leach said.

"Our inspectors will cooperate with RCMP in the investigation and when this sadistic-minded person is caught we will not hesitate to lay charges."

Meanwhile, in Duncan, Ald. Steve Saunders said he will suggest to Duncan city councilors tomorrow that they do something to advance chances of catching the person or persons responsible for the poisonings.

"No person who is in his right mind would do a thing like this," Ald. Saunders said. "The person must be warped."

His own dog, a golden cocker spaniel, is one of only two dogs alive of at least five that were poisoned on Wednesday.

Duncan SPCA inspector Harold Orrick said no poisonings were reported to him yesterday. His records show 15 of the 17 poisoned animals died.

Tear Gas Thwarts Violence

PANAMA (AP)—Panamanian and U.S. army troops joined forces Saturday night and staved off a menacing mob of anti-American demonstrators seeking to march on the Panama Canal Zone.

The thwarted mob turned back to spread mob rule within Panama city.

"Gringo, go home," the demonstrators cried at the boundary. They burned Uncle Sam in effigy and stoned U.S. soldiers.

Tear gas and fire hoses were brought into play at one point on the broad Fourth of July Avenue, which marks the line between Panama and the U.S.-run canal zone.

BEATEN BACK

The gas and water beat back a crowd of about 100 demonstrators, mostly youths, trying to plant a Panamanian flag in the zone on the 136th anniversary of the country's independence from Spain.

Eyewitnesses said the tear gas was fired by Panamanian troops while Americans manned the fire hoses.

But the Panamanian national guard insisted that Americans fired the tear gas.

WINDOW SMASHED

Violence broke out on Central Avenue, the main thoroughfare. National guard headquarters said hoodlums shattered the window of a fashionable department store. Windows also were broken in the adjoining building of the Chase Manhattan Bank and at the All-American Cables of fices.

'Should War Develop...'

BOMBAY, India (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru said Saturday India will not "swerve from the path of peace" but does not intend "to bow to anyone who interferes with our national integrity."

Nehru told 20,000 people at a public meeting that should war ultimately develop "every one of you will have to be prepared and every home and every place of work would become a centre of preparation for that war effort."

Letters to the Editor

Money Wasted

I am the parent of three children and I know how much it costs to have dental care for these children. Fluoridation, for a few cents each year, will decrease a great deal of this dental decay and allow our children better health. This money which is literally wasted could be diverted to useful purposes in our community rather than to the wasteful purchase of valueless dental extractions and fillings. I am very surprised that Victoria businessmen have not conducted an all-out campaign to foster fluoridation as this money, now spent for dental repair work, could be spent in our local shops for many articles.

Our children are being denied an essential factor in our water and thereby have great amounts of dental decay. Every parent, and every grandparent should militantly campaign for fluoridation. No effort should be spared in instituting fluoridation in Greater Victoria. Business can place its part too and will be well advised to fully endorse this most worthwhile measure.

(MRS.) A. W. TASSELL

394 Lamson Street.

Misleading Statement

From Dr. McLuhan's statement: "Fluoridation is not mass-medication because medication implies a cure and fluoridation is in the nature of a preventative." True, it is intended to be a preventative and a preventive is a prophylactic. Cassell's New English Dictionary gives the following "Prophylactic. a. protecting against disease; preventive. n. a preventive medicine."

In view of this authoritative definition, I maintain that Dr. McLuhan's statement is quite incorrect and, whether intended to be or not, very misleading.

E. M. MOORE.

686 St. Patrick Street.

Safer and Easier

I think Mr. C. H. Lanigan is quite right. There should be no vote. Each child can be fluoridated right now. Individual treatment is many times cheaper, more effective, safer and easier to control than mixing the medicine into the water needed for gardening, bathroom, washing purposes and fire-extinguishing.

On this continent 165,000,000 inhabitants quite obviously think so, too, and I hope that Victoria as a tourist centre will side with this big majority.

(MRS.) ELIZABETH SCHULER.

I got quite a jolt this morning (Nov. 26) whilst reading the Colonist and taking my cup of "Lipton's Fluoride" when I saw the ad by our very much looked-up-to Symphony Society proclaiming and featuring the production shortly of the "glorious" music of Oklahoma, in large print, then in small type, also, several words by the great masters; then all of this over the respected name of Mr. Hans Gruber.

Surely the person responsible for the using of the word "glorious" as applied to Oklahoma did so without reference to his dictionary.

W. H. F. COX.

9 Boyd Street.

Opportunity to Eat

With reference to the article in the Nov. 24 Colonist, "Keep out N.Z. Lamb," I think that the government has responsibilities to the consumers (who are also taxpayers) to give them an opportunity to eat.

It seems to me that if our sheep farmers cannot compete with New Zealand (who have the freight to consider added to their prices) they either have not the know-how or wish to make a fortune quickly.

If the farmers and butchers say they are not making fortunes, I would suggest that the government make every effort to find out where the leakage is between producer and consumer.

P. RAYNER.

145 Cadillac Avenue.

At Expense of Freedom

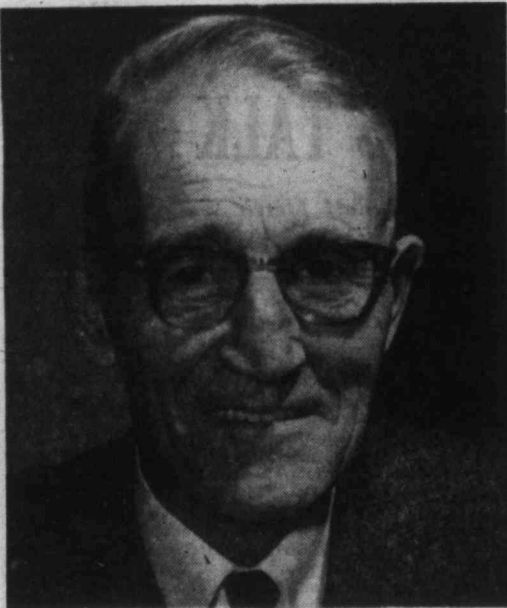

Are proponents of fluoridation under the impression that adding fluorine to our water supply is something like adding chlorine? Nothing could be more wrong. Chlorine is a purifying agent. Fluorine would be added to our water to act as a medicine—a so-called deterrent to decay in the teeth of children.

All our water supply would be fluoridated. Yet only about 1 per cent is used for drinking purposes. Not more than one-seventh of the part drunk is consumed by young children. It would appear, that 99 per cent of the cost of fluoridation goes down the drain.

All parents wish to ensure that their children have good teeth, but must it be done at the expense of freedom of individual choice? At a cost of 24 cents per child per year tablets containing the recommended daily dose could be dispensed to those desiring them. It must be said here that proper feeding of children (a minimum of white sugar and its products) has had a proven excellent effect on the teeth.

HOWARD GREEN . . . heads will turn

Policy Acquires Character

When Canada Speaks Whole World Listens

By PHILIP SYKES

When 64-year-old Howard Green lands in Paris on Dec. 13 for the NATO council meeting that overlaps the Big Three's "western summit" diplomatic heads will turn. He will be noticed.

For two months of intensive diplomacy by the man who likes to be called Canada's "foreign minister" have made it impossible for him—or Canada—to be ignored.

Recapitulate the issues that have dominated world politics in these months—and you'll find not one in which Canada has had no voice.

On Sept. 24, Howard Green in his first major speech before the UN General Assembly, called for a dynamic drive to shut down the refugee camps of Europe. He climaxed it with a dramatic offer to admit 100 tubercular people from those camps to Canada.

On Oct. 7 Green detailed to the world a Canadian plan for a worldwide study of the effects on humanity of deadly radiation—a plan that has been adopted without opposition by the United Nations.

On Oct. 21 he let it be known that Canadian dollars would back the program.

On Oct. 28, the career diplomats who work under Green played a key role in lobbying support for a historic resolution—when Russia joined the West in a declaration on disarmament.

Then, Green bustled off to Europe. He stiffened the morale of the NATO permanent council work. He studied the baffling complex of Europe's rival trade groups, bluntly asked President de Gaulle to call off his bomb test, talked summitry with Macmillan, strategy with NATO's Norstad.

Back in Ottawa on Nov. 4, he shook the platitude-mongers of the West with a flat declaration of his independence.

Canada was backing Communist Poland for a seat on the UN Security Council—it seemed logical to Canada to be a natural step after Camp David. If the U.S. and Britain were backing rival Turkey, so what?

"We won't have our arm twisted by anybody," snapped Green.

On Nov. 11, he made a public statement of Canada's "strong opposition" to the French A-bomb test.

On Nov. 16, he put into words what many Western diplomats had thought but hesitated to say. He asked for a thorough-going UN debate on the victimized youth of Hungary—a request that came to fruition in the steering committee last week.

What has' all this activity achieved? It has made Green a man to be listened to in world councils because Canadian policy-making has acquired a character—tough, independent, co-operative and constructive.

Dead Sea Scrolls Controversy

Was There More Than One Messiah?

By ARYE WALLENSTEIN From Jerusalem

A restoration of one of the Dead Sea Scrolls that would attribute to a pre-Christian belief in a single Messiah—a Son of God—has been disputed by Dr. Yigael Yadin, one of Israel's leading scholars in the field of Dead Sea literature.

The scroll in question is described as "one of the most tantalizing of the whole Qumran literature," probably because it is believed to contain the only reference to a Christ-like Redeemer begotten by God.

Two gaps and a blurred word constitute the point of contention between Dr. Yadin and other scholars about the reading of the age-beaten leather scroll, preserved for 20 centuries in one of the Qumran caves near the Dead Sea until its discovery with the other pre-Christian writings after the Second World War.

The scroll, known to scholars as "1WSA," deals with a ceremonial to be observed on Messianic days. Eminent scholars such as M. D. Barthelemy and Frank Cross of Chicago have filled the gaps and deciphered the blurred word to make the texts refer to a single Messiah and to the whole ceremony being dependent upon the begetting of THE Messiah by God.

On the other hand, Dr. Yadin's alternative restoration of the gaps and blur make the disputed passage refer not to one Messiah but to two.

He argues that his reading of the ancient original Hebrew, unlike those of Barthelemy and Cross, is not in contradiction to the known beliefs and creeds of the Dead Sea sect, whose writings repeatedly refer both to a priestly Messiah and to a lay Messiah.

This controversy serves as an illustration of the minute examination to which the Dead Sea Scrolls are being submitted.

In Jerusalem, two groups of scholars are studying the scrolls.

One group, in the Jordanian part of the divided city, is an international team headed by Pere Roland de Vaux, a French Dominican priest, who supervises the publication of the fragments of scrolls and leads the periodic expeditions to the Qumran ruins. Other noted scholars of the team are the Polish-born Father Joseph Milik and Cross, who is a Presbyterian.

Across the border is the Israeli group of scholars in the Hebrew University to whom the scrolls are a national treasure. Communication between the two groups is prevented because of the continuing hostility between Jordan and Israel.

Only seven scrolls, but perhaps some of the best preserved, now are in the hands of Israeli scholars.

These comprise two Isaiah scrolls, the Habakkuk Commentary, the Thanksgiving Hymns, the War of the Sons of Light against the Sons of Darkness, the Manual of Discipline and the Genesis Apocryphon.

All have been published in full except a part of the Genesis scroll, which has still to be deciphered. The Israeli scholars believe that the undeciphered columns deal with the story of the Flood and Noah's Ark and are amplified versions of Chapters VI-XI of the Old Testament book of Genesis.

While the scrolls now in Israel were discovered in 1947, the region of the Dead Sea has since yielded additional treasures, most of which are in the Jordanian side of Jerusalem. As yet, only a small fraction of the many thousands of fragments of scroll have been published. Reports indicate that at least three almost-complete scrolls are due for publication.

These are said to be a Book of Psalms, an apocryphal Book of the New Jerusalem and an Aramaic translation of the Book of Job.

Cars
Dog

DUNCAN—A stray dog caused $600 damage to two cars here yesterday and didn't have a hair on its head bothered.

It was walking across Lakes Road at about 10:30 a.m. when C. E. Skovgard-Anderson of Stamps Road, came around a bend, and slowed.

Police said Ysbrand Poland of Bell-McKinnon Road, was following Skovgard-Anderson, pulled out to pass, and saw the dog when he started to pass.

Poland tried not to hit the dog, swerved, and came in collision with the rear of Skovgard-Anderson's car which was driven into the ditch.

An independent witness told police the dog was not injured.

Old Bridge to Go

Fulford Span
To Be Bigger

FULFORD HARBOR—Within a few weeks a new bridge will replace the old one at Fulford.

Work begins tomorrow under the direction of highways dept. engineer Arnold Glover of Nanaimo.

WIDER, LONGER

The new bridge will measure about 22 feet in width—four feet wider than the old structure—and will be somewhat longer, about 50 feet.

The new span over Fulford Creek will be placed in the same position as the old one. Heavy timbers for the bridge were delivered by George Huish of Fulford, and were piled alongside the road.

CREW ARRIVES

Some of the bridge crew arrived on Wednesday with much of the heavy equipment, including the huge tool shed. The trucks came from Nanaimo, over the Malahat and across to Fulford by the Mv. Motor Princess from Swartz Bay.

TEMPORARY SPAN

A one-way bridge will be put up on the inner side of the old bridge and when completed the old one will be torn out to make way for the new.

50 YEARS OLD

The present bridge is over 50 years old. It was the second bridge to be built at Fulford, as in the late 1800's there was a longer, narrower bridge, which extended along the banks to near St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church. Heavy seas during winter storms washed away the ground and the present, shorter bridge was built about 1904.

TIMBERS REPLACED

Timbers have been replaced at intervals, but it is still the old, original second bridge, and all types of transport have crossed its wooden structure.

First resident minister came in 1875, and the first church was built on the present site in 1892. Presbyterians and Methodists used it until 1907 when the Presbyterians built their own church. The present building was built in 1941 and enlarged in 1954.

Warning Issued

Phoney Salesman

DUNCAN—Police have issued a warning against taxpayers being taken in by magazine salesmen who state they are working their way through college.

They said homeowners should demand credentials and business licences to prove salesmen are working for a company and not putting subscription money in their own pockets.

Officials said their remarks were prompted after a city doctor was told by a salesman that he was a medical student at the University of B.C. The doctor called the university and was told the salesman was not a student.

Encore Merchant Drops Meringue For Meaty Music

By KEN WINTERS

PARIS (Special)—The musical season here, like most musical seasons, is mainly a celebration of standard fare, one big festival of established masterpieces. But this past week two concerts gave the 20th century an innings.

Tuesday Darius Milhaud led the Orchestra National in a program of his own works; and Friday Pierre Boulez, possibly the most admired composer of Europe's far-out avant garde, and a fine conductor as well, marshalled the Southwest-funk Orchestra of Baden-Baden through a 3½-hour stretch of music by Stravinsky, Schoenberg, Bartok, and two of their heirs presumptive: Luciano Berio and Roman Haubenstock-Ramati.

The Milhaud concert might have surprised the many Canadians who know this composer only through too many performances of his "Scaramouche Suite."

As the 67-year-old composer-conductor came onto the stage, walking with two canes, his great pale face jutting forward with the effort of negotiating the distance between wings and podium, he was greeted with applause that expressed much affection and respect.

I saw the reason for the quality of this applause when he seated himself before his players and launched a crisp, controlled reading of his Eighth Symphony.

This work is something very much finer than the meringue-like trifles of Milhaud the encores merchant, or those tedious, factory-made "premiere" pieces with which he floods the banks of the summer festivals. It was alive from beginning to end.

It has a grotesque, thin, complicated first movement, a poised, harmonious slow section, a tumbling scherzo, and a finale built on thread-fine braided counterpoint which thickens with wonderful time-lines into knots of broad sound reinforced by brass and percussion. I thought it a splendid piece.

GLENN FORD... natural humor

He Donned Uniform To Hit Top

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—I like to laugh," says Glenn Ford, "and I figure everybody else in the world wants to laugh, too."

Thus Canadian-born Ford explains how he shifted his career from serious dramatic roles to comedy-in-uniform parts and became the movies' top box office star in the process.

His block-busting movies that shot him atop the list of Hollywood's top 10 money-makers included such as "Tea, House of the August Moon," "Imitation General" and "Don't Go Near the Water." He also made a western the same year. Despite its forbidding title, it was one of the comedy hits of the year: "The Shepman."

Ford explains why he chose service pictures to exploit this new-found comedy talent. "The greatest natural humor in the world is found among servicemen. One of the most laugh-filled times of my life was during my hitch in the marine corps during the war. Inexplicably, things that happen to servicemen are much funnier than the same incidents with civilians."

Hawkes, chairman of the Christmas gift committee of the Victoria branch, Canadian Mental Health Association, said last night.

"It lets the patient realize we know they are still alive and that we want them back," she said.

The B.C. division of the CMHA has sponsored the gift campaign for four years. Last year, Victoria residents donated 2,093 items.

"This year only 500 gifts have been received," Mrs. Hawkes said. "Our campaign ends the first week in December."

Each patient's gift is wrapped and his own name attached to it, she said. This gift "may well be the only contact they have during the year with other than the hospital staff."

Christmas parties will be held at all the hospitals. The Victoria association will be making personal delivery at the Colquhoun Mental Home.

A complete list of all gifts advised by the CMHA may be obtained by phoning the Victoria association office, 738 Fort Street, at EV 5-7811. Association workers will pick up a gift when it is ready.

Artificial Artifacts by Shiploads

Tourists Unaware, Don't Care

By ERITH SMITH

When you buy "genuine Indian (or Eskimo) artifact" in stores or curio shops for souvenirs, do you know if they're genuine?

Or do you care? Chances are, says an expert in the field, that whether you care or not you've bought something turned out production-line style in a factory that's not only not Indian, and not Eskimo, but perhaps not even North American.

J. G. Cathcart is the expert. A field man for the Glenbow Foundation in Calgary, he's in Victoria for a few days on one of his periodic continent-wide junkets to visit museums and native art shops.

He knows what he's looking at—and for. The foundation maintains the largest Indian museum in western Canada, the Luxton Museum at Banff. Mr. Cathcart for years has been dealing in genuine Indian handicrafts and art work, and in Eskimo craft as well.

PRIVATE MUSEUMS

"It's getting so that genuine objects of Indian art have almost disappeared altogether from the market," he says. "Most of the best have gone into private collections or museums."

"In their place I find curio and souvenir stores throughout Canada and the United States stocked with cheap imitations, ground out by machines in factories not only here but in Japan."

"Next time you see small totems in a store, check for a label. Chances are it will say 'made in Japan.'"

One's Real, One's 'Genuine'

Payola Helped

Rock 'n' Roll Rage Fast Dying Out

NEW YORK (UPI)—Rock 'n' roll is going the way of the charleston, the big apple and the black bottom.

The music craze that set teen-agers to writhing on the dance floor and started Elvis Presley gyrating along the road to fame is dying out, according to "disc pockeys," movie makers and record distributors.

Payola is partly to blame, but the decline of rock 'n' roll had set in before the current revelations of payoffs in the music business.

FREED DISMISSAL

Rock 'n' roll began fading away early this year after riding high on the jazz wave for five years, experts on popular music reported.

The most dramatic event to shake rock 'n' roll was the termination of disc jockey Alan Freed's radio and television programs in New York last week.

Freed, who is said to have coined the term rock 'n' roll, is being replaced on six hours a week of TV programs by a handsome young baritone, Richard Hayes, who sings the kind of ballads the middle-aged parents of today used to sing and sway to 20 years ago.

An official of New York's WNEW-TV, the station that carried Freed's programs, said rock 'n' roll hit its peak around January of this year and started down after that. "Its decline was sudden."

WON'T MAKE IT "I refused to make that trash."

In Hollywood, two top producers of movies for teen-agers pronounced rock 'n' roll films dead. Both Sam Katzman and Albert Zugsmith said nothing resembling a rock 'n' roll movie was on their schedules. In Memphis, Tenn., band-leader Teddy Phillips predicted a return of Tin Pan Alley greats such as Irving Berlin and Cole Porter.

LESS AND LESS

Chicago disc jockey Stan Dale said that he has been playing less and less of what is known as "old boiler-room" rock 'n' roll and replacing it with more danceable tunes and even music that people like to sit and listen to.

Shoe Size Triggers Charges

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—Roller rink attendant Jimmy Davenport knows enough not to ask women their age, but he thinks asking them their roller skate size is part of his job.

Apparently Miss Billy Ford doesn't think so.

She bopped Davenport when he repeated her whispered request for size 9 skates out loud to another attendant.

Miss Ford told a city judge she hit Davenport because she thought her shoe size was a private affair and didn't want it hollered across the rink.

Davenport admitted shoving Miss Ford, but said, "I didn't want to get slapped again." The judge dismissed assault and battery charges against him.

FAMILY VEHICLES

Canadian auto manufacturers shipped nearly 21,000 station-wagons in the first nine months of 1959, an 11 per cent increase over 1958.

Rock-Roll King Admits Payola

NEW YORK (UPI)—Rock 'n' roll disc jockey Alan Freed admitted Friday he had received cheques from record companies but denied the cheques constituted payola. He made the admission after a wildly sentimental final performance of his teen-age Big Beat television show.

'Salad Days' Run Sets U.K. Mark

LONDON (Reuters)—A whimsical comedy that never has had any big-name stars will end at London's Vaudeville Theatre next February as the world's longest-running musical.

"Salad Days," a musical about a magic piano that first was written to wind up the season for a provincial theatre, will close Feb. 27 after ousting the New York run of "Oklahoma!" in the long-distance stakes.

It will have had 5½ years and 2,282 performances in the West End theatre. It will catch

'First Child Last' Says Skittish Kitten

LONDON (UPI)—Brigitte Bardot says she hopes her first baby will be her last.

The sex symbol of modern France says she didn't find pregnancy a joke and shouted "no, no, a thousand times no" when asked if she hoped to have more children.

Miss Bardot admitted she was frightened by the coming birth but added, "I'm afraid I cannot find any way of avoiding it."

Variety Show Delights

The hall was packed to overflowing. So, at times, was the stage.

Richard Reeve made an excellent emcee.

REGINALD SINKINSON

Trustee Issues Warning

Four schools in district 63 will be forced to use shift system next year if the Dec. 17 $799,000 school loan referendum is not passed, trustee Reginald Sinkinson said last night.

"Royal Oak, Mt. Newton, North Saanich Junior-Senior High schools and Cordova Bay elementary are already tremendously overcrowded," he said. Brentwood and Saanichton elementary schools are also possible candidates for the system.

TOO MANY

"I can't see any possibility of handling all the youngsters now in the schools plus the expected increase in the present accommodation," he said.

"We are already using many kinds of substandard accommodation. In Royal Oak High, the lunchroom has been divided into three bulging classrooms, and in North Saanich High, classes are even conducted on the stage."

ONLY 25 PER CENT

"Only 25 per cent of the $799,000 asked will be paid by the school district," he said. "The rest of the bill will be footed by the provincial government."

The money, if granted, will be spent on three new schools and extensions to many of the existing schools.

A new junior-senior high on Wesley Road between Halliburton and Claremont would draw off the overflow from Royal Oak and Mt. Newton, he said. The site has already been purchased.

TWO SCHEDULED

Two elementary schools have been scheduled for the Claremont and Santa Clara, Lochside, and Royal Oak areas. These will ease the overcrowding at Cordova Bay and Royal Oak and handle the students who now travel to Cordova Bay by school bus.

Extensions are planned for Saanichton and Keating Elementary Schools and to Mt. Newton High School.

On Boy
Tomorrow

An inquest into the death of eight-year-old David Achtzner will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow by deputy coroner Dr. J. H. Moore.

The child was fatally injured Friday afternoon near Parson's Bridge, when wheels of a gravel truck passed over his body. He died 30 minutes after he was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Funeral services will be held in Christ The King Chapel, HMCS Naden at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow, with Father L. M. Le Fontaine officiating. Interment will be in Hatley Memorial Gardens.

Closing

Tuesday will be the official closing date for the "Archie McKinnon fund" which has now reached $2,954.

The money was donated by hundreds of Greater Victoria residents for a convalescent trip.

Mr. McKinnon suffered severe injuries last month while taking part in a comedy act at the Crystal Garden.

Attitude to Court

Greater Victoria is closer to a four-municipality family and juvenile court today than it has been for months.

Reeves of the two "hold-out" municipalities, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, last night conceded their councils have not closed the door on the proposal and outlined certain conditions under which the unified court plan would be more acceptable.

Reeve George Murdoch of Oak Bay thought his council might endorse the plan on three conditions:

1. If total costs are reasonable.
2. If costs are apportioned among the participating municipalities on the basis of use.
3. If the family and juvenile court judge would circulate and sit on each municipality's cases within that municipality.

Reeve A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt also said his council would be happier with the plan if it involved a circulating judiciary.

He said that if Esquimalt residents had to travel to a central court in Victoria, especially when so many cases are adjourned on several occasions, it would be a hardship upon them.

Not only that, a central court would cost too much in police overtime when constables had to appear as witnesses.

Chief objection to the plan in Esquimalt, Reeve Wurtele said, is that cost estimates so far have been too "vague," and details of the court too "obscure."

He said that even if Esquimalt stayed out of the court, it would ask to share in use of its probationary service and would be glad to pay its share of the cost of that branch.

Probationary work in Esquimalt, currently carried out by Chief Gilbert Stancombe, has achieved "outstanding results," the reeve added.

A teen-age baby-sitter last night was praised for extinguishing a kerosene fire and calling the fire department to come and see if the blaze was really out.

Hotel Tour
Eye-Popper

A dozen high school students yesterday made a garret-to-cellar tour of the stately Empress Hotel and left convinced there is more to hotel operation than sending ice upstairs and paging errant tycoons.

"I kept their eyes popping out for 2½ hours," said Empress manager Cyril Chapman, who hopes to work out a monthly hotel tour program with Victoria school board authorities for students considering a career in the accommodation industry.

The youngsters, ranging from 14 to 18 years old, were guided through every nook and cranny of the impressive CPR hotel to the tune of a rapid-fire explanation of hotel operating procedures from Mr. Chapman.

At the conclusion of the exhausting tour they were luncheon guests of the manager.

Mr. Chapman said following the tour that there are excellent opportunities in the hotel industry today, plus rapid advancement for qualified employees.

He pointed out that in terms of capital investment the industry is now the third or fourth largest in the United States and that the demand for trained employees is constantly expanding.

"Of course," he added, "you've got to start at the bottom, just like anything else."

An eight-year-old girl weak from influenza collapsed on a city street yesterday while running to catch a bus.

Ruth Sullivan, of 886 Dunsuir, was taken by police ambulance to Royal Jubilee Hospital for a check-up after she collapsed at Government and Johnson at 3:40 p.m.

Meters Hardhearted

'Armless Bandits'
Lacking in Mercy

The quality of mercy built into Vancouver parking meters just isn't to be found in their Victoria counterparts.

A recent test in Vancouver showed that meters there give the motorists an extra two minutes, no matter how much money is put in the slot. Despite this clockwork charity, the city takes in about $30,000 a month in pennies, nickels and dimes.

But meters in Victoria aren't so lenient. Six of them were checked by stopwatch in various parts of the city yesterday with depressing results.

Four gave exactly the amount of time paid for, and one gyped the motorist by a full minute. The last one, in a burst of generosity that will probably be rectified next repair day, gave a 30-second Christmas present before leering "Violation" at the watcher.

City engineer J. C. Garnett admitted that as far as meters are concerned, charity is nothing but a word in the dictionary.

"They are set to give you the time you pay for," he said. "Since they are just machines, there may be the odd one that is a little generous, but not many."

The green and greedy little coin machines may deal in pennies and nickels, but they have become big business to the city. Each year their take is higher, and last year it amounted to $140,000.

"What's more," Mr. Garnett added cheerfully, "the take is liable to be even higher this year."

Motorists who consider the armless bandits' personal enemies may not be quite as cheerful.

Obey Lake Rules
Or Be Banned

Greater Victoria motorboat owners will either comply with proposed Elk Lake marine regulations next summer or they will be banned from the lake altogether, a Saanich municipal spokesman said yesterday.

"Enforcement is the weakest part of the proposal," said Councillor Stan Murphy, chairman of the lands and planning committee which recently approved Elk Lake regulations for submission to council.

He said the municipality could not afford to put a police boat on the lake and will have to depend for enforcement upon public complaints and the efforts of lifeguards sworn in as special constables.

"But if we find in the early weeks of next season that the regulations are not being complied with, we will have no alternative but to ban power boats from Elk Lake," he added.

"We must stop the dangerous boat operators before they kill somebody."

"Hundreds of children use the lake for swimming and if they are not actually struck by a speeding boat they are going to be swamped by its wake and drowned."

The regulations approved by lands and planning committee and by the Elk Lake Ratepayers' Association bar power boats from the east side of the lake completely.

Victoria's complete election slate of 12 aldermanic and two mayoralty candidates have accepted invitations to speak at a Junior Chamber of Commerce civic forum to be held Dec. 4, a Jaycee official said yesterday.

Brian Small, chairman of the committee arranging the forum, said yesterday that "all signs point to a record attendance."

The forum will be held in the 2,000-seat Central Junior High School Auditorium commencing at 8 p.m.

Mayoralty candidates Mayor Percy Scourrah and J. Donald Smith will speak for 15 minutes each, and aldermanic candidates for five minutes each.

Victoria Retarded Children's Association will hold an open house Tuesday at its school for retarded children, 1075 Joan Crescent. Mayor Percy B. Scourrah, members of the school board, and social workers in the Greater Victoria area will be guests of honor at the reception, which will be held from 2:30 to 4 p.m.

Pupils at the school will prepare and serve lunch to the guests.

Should Offer BCHIS Coverage

Gorge Road Hospital
Warned by Martin

Victoria's controversy-ridden Gorge Road Hospital should be among the first in the province to offer BCHIS-covered chronic care, Health Minister Eric Martin said last night.

His statement came a short time after an official of the hospital said the Gorge Road staff was preparing to convert about half its 100-bed capacity to chronic patient treatment but that "planning has to be done in the dark" due to lack of details of government's proposal.

The health minister denied this, pointing out that all of the mechanics of the plan necessary for the hospital to anticipate its needs were released in 1957 and that the Gorge Road hospital has "at least one copy of this to my knowledge, and they can always come to us for more."

But he warned that hospital officials should understand that the federal government's interpretation of "chronic patients" will be that accepted by BCHIS if the legislature passes the program announced by Mr. Martin last month.

"They must understand that very clearly," he said, adding that the federal government, in its offer to contribute just under half of the cost of the program, makes a clear distinction between "chronic" cases and "terminal" cases.

In order to qualify for BCHIS chronic care coverage a patient will have to be able to respond to treatment or rehabilitation measures, Mr. Martin said.

Once qualified, a patient would pay the standard $1 a day fee for hospital care.

At present, once discharged from an acute care hospital, a chronic patient must pay the full cost of care in such hospitals as Gorge Road.

For this reason, Gorge Road hospital has never actually fulfilled one of the purposes for which it was built at a cost of nearly $500,000.

Still in serious condition at the Royal Jubilee Hospital's polio treatment centre are three-year-old Gerald Rafter of Chemainus and Walter Hackwell, of Port Alberni.

Six-year-old Robin Erickson of Lake Cowichan yesterday was transferred from isolation ward to the children's ward, while three other persons in isolation were reported to be "showing improvement."

Bertrand Ogden, 30, of West Coast Road, fully recovered from an attack of polio, discharged from hospital several days ago.

The Rafter boy, suffering from respiratory paralysis and still in an iron lung, had all three anti-polio shots. He received the last injection in November, 1957.

Lane Wants 'Bastion'
To Become Victoria

A replica of a Victoria street in the 1860's is envisaged by tourist officials as part of scheme which would revitalize the historic Bastion Square area of the city.

Sam Lane, head of the Chamber of Commerce tourist trade group, said last night discussions have already been held with the provincial government with the aim of including the courthouse in the project.

He said the project would follow similar lines to the old Spanish section of Los Angeles, which has been recreated along a section of Olvera Street in the heart of the city.

"They have spent millions at Disneyland on buildings that take you back into the past," Mr. Lane said. "Here we have the original buildings still standing. But all we do is think of them as decrepit buildings that should be yanked down."

Charlie Gard, butker, at work in Sooke woods. For the story, see Pages 14 and 15.

Miss M. B. Hearn Is One of Those Rarities: Two-War Veteran

FROM HER LIVING ROOM windows, overlooking the tinted waters of the Gorge, she gazed into the brief flame of the sunset and said in her quiet, contemplative way:

"It has been a rewarding life, mine. I have helped so many young men to die."

It is a startling statement, until one remembers that Lieut. (Nursing Sister) M. B. Hearn, retired, has served overseas in two wars and in military hospitals between.

Her living room is crowded with pictures—and with memories. Handsome young officers smile out of their frames at "Marnie," as she has been known, universally, since she tended the moaning men with gas burns in 1916. People like Charlie Course and Robert Hogarth, who were hospital orderlies in the First World War, because "they were top young for the trenches," are there along with more distinguished soldiers, like Col. James L. Ralston, wartime minister of national defence. "My friends—from the highest to the lowest," she reminisced, "have made my life the pleasant thing it is."

She was born on her father's farm, at Hayfield, between Brandon and Souris, in the same home that in Charles Hearn's bachelor days was known as The Half-Way House. "Charlie," as she speaks of him affectionately, died in 1952; her mother in 1943. She came home to Canada on compassionate leave from her hospital at Taplow at her mother's death. And she speaks of both her parents with reverence.

"Father said, 'My life has not been anything I planned, expected or hoped for . . . but I have had so many charming experiences through the years and I have made the most of them.' And he would say, if he didn't get a letter from his girl overseas, 'There's another mail tomorrow.'"

"I hope I have inherited something of his philosophy of life, his tolerance and gratitude for all of its delights. And if there have been disappointments, well—there's always another mail tomorrow."

When she was a small child, Marnie and her family went to England, her father's birthplace, to visit relatives.

At one fine, old home lived an uncle who had recently been knighted. His children, Marnie remembers, were "impossible." One of her pig-tailed cousins remarked while she waited for a groom to harness the pony, "Daddy has been made a 'sir.' And Marnie, who had always hitched her own pony to his cart, replied with devastating hauteur, "My daddy is a J.P."

"Of course, neither of us had the slightest idea what a J.P. was."

But the child's fierce loyalty for friends and family remains to this day.

Marnie was "called up" for the Second World War, and she has heard much criticism of the young nurses of this and the war-time generation.

"But I like them," she said. "In my training days we obeyed the rules through sheer fear. Today, the young nurses in training sometimes rebel. But they have reasons . . . Maybe the nylon uniforms have something to do with character. They're so different from the starched uniforms we used to wear. I sometimes think the starch got into the soul . . ."

And speaking of starch, she remembered she used to use a mixture of flour and starch to sprinkle on the gas burns of the men who came to her, "to exclude the air and ease the pain."

"It's very different now. It used to be if a man were burned over two-thirds of his body he was given up to die."

SHE RECALLED, then, instances of men who sometimes gave up the fight for life. There was one, a young soldier from Kirkland Lake, who had pneumonia and whom the new drugs couldn't help. "He was so hopeless and helpless he would not even try to turn over in bed." So Sister Marnie suggested to the medical officer that she

"If you are going to write a story about me, I would like to see this with it, right at the top of it," Miss M. B. Hearn said.

"Lord, Thou knowest that I am growing older."

"Keep me from becoming talkative and possessed with the idea that I must express myself on every subject."

"Release me from the craving to straighten out everyone's affairs."

"Keep my mind free from the recital of endless detail. Give me wings to get to the point."

"Seal my lips when I am inclined to tell of my aches and pains. They are increasing with the years and my love to speak of them grows sweeter as time goes by."

"Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally I may be wrong. Make me thoughtful but not too nosy, helpful but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom and experience it does seem a pity not to use it all. But Thou knowest, Lord, that I want a few friends at the end."

treat him in the old-fashioned way, with out-moded methods. She dug out a pneumonia jacket and discovered it had a note attached, indicating it was made by the ladies of the Red Cross at Kirkland Lake. She pointed this out to her patient.

"He sat right up in bed and examined the jacket," she said. "Then he said: 'Mary told me she was making these jackets.' Whether Mary, his wife, had made it or not, from that time on he began to mend. Ultimately he recovered . . ."

The Canadian women of the Red Cross did a magnificent wartime job in both the great conflicts in which she served, she said.

She recalled a message stitched on to some square, knitted wool things for which, at first, she was at a loss to find a use. Finally, they were used on patients who didn't want to go out in the air for fear of ear-ache, chilled hands or feet. The message, written in a childish hand, read:

"I am a grandmother. My father, my husband and my two sons have served their country. My son's small daughter is reading to me while I knit. I am blind."

IT WAS in 1916 that Sister Marnie first went to war. She graduated in May, went to Camp Hughes, now Shilo, in June, to Kingston to outfit in July, arrived in London in August and was in France the same month.

In the '39-'45 war she was called up for service, was among the earliest nurses overseas.

Then, in 1954, after receiving a small inheritance, she went on what she calls a "ghost hunting" expedition. It took her back to the places she remembered so well from her experiences in France in '14-'18. She sold her little car, "The Royal York," in Canada and bought another, sight unseen, in London. She stayed at a hotel there, once known as "the temporary home of the temporary wives of temporary officers and gentlemen." Then she flew to France—with her new car.

She visited Vimy, where the Canadians charged across the shell-torn slopes in 1917 and, if they were lucky, had their wounds dressed by Sister Marnie close behind the battle line.

She went to Abbeville, and "I thought I still could see the tent hospital."

She remembered putting the last of her patients on a train for the west and then consulting the transport officer as to her own accommodation. It was the last train out. This was the time of crisis in 1918, when the Boche had smashed through the Allied lines in a last, desperate gamble with time and death.

"You'll have to walk, I guess, Sister," the transport officer said. "But stay off the main roads. They'll be choked with refugees and army traffic."

She walked—30 miles.

"I was young and strong," she sighed. "I was tired, I expect, but I don't remember it being so terrible."

She went to Etaples and Le Toquet and she remembered the terror of the air raids. She could picture, in her memory as she drove, No. 7 Canadian hospital, No. 54, No. 1, the St. John Ambulance offices, the cemetery, the bullring and in the square at Etaples—in 1954—the same old woman selling flowers in the same corrugated iron shelter so it seemed, and there was the same bookshop, the same teashop—just as they were in 1918.

In Aix-la-Chapelle, on her way to Paris, a lad on a bicycle put his hand on her car door for support when they were stopped by a parade.

"You're not a Frenchman," she challenged. "I'm a Van-Doo," he grinned. (Vingt-Deux, designation of the famous 22nd Canadians.)

"I know you, don't I?"

"Yes."

"At Taplow?"

"Yes," the ex-soldier grinned. "You nursed me in ward 13. And there are 13 of us here who stayed over."

These were some of the incidents which constituted the "ghost hunting."

BETWEEN WARS Marnie Hearn did all sorts of things.

"Things were tough at one time. I was in Winnipeg and none of the doctors knew me there. I couldn't get any 'specialing.' Finally I applied for a job as an upper housemaid, wrote my own recommendations, too, on some crested notepaper borrowed from my Aunt Annie . . ."

"Sometimes, if I didn't like some job the mistress of the house proposed, I'd lift my chin and put on my best English accent, and object, 'I'm not accustomed to that sort of thing, madame.' It worked, too."

"The lower housemaid and I used to alternate at serving for dinner, and it was my turn when I learned that Mr. and Mrs. A. R. B. Hearn were to be guests that evening. Uncle Dick had been a manager with the Imperial Bank for 58 years. I swapped nights with the lower housemaid."

Later, Marnie became a friend of a nephew of her former employers, and went to their home for tea.

Her late mistress kept glancing at her visitor with a puzzled look in her eyes, and at last ex-

FULFORD ST. MARY'S LINK WITH PIONEERS

THOUSANDS of visitors have glanced at, and possibly admired, the modest little church at the side of the road at Fulford, Salt Spring Island. It has an antique look. And so it should.

St. Mary's Anglican Church is familiar to the islanders. Most of them know something of its history: that it was built in 1894, that the Rev. E. F. Wilson was the first pastor, and that it has served successfully by virtue of the courage and goodwill, sacrifice and hard labor of clergy and laymen alike.

St. Mary's was not the first church on Salt Spring Island.

Ten years before its first congregation sang in answer to its summons, with the fragrance of fresh lumber like an incense in the place, St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church opened its doors at Fulford. In 1887 a "Union" church was built in Burgoyne Valley, intended to serve Methodists, Presbyterians and Anglicans. And in 1889 St. Mark's Anglican Church was consecrated, near Ganges.

The story of St. Mary's is really the record of the settlers who first seat in the hand-hewn pews and of the ministers who served them.

St. Mary's was sponsored by a sincere and God-fearing man, in the Rev. Mr. Wilson. Actually, it is through his notes that the story of the church, and a good deal of Salt Spring Island history, has been preserved.

Plans for the church, however, were drawn by the first resident clergyman on the island, the Rev. J. Belton Haslam, who served the parish 1891-94. He got as far as ordering lumber for St. Mary's. Mr. Wilson succeeded him. The lumber, piled on the beach not far from the chosen site, was an immediate challenge.

He needed no prodding. Mr. Wilson had acquired a horse and buggy and he came driving over the long Divide Hill (as it was called in the old days) from Ganges, a good 10 miles, to the south end. He noticed the thriving farms in Burgoyne Valley as he came through, and perhaps that is when the big idea of calling a community "bee" hit him, for history has it he looked the church situation over and started rounding up all the settlers. On Easter Monday morning of that year, he had 16 men and five teams down on the beach, and by 4.30 that afternoon, all the building supplies had been hauled to the church site.

The land for the church had been donated by the late John Sparrow, a native of Norway, who had an uncle who was an admiral in the Norwegian navy. The contract for the building was in the hands of Fred Raines, who with the volunteer help, put up a fine frame building. Four months later, the church was ready for consecration service, though still without a bell-tower and other appurtenances. A little one-roomed place which Mr. Wilson called "the vicarage" was built at the back of St. Mary's, and here the minister spent every second weekend and, in time, had a well-kept and beautiful little garden, of which he was very proud. His horse was stabled in a shed and well groomed and fed, for he was constantly trotting his master up and down the hills of Salt Spring Island, as the vicar tried to keep in touch with his scattered parishioners.

On June 3, 1894, Bishop W. W. Perrin journeyed from Victoria by the V. and S. Railway to Sidney, and from there came across the water by sailboat. As a matter of fact, this was the inaugural trip of the railway.

Arriving at Fulford, Bishop Perrin was welcomed by Mr. Wilson and introduced to his horse and buggy. St. Mary's Anglican Church was blessed and consecrated, and for the next 15 years the Rev. Mr. Wilson kept a firm grip on the ecclesiastical reins and served the parish faithfully.

A remarkable man was Mr. Wilson. He not only looked after the religious needs of his people, but he frequently administered medicine when no doctor was available. The vicar was always ready to help in emergencies, and knew a good deal about medicine.

He compiled a neat little book on the history of Salt Spring Island and published a monthly magazine called "Parish and Home." The purpose was to promote the Home Sunday School. He would drive round to the homes of some of the first families and it was a common sight to see him gather up the children who were old enough to understand and seat them around him in a group.

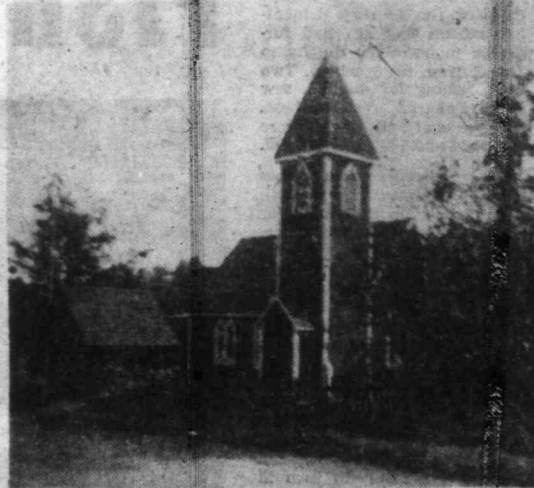

He was an impressive sight to small children, in his black clothes and long dark beard. He would seat himself in an armchair by the huge fireplace at "Dromore" and open his big black Bible. His teachings were no less impressive, for he taught a strict, old-time religion, where the good people received the favor of God with the promise of a halo and harp, and the wicked people received rather a hot reception. If Mr. Wilson's religious views were overly strict, his kindness and generosity endeared him to all. His many kind acts among little children in Fulford were long remembered, even if he put the "fear of the Lord" into his lessons. From the year 1911 these gentlemen followed Mr. Wilson: the Rev. J. A. Bastin, who held the post until 1917, and was loved by all who knew him; after him the Rev. George Little, who continued until 1922; then the Rev. A. W. Collins, who carried on until 1926. Mr. Collins was remembered for his vivid descriptions of other countries and great paintings. The Rev. J. W. Flinton was Mr. Collins' successor, and he continued until 1931, when the Rev. C. H. Popham took over until 1941. The Ven. erable Archdeacon G. H. Holmes came in 1941, and is the present incumbent.

St. Mary's Church has played a large part in the tradition and growth of Fulford; and now, in 1959, the tall spire touches the blue sky and points the way of life for all. Surrounded by the graves of many of the pioneers who saw it grow, the little church guards them still.

On Sundays the children of the community gather at the new Sunday school room, which has been completed this year. The 33 children have formed a choir and, in cap and gown, they lead the singing at special services, supervised by Mrs. A. D. Dane, and assisted by Mrs. J. French, Mrs. J. Silvester, Miss Gladys Patterson and Mrs. F. Smith.

A handsome Windsor oak tree, planted by the South Salt Spring W.I. at the time of the coronation of King George IV, grows in front of the church. A beautiful font, made from native oak by the late James Monk of Beaver Point, is a treasure of the church. The fine lych gate at the entrance marks the Golden Jubilee of the church in 1944. Many names of residents are linked with St. Mary's, as they helped to build and uphold the church. A paragraph from the Parish Magazine of 1895 states that "the cost of St. Mary's Church, including seating, chancel fittings, and organ, was $705. All is now paid-for and a small balance remains in the treasurer's hands."

A look into Mr. Wilson's little pamphlet of 1895 discloses a map of Salt Spring and several adjacent islands, with the estimated population of each: Salt Spring, 450; Galliano, 30; Mayne, 80; Prevost, 2; Pender, 50. Geological descriptions of Salt Spring Island are written out, and notes on wild life, shrubs, flowers and trees, mountains, and their heights and names, are all tabulated. Farming he went into quite deeply, naming all the first farmers and what they grew. In fact, Mr. Wilson touched on all aspects of life and the people. As early as 1860, missionaries came over from Vancouver Island to Salt Spring, travelling by canoe and risking their lives, for the Indians were still at war amongst themselves, and no one was safe among the islands. The first ministers to arrive there were Methodists. The Rev. Ebenezer Robson came in 1860, and preached in a small log house by the old Vesuvius school.

THIS IS St. Mary's at Fulford, with its charming lych gate, a landmark on Salt Spring Island since 1894.

to small children, in his black clothes and long dark beard. He would seat himself in an armchair by the huge fireplace at "Dromore" and open his big black Bible. His teachings were no less impressive, for he taught a strict, old-time religion, where the good people received the favor of God with the promise of a halo and harp, and the wicked people received rather a hot reception.

BISHOP W. W. PERRIN ... he blessed the little church

From the year 1911 these gentlemen followed Mr. Wilson: the Rev. J. A. Bastin, who held the post until 1917, and was loved by all who knew him; after him the Rev. George Little, who continued until 1922; then the Rev. A. W. Collins, who carried on until 1926. Mr. Collins was remembered for his vivid descriptions of other countries and great paintings. The Rev. J. W. Flinton was Mr. Collins' successor, and he continued until 1931, when the Rev. C. H. Popham took over until 1941. The Ven. erable Archdeacon G. H. Holmes came in 1941, and is the present incumbent.

St. Mary's Church has played a large part in the tradition and growth of Fulford; and now, in 1959, the tall spire touches the blue sky and points the way of life for all. Surrounded by the graves of many of the pioneers who saw it grow, the little church guards them still.

On Sundays the children of the community gather at the new Sunday school room, which has been completed this year. The 33 children have formed a choir and, in cap and gown, they lead the singing at special services, supervised by Mrs. A. D. Dane, and assisted by Mrs. J. French, Mrs. J. Silvester, Miss Gladys Patterson and Mrs. F. Smith.

A handsome Windsor oak tree, planted by the South Salt Spring W.I. at the time of the coronation of King George IV, grows in front of the church. A beautiful font, made from native oak by the late James Monk of Beaver Point, is a treasure of the church. The fine lych gate at the entrance marks the Golden Jubilee of the church in 1944. Many names of residents are linked with St. Mary's, as they helped to build and uphold the church. A paragraph from the Parish Magazine of 1895 states that "the cost of St. Mary's Church, including seating, chancel fittings, and organ, was $705. All is now paid-for and a small balance remains in the treasurer's hands."

A look into Mr. Wilson's little pamphlet of 1895 discloses a map of Salt Spring and several adjacent islands, with the estimated population of each: Salt Spring, 450; Galliano, 30; Mayne, 80; Prevost, 2; Pender, 50. Geological descriptions of Salt Spring Island are written out, and notes on wild life, shrubs, flowers and trees, mountains, and their heights and names, are all tabulated. Farming he went into quite deeply, naming all the first farmers and what they grew. In fact, Mr. Wilson touched on all aspects of life and the people. As early as 1860, missionaries came over from Vancouver Island to Salt Spring, travelling by canoe and risking their lives, for the Indians were still at war amongst themselves, and no one was safe among the islands. The first ministers to arrive there were Methodists. The Rev. Ebenezer Robson came in 1860, and preached in a small log house by the old Vesuvius school.

claimed: "I can't help but feel we must have met. Your face is so familiar."

Sister Marnie puts down to the fact that she had worked with a tight, plain hair style and glasses the failure of her late mistress to properly identify her.

That sort of adventure, and all the bubbling effrontery it suggests, lends credence to the story that Sister Hearn gave a smack on the anatomy to a former minister of national defence when he was her patient at Taplow. It is a story whose detail she neither confirms nor denies. She laughed when asked a direct question, and changed the subject to the case of a young woman whom she had helped to cure of morphine addiction.

Miss Hearn, who was finally retired from the nursing service in 1946 on 100 per cent disability pension—probably due, at least in part, to the physical strain she underwent in the First World War and the effect of living wet and cold for month upon month under canvas in France—is one of two nurses who saw overseas service in both the First and Second World Wars. The other is Miss Emma Peece. She was retired with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, matron-in-chief of the Canadian Nursing Corps. She lives in Kingston. Miss Peece was succeeded as matron-in-chief by Agnes Neil, but she did not live long in this post of responsibility. Nursing sisters across Canada have set up a scholarship in her memory and to honor all the sisters who gave their lives in Canada's wars.

Miss Hearn has the highest and warmest regard for these two women, under whom she served.

"They were splendid," she says. "They have set a standard and example which, if we are wise, never shall be forgotten."

On Vancouver Island's Stormy Coast

By MAUD EMERY

ALICE CRYER is Campbell River's only commercial fisherwoman. For that matter, she may be alone in her chosen vocation on this whole northwestern coast. Certainly women in this arduous business are few and far between.

You can't sit in the cabin of Fisher-Gal, chatting with Alice, and drinking coffee, for very long, without the conversation turning to subjects like boats and storms at sea. For Alice owns the 30-foot troller allied Fisher-Gal, and if you are down on fishermen's float when the cod-boats come in, sooner or later you will see Alice navigating up to the fish-scow to sell her morning's catch.

The Fisher-Gal is a sturdy boat, powered with a two-cylinder Easthope engine. Freshly painted inside and out, the cabin has a small folding coffee table, shelves for groceries, a two-plate gas stove for cooking, a radio for weather reports. Safely stowed overhead across the deckhead beams are her charts.

Alice is mechanically minded, and understands her Easthope engine in much the same way that a mother understands her child, and since the Easthope is all of 12 years of age, it requires a considerable amount of understanding, nursing and tender care. Alice can cope with most of the ailments:

"I would rather keep that old Easthope going, than cook—or wash dishes," Alice laughs.

Alice went to sea as a fisher-girl when she was 15 years old. She fished with her father and remembers when they first came to Willow Point, a small settlement four miles south of Campbell River, from Vancouver. Her mother, and other members of the family came up later, but she and her father left Vancouver in her father's 30-foot gas-boat, loaded with household goods, and towing a dinghy behind.

Alice says "had they not been a pair of greenhorns they would have realized their boat was overloaded. But greenhorns they were, and as such, they loaded their boat out of Vancouver, hugging the coastline to Howe Sound, then Pender Harbor, past the entrance to Jervis Inlet, and on to Powell River.

As Powell River began to fade behind them, and they entered the passageway between Savary Island and Hernando Island, a south-easterly wind that had been slowly rising, now began to bother them with a heavy slop from the sea. At this point, the engine began to miss, the boat wallowed in the trough of the sea, the engine spluttered and missed again, and then stopped.

The boat rolled heavily, dipping further ever further to the sea as the wind increased. Water slopped over into her, and she began to fill, then to sink.

Alice jumped into the dinghy minutes before the boat tumbled turtle. The next thing Alice knew, she and her father were floundering around in the water. Fortunately, she is a good swimmer.

It wasn't long before she realized that the dinghy had flipped over when the launch capsized, for the very elementary reason that she had forgotten to untie the dinghy to free it from the gas-boat. Two men, fishing for dogfish, saw their plight, and rescued them. The gas-boat and dinghy were salvaged and towed into Lund.

This should have been enough to scare a 15-year-old girl away from the water for good, but Alice had courage, and lived to go through another, almost as harrowing experience, when she and her father pulled out of the shelter of Comox Harbor to make the 40-mile run to Campbell River. Once out of the shelter of Comox, and into the shipping-lane of the Gulf of Georgia, they found themselves buffeted by winds of gale force. They considered turning back, but to turn in such a sea was hazardous.

They had reached a point of no return.

Slow mile by mile they moved. The shriek of the wind, the rattling and banging of pots and dishes, with the moaning of the boat straining against pounding sea, drowned the few anxious words they spoke to one another.

Some hours later, two weary and hungry people, grateful for a sheltered harbor, reached Campbell River. But this experience offered a challenge to the girl.

Alice was not through with the sea—nor was the sea through with Alice. She had her next escape when, still unfamiliar with the dangers of Cape Mudge, off the southern tip of Quadra Island, she had to fish. This cape is one of the most treacherous on the British Columbia coast, due to nearly mile long reefs, and dangerous whirlpools and tide-rips, formed by the rush of water through Seymour Narrows to the north.

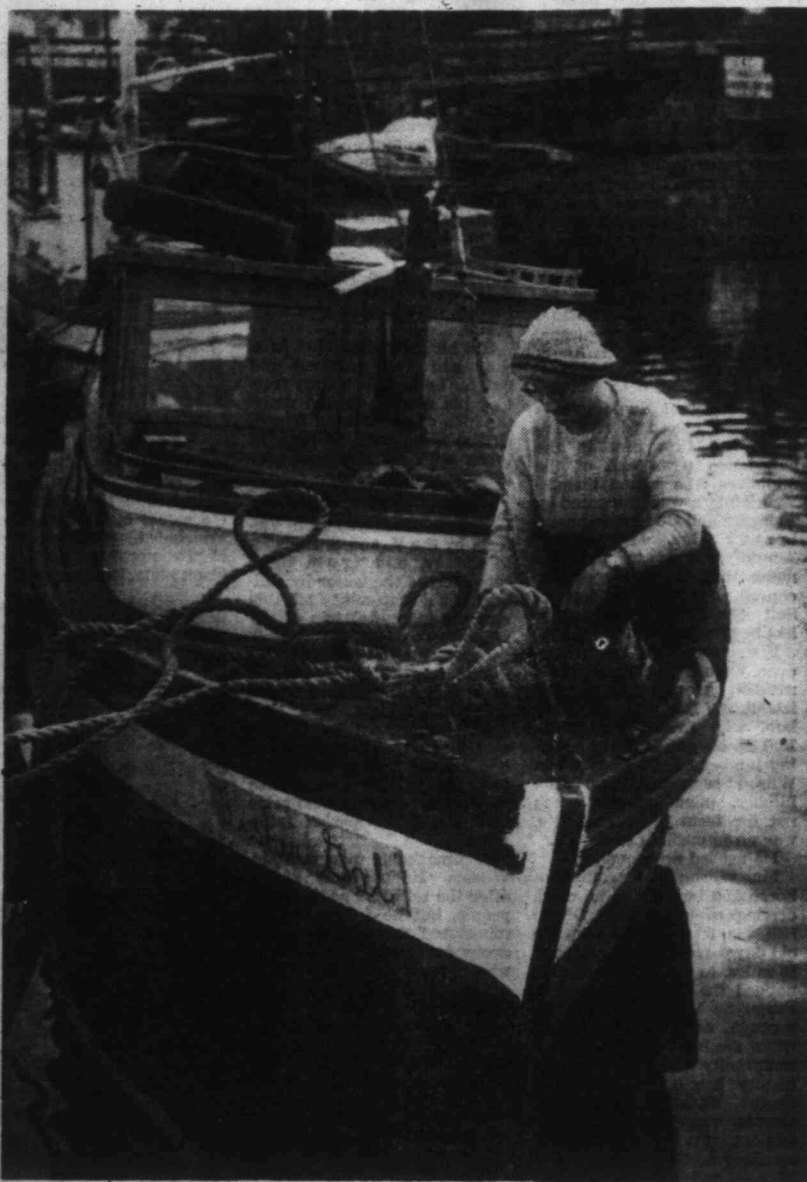

On this particular day, Alice was very much preoccupied with the business of fishing, but she looked up long enough to notice that the other fishing boats were pulling in their lines, and heading back for Campbell River. She wondered why, but kept on fishing.

"It wasn't long," Alice said, "before I wished I'd followed them."

In less than ten minutes, a storm that seemed to come from nowhere broke upon her. Once again, she was at grips with the sea—alone—off, one of the most feared, dangerous and stormy capes on the coast.

But the experience that was nearly the end of her fishing career, in fact, nearly the end of Alice, happened while fishing with her father, for cod, near Duncan Bay. She was writing up the log, when she dropped her pencil into the bilge at the base of the crank shaft. She stooped to pick it up and leaned too close to the drive shaft, it caught her hair and in a ruthless flash of time her scalp was torn off her head from one side to the other. She nearly lost her eyes.

A Rare Find: FISHERWOMAN

Her father heard her scream and stopped the engine.

Although in a state of shock, Alice was aware of a dilemma. She must stop the bleeding. Her first thought was a tourniquet, but where to tie a tourniquet? She grabbed a towel and bound her head in it.

What agony she endured, waiting, while her father got the boat into the Duncan Bay wharf, and medical aid was reached, can scarcely be imagined. After two weeks in Lourdes Hospital, at Campbell River, she was transferred to the Vancouver General Hospital, where she spent almost two and a half months. Today only a long crooked scar remains.

She determined to find, and buy, a boat of her own. Her search brought her Fisher-Gal. With a horrified down payment from her father, and the money she has made fishing, she now owns Fisher-Gal, outright.

Alice takes about three months off from fishing in the winter, usually December, January, and February. During this time she makes any necessary repairs, mends gear, paints her boat, and gets ready for the coming spring.

Up to now Alice had been cod fishing, but that is over, and she has turned to salmon fishing. This means getting up and having breakfast while it is still dark outside, and out to the fishing grounds by daybreak, fishing until noon, or later, then back to the float and scow to clear the fish-box. Then she rests a while, goes back fishing until dark.

During the summer fishing season, she will travel as far south as Lund, Powell River, and Pinalmo, and north as far as Alert Bay, which Alice says is a 15-hour run or more. To reach it means going through fast-running Seymour Narrows, where waters race at 12 knots.

In Hungary the Traveller Found A FRIGHTENED PEOPLE:

I THOUGHT Finland the most frightened nation I had seen until I came to Hungary. People are afraid to talk to one another. It is estimated that every fifth person is a spy. They are terrified to talk to foreigners. When I waited after a church service to speak with a clergyman and said I would like to see him again, he did not reciprocate. I told him where I was staying, but he did not call. Nor did he invite me back.

Of course they have had some bad betrayals. Not long before my visit, an English journalist had had conversations with some Hungarians. These were published in an English newspaper.

The Hungarian radio afterwards came out with this kind of program. "Mrs. X, caretaker of the Z apartment block, had been alleged to say the following. Let us interview her now and see what she really said. Mrs. X says the whole thing is a pack of lies! Farmer Y is alleged to have made such and such statements. Farmer Y says he doesn't even know the man!"

Just what could they have said? But such bitter experiences make them doubly cautious about foreigners. Moreover, whoever talks to a foreigner is suspect.

The Soviet army is still in occupation in Hungary, but is gradually being withdrawn. This means nothing. The last rebellion was crushed, not by troops stationed in Hungary who had become friendly with the population, but by eastern troops brought from outside. Yet all Hungary would rejoice to see the last of the hated invaders.

The government is trying a "stick and carrot method" to keep the population in order. More consumer goods are on sale. Industrial production is up. Trade has increased with China and Indonesia, particularly with the export of diesel and motor buses. A great effort is being made to improve the average lot as fast as possible. Large hotels have been turned into "rest" homes at low cost. Much recreation is provided freely or at minimal. Hungarian economy is being encouraged by "generous" offers from the Communist block. For example, it was proposed that they take over the Skoda small arms production from Czechoslovakia, a proposal that must sit sourly with the latter, for Skoda has a proud, world-wide reputation. But some monopolies will come Hungary's way.

On the other hand, the government wields a big stick. There are many unpublished trials which never get into any newspaper. The government has failed badly to win the youth and every now and then some young people are picked up for "questioning" and "trial." The Zis organization has been made mandatory for youth. The government has cleverly taken over such holidays as "St. Stephen's Day," (August 20th), with special secular celebration and sports. Church attenders are persecuted. The holders of good jobs do not attend Church, near home at any rate. The Government here as in Czechoslovakia has taken from the Church much of its sources of income, trying to make it dependent on government grants. Thus the Church can be controlled and silenced by bribes and threats.

There is much dirt under the rug. The people hate the foreign government. The peasants who were so pleased when they got the small farms taken from large landowners now are bitterly dissatisfied with the increasing compulsory collectivization. Others are angry at the closing of the religious schools. The professional classes hate the insistence on Marxist ideology. Thus a man may be the best doctor in the world, but if he is not up on Marxism he is shoved back into routine. Good Party membership is essential to get any place anywhere.

The intelligentsia is further demoralized by the fact that if a man belongs to a profession it is virtually impossible for his child to enter a profession. Their children must be "workers." Nor can the children hold an executive position! As a matter of fact, unless the child is a good Marxist, he cannot go on to secondary school.

Newspapers are suppressed, of course, and some are disappearing. Artists and writers are vanishing. With freedom of expression completely gone, their inspiration is crippled. There is no new school like that in Poland. Teen-age hooliganism is a serious problem. Indeed it is startling in some cafes to find the crowds of teen-age "zoot-suiters" or "beatniks" or "Teddy-Boys." It is rare to see a young person smile or laugh.

American relations are with one in five a spy

Rev. Dr. Frank S. Morley, author of a continuing series of articles, has recently completed an extensive tour of European countries. What he has found there, in the churches, in the streets and in the market places, but mostly in the people's minds, he discloses in these stories. Dr. Morley is pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, Calgary, and a regular contributor to The Colonist with his feature, "The Voice of One."

worsening. Members of the American legation are carefully watched, confined to a 40-kilometer limit about Prague, except by special permit which must be applied for 48 hours in advance and is not granted before deadline. Hungary is bitterly resentful of the fact that they are not accepted as a member of the international community, especially in the United Nations. This June the International Labor Organization refused to accept the credentials of their representatives, a further blow to their pride for which they hold the United States largely responsible, which is very unfair.

They are trying, however, to get tourist dollars into the country, although their treatment of tourists is worse even than in Russia. They have the same careful control of the movements of tourists and the same utter disregard of their feelings in assigning them to a hotel. Ibusz is, if anything, more inefficient and callous than Intourist. Only the food is much better. Hungarian cooking still rates among the best in the world. Heart-breaking Gypsy music can still be heard from superb orchestras in some restaurants. Only as one sees the bullet holes in almost every building and watches the sad faces of the people, the food becomes hard to digest, however superbly cooked it may be.

ity. The Austrians still are paying their ten-year indemnity to Russia, but are ahead in payments. Vienna is filled with tourists. The hotels are the world's finest. Music abounds.

"What are the most serious problems of Austria?" I asked. The reply was, "Austria has no serious problems." Never in history was there so much employment and wealth. Most of her youth belong to the Church. The Opera House, damaged so badly during the war, has been restored to even greater magnificence, unrivalled in the world. But when has mere prosperity brought true greatness? And I watched with sinking heart the emergence of the old Nazi movement with its uniforms and slogans.

Somehow, too, as I saw the crowded churches of Hungary, where people stood for hours, as I watched the exalted, devoted faces of young worshippers, and as I listened to the profoundly moving singing, a sense of man's unconquerable soul, of his essential dignity and goodness, shook me through. No country on earth has passed through as much tragedy as Hungary in her national history. Yet Hungary remains the unconquered and unconquerable.

A Rare Find: a Fisherwoman

Once through Seymour Narrows, the long vista of beautiful Johnstone Strait opens, and the run is up this strait to Alert Bay, on Cormorant Island. Alert Bay is partially sheltered from blustery Queen Charlotte Sound by Malcolm Island to the north, and is almost directly opposite Nimpkish River on northern Vancouver Island.

Here again, trouble found Alice, when an infection put her into the Alert Bay hospital.

A experienced fisherwoman today, with 11 years of work behind her, Alice says

It's a good life, and she would not wish for any other. Rarely, when she has come in from a day's fishing, cold, wet, tired and hungry, with perhaps only a poor catch, she wonders if it's worth it.

For the past six years she has fished solo, and made a comfortable living. Alice sums it up this way: "I'm free, I'm my own boss, and I'm never out of a job."

So it looks as though Fisher-Gal will be her home, and the sea her love, for many years to come.

Looking for the Christmas Spirit?

IN THE LONG, long ago candy, as we know it today, didn't exist. The earliest sweets, or sweetmeats as they were called, were dried dates, figs and nuts chopped and compounded with honey and molded into desired shapes.

Way back in primitive days honey was smeared on the rim of a glass holding a bitter draught. This practice was common with Greek and Roman doctors. Later still, apothecaries used sweet confections for coating nasty-tasting pills. Long after this, people began to make confections or candy just for the taste of the candy. Until the widespread culture of sugar cane, sugar was scarce and expensive.

The true development of the manufacture of candy began in England in the 19th century . . . taffy, barley sugar and licorice sticks and hard candies—such as humbugs, horehound and hot peppermints—were popular. Fancier candies were called bon-bons and sugar plums which, of course, were not plums at all but candy made in the shape of plums. At first, all candy was made by hand, but now most of it is made by machine. Candy-making today is a great and flourishing industry.

We are going to talk about homemade candy. Candy and Christmas . . . you can't help but catch the Christmas spirit while you are making candy. The kitchen becomes the centre of excitement . . . the family flocks in to have a finger in the "doings" and there are always volunteers to lick out the pan. Homemade candy is perfect for that special gift or for nibbling trays to sparkle up a Christmas buffet.

SOME PEOPLE seem to have special candy-making talent. During the past couple of weeks I have been collecting candy recipes from friends who make outstanding candy . . . friends who are willing to share their prized recipes with my readers.

First, here is Lucille's Butter Nut Crunch. This is a crisp toffee, coated with chocolate and crusted with nuts. It looks like professionally made candy.

Combine one cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup water and half a cup of butter. Heat to boiling, cook to light crack stage (if you have a candy thermometer it should register 285°). Add one-half cup chopped walnuts. Pour onto a well-greased cookie sheet. Cool. Spread with melted chocolate bits, using one six-ounce package. Sprinkle with half a cup finely-chopped walnuts. Cool. Turn the slab of candy over and repeat with the chocolate and nuts, using the same quantity as you did for the first side. Including the nuts in the toffee, you need one and a half cups of walnuts altogether and two packages of chocolate bits—one for each-side. When the candy is cold, crack into pieces.

Joan's specialty is Divinity Kisses. Topped with some red and some green glaze cherries, they are a perfect Christmas candy. Here is her recipe: Two and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup light corn syrup, one-half cup water, two stiffly beaten egg whites, one teaspoon vanilla, one teaspoon vinegar, a few grains of salt and one-half to one cup chopped nuts. Cook sugar, syrup, water and vinegar to the soft ball stage or 240° on a candy thermometer. Pour one-third of this syrup over the stiffly beaten egg whites, beating as you stir in the syrup. Cook the remaining syrup to firm ball stage or 250°. Dribble this re-cooked syrup into the first mixture, beating all the time. Continue heating until the mixture holds its shape. Stir in chopped nuts and vanilla. Swirl from a teaspoon onto waxed paper. Top with halves of cherries.

CANDY IS DANDY

Joan tells me that the double boiling of the syrup is what makes it failure-proof. Also, one should choose a nice clear day to make it . . . high humidity is a rascal when it comes to "divinity."

FOR THE BENEFIT of those who are not familiar with candy-making, perhaps I should explain "soft ball" stage, "crack or hard ball" stage: When you have no thermometer, drop a few drops of boiling syrup into a cup of really cold water. All fudges are cooked when the syrup forms a soft ball in the cold water. All toffees and hard candy must be crackling hard when tested.

This next confection is a real luxury item and an original recipe of my good friend Ellen of Maple Bay. I felt very lucky to receive her permission to use her recipe in my column. You know there are people who guard their prize recipes as if they were documents of war, but Ellen is one of the world's generous individuals.

Here is her recipe for Swedish Nuts: Two egg whites beaten stiff, one cup berry sugar, dash of salt, half a cup of butter and three and one-half cups pecans. Toast the pecans in a 325° oven till light brown. Fold the sugar and salt into the stiffly-beaten egg whites, beat till glossy, then fold in the toasted nuts. Melt the butter in a large, shallow pan (a jelly roll pan is good), then pour in the egg-coated nuts. Bake for about 30 minutes in a 325° oven, stirring with a fork every 10 minutes. When cooked, loosen from the pan with a wide spatula and break into bite-sized pieces.

If you are watching your weight, you better shun this lovely stuff . . . It is loaded with calories.

To show you that this column plays no favorites, here is a candy especially for weight-watchers. It is Dorothy's Skim Milk Fudge. You can see from the ingredients that it has fewer calories than most candy. Dorothy tells me that it is delicious and just the right sort of sweet to have on hand during the Christmas season when there is so much rich food around.

Dissolve four tablespoons butter, three-quarters of a cup of sugar, one teaspoon vanilla in one-quarter cup boiling water. Cool, then mix in two cups dry skim milk powder. Turn into a buttered pan to set.

Variations . . . for chocolate fudge, mix the milk powder with one-half cup cocoa. Sift before adding to the liquid. One cup of raisins can also be added. For maple fudge, add one tablespoon honey or golden syrup and one teaspoon maple flavoring. For fruit fudge, add a cup of mixed glace fruit, cherries or nuts. The skim milk powder called for in this recipe is the regular, not the instant, milk powder.

NANCY IS ONE of View Royal's really good cooks. I am sure you will like her Chocolate Raisin-Coconut Clusters. It is a nice, easy recipe that can be put together while father washes the dishes. Melt one six-ounce package of chocolate bits over hot water. Remove from the heat and stir in three-quarters cup sweetened condensed milk (half tin), three-quarters cup seedless raisins and half a cup of flaked or long shred coconut. Mix well and drop by teaspoon on a wax paper placed on a cookie sheet. Chill well.

Joan's Nut Brittle is about the easiest homemade candy you can make. There are only three ingredients needed, plus a heavy skillet and a wooden spoon. The greatest hazard in making this is that the sugar scorches so easily. It requires your undivided attention while caramelizing the sugar.

Before you start to melt the sugar, butter a large, shallow pan heavily and sprinkle with one cup chopped nuts. Any kind of nuts are good. Now, put two cups of sugar (white) in a heavy skillet, place over medium heat. You must stir constantly with a wooden spoon. If the phone rings, let it ring; let nothing short of the baby falling down the basement steps take you away from the stirring until the sugar is melted and a nice caramel color. The sugar burns very easily and you must remove the pan from the fire at the exact moment that the last sugar crystal is dissolved. Add the vanilla and quickly pour over the nuts in the greased pan. That's all there is to it. Loosen around the edges a bit as the brittle cools. When completely cold, slip a knife under all the way around to loosen from the pan. Break into chunks with a small hammer or the handle of a heavy knife.

Candy-making has been streamlined in keeping with the present trend for short-cutting in the kitchen. Here is a five-minute fudge that is failure-proof as well as easy. Isn't that something? This recipe is one of my own favorites. I think the secret of its creamy smoothness is the evaporated milk called for in the recipe (my choice is the flower-named brand with the red and white label). Combine one small tin of this undiluted evaporated milk, one and two-thirds cups sugar and a quarter teaspoon of salt in a saucepan. Place over medium heat, bring to a boil, cook for five minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from the heat and add one and a half cups (16) diced marshmallows, one and a half cups chocolate bits, one teaspoon vanilla and one-half cup chopped nuts. Stir until the marshmallows melt. Pour into a buttered, nine-inch square pan. If you prefer, you can drop the fudge by teaspoon onto heavy waxed paper.

Are you looking for a gift for that special friend who loves to cook? Well, here is the answer: Hot off the press is an exciting new cook book that is different from any you have seen before. It is different in the way it is compiled . . . it is geared to situations with complete menus, recipes and suggestions for each particular situation. It covers every situation from "unexpected company" to "when the power fails," from "family meals" to "cooking around the world for parties." It is chock full of colored illustrations. I am really thrilled with my advance copy. The name?—"The General Foods Kitchen Cookbook." It is a beauty.

Among Apes and Fossils

MAN'S ORIGIN 'REDISCOVERED'

By JOHN BARKHAM

THOUGH COMIC BOOK readers and television viewers may not be aware of it, anthropologists around the world seem to be working up a real boom in Africa. For the past 25 years two little-known pioneers—Dr. Raymond A. Dart and the late Dr. Robert S. Broom—have been digging up skulls and bones in Southern Africa and proclaiming them to the world as primitive ape-men who were the true precursors of homo sapiens.

For a long time nobody paid any attention to these claims. In his own book, Adventures with the Missing Link, Dr. Dart tells how British anthropologists raised their eyebrows in lofty disdain. Dr. Broom, a pawky Scot, was more outspoken. "Presumably," he said caustically, "Dr. Dart's most serious offence was that when he found a very important skull he did not immediately send it off to the British Museum."

All this is now changed. Recognition has come in from many quarters, with Dr. Leakey's new finds in East Africa as the most recent confirmation of Dart's contention that Africa was a primary cradle of the human race. In his enthralling new book Professor William Howells (of Harvard) describes a greater detail than any other American the full story of the African finds and relates them to man's fossil history. This is a first-rate piece of popularization for readers interested in science's search for Adam. It is titled Mankind in the Making.

The author does not, of course, confine himself to Africa, but ranges over the globe in search of fossil remains. He writes cogently and lucidly, and consistently avoids becoming mired in technical jargon. Best of all, he possesses the ability to create in the intelligent reader, the feeling of excitement which grips the anthropologist when he looks at a pile of old bones.

Step by step Professor Howells takes the reader through the principal discoveries relating to man's origins. The last time I listened to an exposition of such quality was when Gerald Heard, the English scientist, discoursed to me on the development of the human thumb. In these pages "evolution" ceases to be merely a word but becomes a living, visible process where this book goes beyond other such speculations for the layman in its detailed explanation of anatomical features such as the skull, muscles, powers of locomotion, and the like. It becomes possible to understand why, as some anthropologists contend, man's use of tools, weapons, and most of all, his brain, virtually halted the biological influence of environment on his evolution.

Five years ago Professor Howells wrote a briefer work under the title of Mankind So Far. This new one, being infinitely more comprehensive and up-to-date, now supersedes it. The new work is notable, incidentally, for the line illustrations by the Latvian artist, Janis Cirulis, of a quality rarely found in volumes of this type. As for the text, the finest tribute I can pay Professor Howells is to say that he gives effect to Pascal's famous dictum: "It is dangerous to let man see too clearly how closely he resembles the beasts unless, at the same time, we show him how great he is."

WORLD IN FERMENT

Reason Clashes With Emotions

By WILLIAM D. PATTERSON

THE GREAT IDEAS that change, and have changed, the world also provide the powerful paradoxes that make our modern age such a desperate race between survival and catastrophe, Barbara Ward makes clear in her challenging new book, "Five Ideas That Change the World" (Norton).

The ideas that form five of the most basic strands of contemporary civilized experience are, in the author's judgment: nationalism, industrialism, colonialism, communism and internationalism.

Each of these complex concepts, with much of their collateral ideological baggage, has been admirably summarized by Miss Ward in a skilled feat of clear thinking and compact writing.

It is interesting to note that this latest volume by this talented political essayist was derived from a recent series of lectures at the University College of Ghana to help celebrate this newest African nation's own emergence from colonial status. The quality of the lectures is also a commentary on the cultural and educational progress in Ghana, suggesting it is far greater than one might have imagined.

"The great paradox of this century," Miss Ward writes in her closing chapter, "is that we have reached an extreme pitch of national feeling all around the world just at the moment, when, from every rational point of view, we have to find ways of progressing beyond nationalism. This point needs great emphasis because, in this field, our reason and our emotion probably do not work in the same direction."

One cannot understand our clashing era of internationalism without first exploring the great ideas that shaped it, and this the author does with a freshness of intellectual approach and treatment that is not only illuminating but a special value of this book.

In the evolution of nationalism, Miss Ward stresses, the central fact is that the modern state, whether democratic or despotic, "rests on its ability to impose its policies and to achieve its will" upon an entire nation and people. This development, a phenomenon primarily of the present era, must be understood as a warning for our age because "the greatest danger of nationalism in our modern world is that its loyalties are too narrow. It does not admit of obligations beyond its own frontiers, of rights and duties which transcend the state."

Industrialism generated the tremendous economic and technical power of the modern state, and at the same time sounded the knell of colonialism as the simple, static societies of the colonies struggled to achieve the benefits of industrialism through national independence.

Into the midst of this dynamic, changing world picture exploded communism. This tremendous event is analyzed with magnificent bite and insight by the author, exposing both the economic fallacies and the human failing of communism's monstrously successful crusade against the spirit of man.

BARBARA WARD

Now caught in a deadly competition with communism, differing with the communists on the nature of man and of justice, the free world must nevertheless fumble its way toward new concepts of peace under law that will so limit national sovereignty as to save the globe from atomic annihilation.

This is a desperate race between sanity and disaster for all mankind, and Miss Ward has no solution or prognosis beyond urging the west "to negotiate for years, for decades if necessary" to build a law-abiding world society in which all peoples and ideologies can go their way in peace.

Born in England in 1914, Barbara Ward's life and work have been attuned to a world in crisis, caught between two vast world wars and a cold war.

Taking honors at Oxford University in philosophy, economics and political science, Miss Ward has become one of the most noted and influential present-day writers and lecturers in these fields, as well as international affairs.

Well known on both sides of the Atlantic, she has received honorary degrees from Smith, Columbia and Harvard.

With her husband, Sir Robert Jackson, and their son, the author lives in London and pursues her favorite hobbies of music and reading when at home.

STAMP PACKET

By J. M. ANGUS

As on several occasions in the past, the United States post office, contrary to its ruling against such issues, is preparing a memorial stamp for the late John Foster Dulles.

Last year the citizens' stamp advisory committee introduced a ruling that the post office should wait 25 years before honoring a famous person, American or otherwise, claiming that such recognition could start off political controversies amongst supporters and opponents of persons so honored. The post office officially endorsed this policy and refused to issue a stamp to mark the 100th anniversary in 1960, of the birth of General John Pershing, leader of American army forces in the First World War.

Exceptions to this rule were made when portraits of the late President Roosevelt and General Patton appeared on stamps, shortly after their deaths. In the case of Mr. Dulles, it is rumored that the postal officials were opposed to the issue but were overruled by a personal order from President Eisenhower.

The growth of tropical collecting particularly, has increased a problem which dealers the world over are trying to solve in a manner that will prove satisfactory to themselves as well as their customers, but so far they have not found the answer. What action, they ask, should a stamp dealer take when a collector orders stamps which are available only at prices considerably in excess of the catalogue price shown in Stanley Gibbons. If the dealer orders the set and adds a reasonable margin of profit, the retail price is considerably higher than catalogue and the catalogue-conscious collectors not only refuse to buy, but brands the dealer as a rogue and cheat.

Another glaring example is the 1949 Japan Flying Geese stamp catalogued at 15 though only obtainable at 8 or more wholesale in Japan. A dealer ordering these stamps would have to sell them at 10 times catalogue to make a profit, thereby laying himself open to abuse, and probably losing a customer. In these cases, the collector forgets the large number of stamps he has purchased for half or third catalogue value.

It would be well to remember that catalogue prices have little relation to sale values.

In Victoria It was Referred to as 'T HOAX, HOLDUP

DID JOHN HICKS really shoot himself? Did he actually have close to $2,000 in his hip pocket? Did Mrs. Lascelles really see it all happen?

Three-quarters of a century ago, these and similar questions were sole topic of conversation in Victoria's pubs, clubs and drawing rooms, after a series of pistol shots disturbed sleeping Oswego Street around 10 o'clock on the night of Oct. 28, 1885.

At the sound of the first shot, Mary Hicks, bride of less than three weeks, who had repeatedly gone out on the porch that evening to see if her husband was coming, rushed excitedly into the Moffatt living room to cry out: "Come, quickly, everybody! There's trouble outside!"

Her uncle and dinner host, Hamilton Moffatt, with three or four of the guests, followed her to the veranda of the big, old-fashioned family residence on the south side of Michigan Street near the corner of Oswego. As they stood listening they heard two more shots in rapid succession. Moffatt, who by day was chief clerk in the local Indian department office, grabbed a revolver from a hall drawer and as he ran down the driveway to investigate, he heard still another shot, coupled with a cry for help.

Quickening his pace, in a matter of seconds Moffatt was out in the middle of Oswego Street looking toward the harbor, and when his eyes got accustomed to the gloom he noticed a dark shadow on the west side of the road near the plank sidewalk. It was the prostrate figure of a man who, as Moffatt drew near, gave a groan of pain.

"Who is it?" said the cautious Moffatt.

"It's me."

"Who's me?"

"Hicks."

"My God, John, what happened?" gasped Moffatt, pocketing his gun and kneeling beside the injured man.

It was just then that he sensed someone behind him, and, turning, found the tall figure of a man in an overcoat close by.

"Who are you?" demanded Moffatt, slightly startled.

"Copeland," said the stranger quietly. "I live near here. When I heard the shooting I came to see what was going on."

Just then the injured man's wife, Mary Hicks, came running down the road to give an anguished cry as she caught sight of her husband lying on the road.

FROM A HOUSE across the street came next James Lascelles and his wife to join the group, attracted by the commotion. Mrs. Lascelles took Mary Hicks into her house to give her a drink of water, as Copeland and Moffatt carried the wounded man to the Moffatt home.

Indoors they laid him on a sofa and opening his clothing saw he was bleeding from a bullet wound in the chest. Someone went to the nearest phone (at the J. R. Saunders house) to summon a doctor and the police.

When Dr. Matthews arrived with Police Superintendent Charles P. Bloomfield—the city chief was styled superintendent then—they found Hicks still conscious and between spasms of pain he told of how he'd been held up by two men, shot in a scuffle, and robbed of between $1,800 and $2,000 in gold coins and bank notes.

"Good heavens," exclaimed Moffatt, "why on earth did you carry that much money around with you? Especially at night!"

Dr. Matthews reported that the bullet had lodged in a difficult position, but that he would take it out in the morning. Meantime, Hicks was given a sedative and made comfortable.

WIDOWED as a bride of only 18 days, wistful Mary Hicks.

"It'll be tough with him," said the doctor to Moffatt as he took his leave.

As the injured man was still able to give a lucid account of what happened, the police superintendent took down a few of the details. Apparently after the dinner party that evening at the Moffatts, Hicks had driven uptown about 8 o'clock to return a hired horse and buggy to a livery stable. Then he returned in a hack, which waited for him about five minutes. Then he went uptown again.

Later in the evening he walked home to James Bay and as he got to the intersection of Oswego and Michigan he noticed two men on his left. They must have closed in behind him, for one of them fired at him at close range, the shot sending Hicks' hat flying.

Startled, he wheeled round, and was immediately seized by one of the assailants, who twisted his cravat around his throat until it nearly choked him. As they struggled, the second desperado went through his pockets, taking his purse from a hip pocket, his gold watch, and finally the cravat with a diamond stick pin.

In the scuffle Hicks said he was borne to the ground and before his attackers made off, the shorter of the two, who had drawn a revolver, fired three or four shots at him, one of which hit him in the chest.

As the robbers made off, Hicks thought they parted, one going over a fence and across a field next door to the Lascelles property, the other heading down Oswego toward Superior.

His purse, he figured, held at the time around $1,800, made up of $200 in gold coins, the remainder in Bank of British Columbia notes, mostly 50's.

"How on earth would anyone know that I'd just withdrawn that amount of money today?" Hicks wondered out loud.

Bloomfield noted that although Moffatt and Copeland were at Hicks' side in quick time they saw no one else on the street. But, of course, it was dark.

CHECKING DOWN the street to see if Mr. and Mrs. Lascelles had any information, here Bloomfield heard a slightly different version.

Jimmy Lascelles was a horse trader, whose livery barns were on the west side of Broad Street near the corner of Broughton. His wife told the superintendent that she had been unable to sleep because of a severe cough and towards 10 o'clock she was startled when a sudden flash of light illuminated their bedroom.

"It was like lightning," she said, and was followed by a sharp report.

She got out of bed, raised the blind, and across the street saw a man yelling at the top of his voice.

"Screaming as if he was crazy," she said, "and no one else in sight."

As she watched she saw another flash and the report of a gun that seemed to be in the man's hand. There were three or four shots, she said, and at the final shot the man staggered and fell to the ground.

A few seconds later she saw him slowly get on his knees, then rise to his feet. In a sort of doubled-over position he walked a few feet, then fell down again. He fell face down, then rolled over his back.

Mrs. Lascelles woke her husband, who also took in the scene, and as she grabbed a dressing gown to go out he stopped her.

"Don't you go out there," said Lascelles. "He might take a shot at you."

Lascelles hurriedly dressed and went out a few seconds after Moffatt and Copeland were on the scene. Mrs. Lascelles was absolutely positive that there was no one but Hicks on the road when the shooting took place.

With knitted brows Bloomfield committed most of this to his notebook, then lantern in hand explored the spot where Hicks had been found. Some little distance away he found a couple of letters addressed to Hicks, farther off an empty buckskin purse, and still farther away the cravat minus the diamond pin. From the muddy roadway he also retrieved Hicks' hat, which had been pierced from back to front by a bullet.

EXAMINING THE ARTICLES at the police station Bloomfield noticed powder burns around the hole in the back of the hat. Something else aroused his interest; the cravat which Hicks claimed had been used to nearly choke him, seemed to be unwrinkled.

While he had been talking to the wounded man at the Moffatts, Bloomfield noticed the position of the bullet wound below the chest, and took in Hicks' double-breasted waistcoat hanging on a nearby chair. Idly fingering the bullet hole in the vest he noticed it was in the under flap; the outside flap, that overlapped, was unharmed. There were powder burns around the hole in the cloth, and Bloomfield wondered whether the robber had undone his waistcoat to rifle his pockets, then poked the muzzle of the gun inside his vest before pulling the trigger.

As against this, Hicks said he was on the ground when the gunman fired at him.

Puzzling to Bloomfield was Mrs. Lascelles' description of the shooting: a flash like lightning followed by a report. At that distance sight and sound would have been practically simultaneous, unless, of course, Mrs. Lascelles was a poor hand at describing things.

SHE HAD SEEN a flash illuminate the bedroom, then went and let the blind up. If Hicks shot himself, as she described, how was his empty purse found so far away from where he fell?

It was long after midnight when the bemused Bloomfield decided to call it a day. Any further investigation would have to wait for daylight.

It was a season of the year when Victoria was having its troubles with an unusually large influx of floaters, riffraff from Puget Sound points, probably chased out by a burst of police activity. Only the previous night a couple of safecrackers had been disturbed at work on Sam Clay's liquor store safe on Johnson Street, and the morning's Colonist carried Bloomfield's message to storekeepers and householders to make extra sure their premises were locked after dark.

Now the police department was on the alert for Hicks' attackers, two men in dark clothing, one tall, the other short, the tall man with a moustache and black felt hat—men, who might be in possession of a gold hunting watch with a black face, a diamond stickpin, or any large quantity of Bank of B.C. notes.

Next morning Hicks was a little weaker and Dr. Matthews removed the bullet, a conical .38, which he handed to Bloomfield.

A few minutes later horse dealer Lascelles contacted the superintendent to report a discovery. In a field beside his house he pointed out a revolver lying on the ground. He had spotted it just after daybreak, as it lay 30 feet over the fence, and at least 70 feet from where Hicks was found. There were no footprints near the gun, which was a practically new, five-chambered "British Bulldog" of English manufacture with one live shell and four empties in it. The ammunition was of U.S. make, and the fired cases all had the same curious characteristic; the throats were split. Which could either mean they were slightly off calibre for the gun, or had singularly powerful loads. There was no question of linking the bullet that injured Hicks with the gun found in the field; the science of ballistics hadn't reached that stage in 1885.

If the contradictions in the case puzzled Bloomfield, it's to his credit that he seems to have kept an open mind and he now decided to back track on the events of the previous evening to see if anything had been overlooked, anything that might have a bearing on Hicks' story.

HE LEARNED that 35-year-old John Hicks, who had only been out from England a few years, had married 24-year-old Mary Blenkinsop about 18 days previously. The bride was a niece of Mrs. Moffatt, which accounted for the fact that the couple were married by Bishop Edward Cridge in the Moffatt home. Mrs. Moffatt was a daughter of pioneer Hudson's Bay Company skipper, John McNeill, from whom we get McNeill Avenue and McNeill (now Shoal) Bay. It was also because of this family connection that the Moffatts put off the dinner party as a farewell gesture before the young couple left for England the next day.

Detailing his trip to town the night before, Hicks said he met his best friend, Charles Braund, at the skating rink just after 8 p.m. He wanted to thank Braund for his wedding present, and the pair had a drink together at the Grotto, before Hicks hired Tom Cudlip's hansom cab to take him back to James Bay.

Just as he neared the Moffatts' he suddenly remembered he wanted to pay Dr. Praeger his bill, so he went back to town with Cudlip and again met up with Braund. Although they ran in to Praeger in one of the bars, Hicks decided not to pay him until the next day.

Braund and Hicks only had two drinks each during the whole evening, and finally around 9 o'clock Hicks said goodnight to his pal, and walked back to James Bay.

BLOOMFIELD checked out the story with 30-year-old Charlie Braund, a clerk in Charles Morton's Government Street Bookshop and close friend of Hicks' for nearly two years. Nine months after they met, said Braund, Hicks made a trip to England, stayed there about six months, and returned to Victoria that spring. He didn't know much about Hicks' finances but he did notice that Hicks changed a $20 gold piece in Morton's store the morning of the day he was shot.

Hicks, from his sick bed at the Moffatts, had an idea that he'd been followed from town, but as James Bay was pretty rural in those days, no one reported having seen him on his homeward journey. He walked, of course, over the old, wooden James Bay bridge (which is now the Causeway), along Belleville to Menzies, south to Superior and then west to Oswego. From Belleville on Menzies there were only two houses on the west side; James Dunsmuir's house, between Belleville and Quebec, and the home of Tiedeman, the architect, at the corner of Menzies and Superior. On the east side was the tract of land that held the wooden "bird cages," serving as legislative buildings, and the old drill shed on Menzies, forerunner of the brick drill hall built seven years later.

While city police officers eyed departing steamship passengers, and checked around secondhand stores and slop shops, Bloomfield checked the shipping agencies to come up with a curious fact. The Hicks' hadn't booked passage to England through anyone in Victoria.

The superintendent, remembering Hicks' remark about withdrawing the money from the bank that day, visited Victoria's four banks, the Dominion Post Office Savings, the Bank of British North America, the Bank of British Columbia, and the private bank owned by Garesche, Green & Co. At none of them had Hicks an account, although he had cashed a small money order at the Bank of B.C. a week before.

Talking to manager W. C. Ward of the Bank of B.C., on the northwest corner of Bastion and Government, Bloomfield produced the buckskin purse and asked the bank man if it could have held the amount of money Hicks described.

"Possible," said Ward. "But it would make an awfully big bulge in his pocket." This filed in Oct. 29, and toward midday on Oct. 30, John Hicks could answer no more questions. He was dead.

Marlene Dixon has Three-Year-Old Understudy

And VERSATILITY EXTRAORDINARY

By BERT BINNY

IN HIS "Fables for our Time", James Thurber recalls the story of "Little Red Riding Hood" — though in slightly different, modernized form.

His version relates that the little girl in the tale required no time at all to penetrate the wolf's disguise of nightcap and gown, took an automatic out of her basket of goodies and shot him dead.

The moral, adds Mr. Thurber, is that . . . "It is not so easy to fool little girls nowadays as it used to be."

Now, while an authority like Mr. Thurber dismisses any notion that wolves can ever hope to resemble grandmothers, there is also the interesting question of whether little girls could ever hope to resemble wolves?

There is one who tried anyway and, if the success of her subsequent activities in the area of make-believe are any criterion, probably made a good job of it.

She is Marlene Dixon, winner of two provincial best actress awards, four acting scholarships to the Banff School of Fine Arts, three years a professional radio actress and, currently, one of the most finished and skilled performers in these parts.

Marlene, whose most recent success was her playing of "Bubba Ryan" in the Theatre Guild's "Summer of the Seventeenth Doll," was born in England; to be precise, at Mansfield in the county of Nottingham. Mansfield, by the way, traces its early fame to its association with Sherwood Forest, home of Robin Hood and his merry men. However, our concern is not with the Maid Marian of nearly 800 years ago but with the Maid Marlene of today.

Marlene was early interested in acting. She started when she was seven years old. At 12 she undertook singing, dancing and acting in various musical productions and pantomimes. It was at this period in her history that she was cast as the Wolf in Little Red Riding Hood—surely a rousing compliment to her capacities in character roles? Then she was the Fairy Queen in "Cinderella" and the gentle Alice Fitzwarren in "Dick Whittington." Both at school and at home she filled numerous parts; far too numerous to be remembered in their entirety.

Marlene, then Miss Polak, came from England to Calgary in 1952. Here she joined the well-known Workshop 14 and, in 1953, won the best actress award in the Alberta Provincial Festival as "Esther" in Josephine Niggli's "The Red Velvet Coat."

Another part she well remembers was that of "Lotta" in "The Corn Husk Doll" and she was "Princess Alice" in George Bernard Shaw's "The Applecart," "Cecily Cardew" in Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "Karen" in "Good-bye, My Fancy." She appeared as a mail-order bride in "Breeches of Bond Street" by Elsie Park Gowan of the University of Alberta.

At the Banff School of Fine

Arts she played "Rosalind" in "As You Lik It."

Marlene lived in Victoria from 1956 to 1958 and appeared with St. Luke's Players. In 1957 she achieved her second provincial best actress award, this time as "Silver Lotus" in "A Battle of Wits." She was also "Rachel" in "Inherit the Earth" and played in "The Curious Savage."

Now, returned to Victoria once more, she scored another very outstanding success as "Bubba Ryan" in "Summer of the Seventeenth Doll."

Marlene Dixon advocates the development of both the voice and of body movement for all actresses. She herself trained in ballet for three years.

"But," says she, "you have to have something inside you to start with."

And that "something," in her view, is more than just the desire to act.

She feels that community theatre is "a marvelous thing."

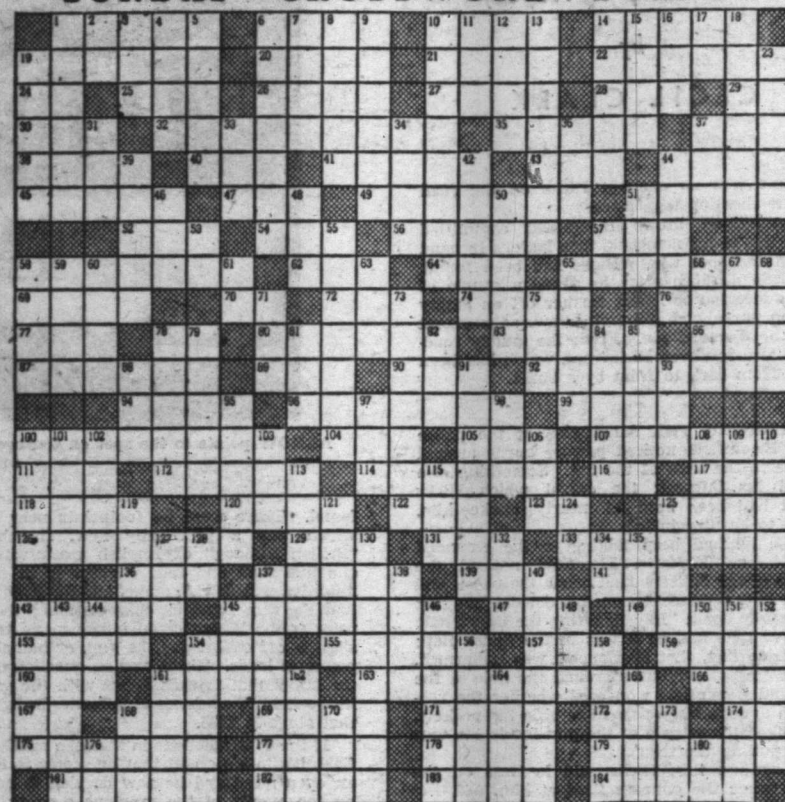

"It gives young people something to do," she says, "Culture is a thing teen-agers are not as interested in as they should be."

And following — sometimes literally, but always figuratively — in mother's footsteps is Miss Karen Louise Dixon, aged 3, and, incidentally, already an ardent phone conversationalist.

If, as suggested, Karen Louise is a "born actress," then she is also a lucky one. She doesn't even have to stir beyond her front door to find an example — and a mighty good one — to follow.

But for the Loss of a Petition to the Crown B.C. Secession Threat in '78

WITHDRAWAL of British Columbia from Confederation was once more than an academic and political consideration. It was a declared policy of the B.C. legislature and might have taken place but for the strange disappearance—for long months—of the despatch asking for the change in some Dominion government department at Ottawa. Recent discovery of correspondence of the Hon. Joseph Trutch with his brother, John, now in the library of the University of B.C., indicates how narrow was the margin of possible disintegration of the Dominion at that time.

To properly appreciate the situation, it is necessary to understand the position of British Columbia in Confederation. It was admitted to the partnership of Canadian provinces on an entirely different basis from the colonies that formed the Dominion in 1867. The Pacific Coast area entered union as the result of a three-party treaty between Canada, British Columbia and the Imperial Government, and conditional upon the implementation of a definite agreement. The continuance of British Columbia was dependent upon the proper performance of the treaty obligations by Canada. That the responsibilities of the treaty were acknowledged at Ottawa is evidenced in Hansard and by official documents:

Lord Lisgar, Governor-General, in a telegram to the B.C. Government in 1871 (B.C. Sessional Papers, No. 1, 1871) stated definitely: "The Terms of Union are in the nature of a treaty."

Hon. H. Langevin, April 5, 1876 (Hansard, P. 1068)—"This Dominion was bound by a solemn treaty with one of the provinces to build the railway within a certain time."

Sir Charles Tupper, April 21, 1877 (Hansard, P. 1677)—"Now sir, the honorable gentleman, as I have stated, first took power to construct this work directly by the government and then made a solemn binding treaty with British Columbia, that by 1890 this work should be constructed... He made a binding solemn treaty, and the good faith of the government of this country was pledged as far as a minister—and a minister has power to pledge it to a great extent—could pledge it without consultation with the House."

Sir John A. Macdonald, April 23, 1877 (Hansard, P. 1712)—"If he (Prime Minister Alex. MacKenzie) looks at the Treaty he will find the work of construction should be commenced within two years, and that the government should secure the completion of it in ten years."

Alexander MacKenzie, April 23, 1877 (Hansard, P. 1771)—"A word as to British interests. The honorable gentleman said the Carnarvon Terms, as they were known, were not only an engagement with British Columbia but with the Imperial Government. The very basis of the negotiation with British Columbia was that the Order-in-Council of 1871 was also Imperial in its character."

THAT THIS VIEW of the status of British Columbia continued was illustrated by Sir Charles Tupper in 1880, when in the debate on supply, April 15, 1880, he stated: "I will ask the indulgence of the House while I refer to one of the most important State Papers—one of the most important documents that forms a portion of the Archives of Canada—I mean the treaty made between the government of Canada and British Columbia, and the Imperial Government."

Under the original Terms of Union (Article II) it was agreed that actual construction of the transcontinental railway was to commence within two years. In 1874 this had not been started, and there was no indication of when it might begin. Then the Dominion Government sent an emissary to Victoria to propose, in of-the-record discussions, alterations in the treaty arrangements. He did not convince the provincial administration of the bona fides of either himself or the Central Government.

G. A. Walkem wired Ottawa asking for assurance that any proposals made would be considered as binding upon Ottawa. Prime Minister MacKenzie replied by terminating negotiations and ordering his emissary home. This proceeding roused suspicions in the provincial government as to the honesty and fair dealing of the Canadian ministry. Walkem complained to the third signatory to the treaty, the British Government, of the treatment that the province had received. Lord Carnarvon, the colonial secretary, unwilling to see Confederation disrupted, offered his good offices as arbiter. He insisted, however, that before he commenced consideration of the complaint both governments would pledge acceptance of his decision. This undertaking was promptly given by both the Dominion and British Columbia.

HIS AWARD extended the period for the completion of the railway; stated positively that the line from Esquimalt to Nanaimo should be constructed as a federal charge, and that a wagon road should be built by the Dominion from the Rocky Mountains to the sea, paralleling the right-of-way of the railroad across the province. His award, as a result of the pledged acceptance, became a variation of Article II of the original Terms of Union.

Despite the solemn undertaking of Ottawa to fulfill the new conditions laid down by Lord Carnarvon, the Canadian government failed to keep faith either with the province or His Lordship. This was especially true in connection with the Vancouver Island railway, and ultimately more than 2,000,000 acres of Vancouver Island was wrongfully given by Ottawa to Robert Dunsmuir and associates to build the line as a private enterprise. The construction of the wagon road was ignored entirely by the Dominion, and in subsequent highway building and maintenance of such a wagon road, British Columbia spent somewhere between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000, which is a moral debt against the federal treasury.

British Columbia waited another three years for definite action by the Dominion under the changed provisions of Article II of the solemn treaty of 1871. In the summer of 1878 the patience of the legislature at Victoria gave way. A resolution was passed asking Queen Victoria to sanction the withdrawal of the province from Confederation, unless actual railway construction work commenced before May of 1879.

The petition to the Throne reached Ottawa for transmission to London on Sept. 11, 1878. Then it disappeared. Months went by without acknowledgment either from Ottawa or Downing Street. In the meantime, there was a Dominion election, which returned Sir John A. Macdonald's party to office with a large majority, but Sir John was defeated in his old riding of Kingston. He was immediately offered one of the two Victoria seats, and was elected.

With the Prime Minister of Canada as a local member, and with his persuasiveness, the situation eased. Then it was that the missing petition was located. It was found in an office in the government buildings at Ottawa sometime in March of 1879. It had been "lost" during the most crucial months of the dispute. If it had gone forward to London by ordinary process of dispatch, the result might have altered the structure of Canadian Confederation.

JOSEPH TRUTCH was in a peculiarly advantageous position to properly evaluate the situation. He had been the chief commissioner of lands and works of British Columbia from 1864 to the entry of the Colony into Union with Canada. He led the delegation sent to Ottawa in 1870 to carry on negotiations with the federal government which conference ended with the drafting of the treaty conditions. He had been commissioned the following year to carry the Terms of Union, as approved by the House of Commons and Senate, to London and assist with his knowledge of British Columbia in having the agreement endorsed by Parliament. Trutch had been selected as the first lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, and was conversant with all the happenings connected with the Dominion-Provincial relations. He was a cool, well educated and dependable individual, who was not at all anxious to see Confederation break up. He realized that such a catastrophe would have international as well as national repercussions.

Immediately upon quitting office Trutch went to Ottawa. He was anxious to find if there was a possibility of continued public employment. He wrote a long letter to his brother John in Victoria, from Boston, Dec. 5, 1876, giving a digest of his visit to Ottawa, where he discussed British Columbia with a wide variety of influential individuals:

"At Toronto I had confabs with Sir John who appears confident of the early return of his party to power and expresses the intention to take up the CPR undertaking just where he left it upon his resignation and to push it on to completion with the utmost vigor. The people, he says, are determined to maintain the Confederation which they know can not be done unless the RR is built at once and the Conservatives are ready to go to the country at once on this policy.

"He expressed regret at my contemplated withdrawal from B.C., but promised to write to Lord Carnarvon in my favor (and has I suppose done so) saying they could have me back again when they got into office, if I did not get too good a berth. Lord Dufferin was most kind in his reception of me. He at once said he had already written to Lord Carnarvon about me, and was glad I had come to Ottawa that he might talk over the B.C. affair again. This we did fully enough on each of the three days... I talked over B.C. matters generally with Mr. McKenzie and his colleagues but as they did not introduce the vexed question of the railway dispute I, of course, did not mention it."

After telling of the discussions he had with others, respecting his personal future, as well as that of British Columbia, Joseph continued:

"As regards the R.R. embroglio I am satisfied that Lord Dufferin's desire is to bring about an adjustment of this present difficulty satisfactory to B.C. as well as to the Dominion at large and creditable to the Empire..."

Trutch continued on to England, and in another letter dated from Folkestone, April 10, 1877, he reflects conclusions reached after having held discussions with Sir Anthony Musgrave, last Colonial governor of B.C., Lord Carnarvon and other Imperial statesmen and officials.

"I have almost entirely given up any idea of the railroad being commenced in earnest for some years yet; and if as I suppose, the choice be left to the community either to revert to the political status of 1870—the much abused one-man system—or continue in the Dominion on re-arranged financial conditions in lieu of the railroad, I have but little doubt that the latter course will be adopted; for I certainly think it would be more conducive to the material interests of the country, and I can't fancy the politicians giving up 'self government' how ever strong their feeling against Canada. In either case, I look for a 'new departure' in B.C. next year and I confess I cannot anticipate that it will be of such a character as to tend to the improvement of your position, or indeed that of any Englishman."

(This reference to the prospects of his brother and other Englishmen might suggest a fear that such a development would lead to annexation with U.S., a subject that was constantly before the scrutiny of both the Canadian and Imperial Governments. It was this fear that resulted in the changing of the route of the railway in 1879 from the Yellowhead to the Kicking Horse Pass, and the abandonment of all other surveys to possible terminals, and the selection of Burrard Inlet as the out-port.)

"The only chance for that consists in the possibility of the reorganization of the country as a Crown Colony, which I know is considered, but which, for the reason above suggested, I think very improbable. My cogitations come therefore to this: that it is probable you may, by this time next year, be thinking of turning your ideas to some other direction in search of occupation. For B.C. given over completely to Canadian influences and without expectation of the construction of the long-talked-of railroad, would, I am sure, be in all respects but climate, a good place to leave for you. On the other hand under a Crown Colony system I can fancy your being much better placed than now."

Another year went by without British Columbia receiving any satisfactory guarantee that Canada was acting in good faith. Then it was that the petition to Queen Victoria was approved by the legislature and was forwarded as a state dispatch for transmission to London.

Sir John later made good his personal promise to Joseph Trutch. He hired him to act as the agent of the Canadian government in B.C. in connection with the railway terms. It was Trutch who talked the provincial government into consenting to the federal government's deal with Dunsmuir for the building of the E & N Railway, and the setting aside of 3,500,000 acres in the Peace River block as deficiency lands for those alienated on Vancouver Island and in the mainland railway grant.

The wily Macdonald also ended the opposition of the man who had led the fight to compel Ottawa to adhere to the treaty terms. He was George Anthony Walkem, an able man and a fighter. Sir John appointed him to the Supreme Court bench.

has basic philosophy:

GALS CAN'T LIVE BY FOOD ALONE

HOLLYWOOD—Doris Day has received the North American theatre exhibitors' vote as the top feminine box office attraction. But she is not one to allow awards to turn her head, for Doris is always working to discover ways for improving herself, inwardly and outwardly.

When I saw her in "Pillow Talk," I could hardly believe that the girl in the slinky backless dinner dress and high-fashion hairstyle was the same Doris.

"I couldn't have played a sophisticated New Yorker a few years ago," Doris told me. "If clothes are to be becoming, you have to feel right in them. I still like sweaters and shirts," she insisted, "and I always will, but Jean Louis designed the right dresses for the right occasions and I found them easy to wear."

"I love your new hair-do," I exclaimed. Doris smiled. "It's quite a change, but most people seem to like it."

"It's a new you," I enthused. "You never looked better."

I was visiting Doris in her dressing room at Universal where she had just come from recording the song, "Pillow Talk." It was well past lunch-time, but a tray was placed in front of Doris.

"I don't want to eat before singing," she explained.

Cottage cheese, sliced pineapple, a hamburger patty, celery and carrot sticks and a glass of milk were on her tray.

"I'm on a permanent health kick," she explained. "Friends may laugh at me, but it will be my turn when they have to reduce and I don't."

"I don't count calories and my weight never changes, but I have respect for my body and the food I put in it. I didn't always. It's so easy to get interested in other things or involved in your work and not give a thought to what you are eating."

"When I was singing with Les Brown's band, I used to grab a cup of coffee and a doughnut for breakfast and have a sandwich and a coke for lunch. But when I started working in pictures I didn't have enough energy to last out the day, so I changed my eating habits."

"Now, I never get overly tired," she exclaimed, "but I never eat over-cooked or over processed foods. They have no nutritional value."

"False foods are like false friends," I agreed. "They let you down."

Advice to Milady

IN DORIS' HEALTH PROGRAM a non-worry campaign plays a major role.

"One needs a basic philosophy—something to live by. Worry can spoil your days, your nights, your health. It isn't easy not to worry, but once you have done all you can, try to let go and take your mind from that problem. Be aware of what is around you, and try to enjoy the moment that you are living—the now."

"Would you sum up your fitness program as consisting of eating well and sleeping well?" I asked, assuming that this included a control of anxiety.

"And breathing correctly," Doris added. "You know we can live quite a long time without food or water, but only minutes without oxygen."

"Breath control is important to singers," she went on. "We have to know how to use it properly, and part of this is good posture. When you slump over, you crowd your lungs and cut off your breath. This creates fatigue. It is difficult to make a person realize that it is more restful to sit up straight than to slouch."

By Lydia Lane

"Do you think proper breathing can be learned with a do-it-yourself routine?"

"Yes," she replied. "You have to break a bad habit of shallow breathing in the upper chest and learn to breathe deeply, using all of your lungs."

"A good way to test whether you are breathing correctly is to lie on the floor on your back and place a book on your abdomen. When all of your lungs, and not just the top, are being used the book goes up and down. But if you are a chest-breather, the book doesn't move," she concluded.

HOAX, HOLDUP or HOMICIDE?

Johnson visited him and took a dying declaration. It followed the story already given, but with one difference; this time Hicks said he'd brought his bank notes from England with him in the spring.

Bloomfield again visited bank manager Ward to ask if Bank of B.C. notes were obtainable in England.

"Not in the quantity he described," said Ward, and related how most of the bank's currency circulated in B.C. "There might be about $25 of our notes in Britain," he said, "but certainly no more."

An inquest opened the afternoon of Oct. 30, with Edwin Johnson doubling in the role of coroner. The various witnesses testified—all except Mrs. Hicks, who was prostrate with grief. The perplexed coroner suggested an adjournment for a week to give the police time to throw further light on the matter.

On Nov. 6 the inquest continued, but nothing further was brought to light. John Richards, sworn, said he was another close friend of the deceased, and was with Hicks the morning he died. Richards asked him point blank if he had shot himself; Hicks' answer was a decided "No." He also denied ownership of the gun.

Bank Manager Ward affirmed that it was impossible for Hicks to obtain over $1,600 worth of Bank of B.C. notes in England, and the police reported the revolver hadn't been purchased in Victoria but most likely bought in the United States.

Mrs. Hicks, now able to give evidence, said she doubted if her husband bought it on their honeymoon. She couldn't remember a single occasion during the two days they were in Portland, and the week they spent in Salem, when he wasn't by her side. She said her husband often carried a roll of notes in his buckskin purse but she couldn't say what amount. She had never known him to possess a revolver, and there had been nothing to mar their brief but happy marriage.

Bloomfield seems to have had his doubts about Mrs. Lascelles' eyewitness account, and at the inquest he noticed a slight variation. This time she omitted mention of the severe cough that kept her awake and said she was waiting up for her eldest son.

TROUBLING BLOOMFIELD was this; if Mrs. Lascelles was correct and Hicks fired all four shots in front of their house, how was his purse found so far down the street? And if the final shot so disabled him that, as Mrs. Lascelles described it, he walked doubled up only a few paces, then fell . . . how did he throw the gun 70 feet away?

He was puzzled, too, as to what prompted Lascelles to play amateur detective and search for the gun just after daybreak.

"The strangest case I've ever encountered," Coroner Johnson finally had to admit, adjourning the hearing for another month just in case additional evidence was unearthed.

On Dec. 7 the hearing continued but nobody came up with an answer to the night-time shooting of John Hicks. The coroner then summed it up with these remarks to the jury:

"There are several verdicts you can reach," he said, "and one of them could be 'Shot by a person or persons unknown.' But," he added swayed perhaps by civic pride, "this would infer that life and property are not sufficiently protected in the city if a man can be robbed and murdered without discovery."

He went on: "If you can believe Mr. and Mrs. Lascelles, you can call it suicide or . . . you can return an open verdict."

The jury pondered the matter, then declared that "John Hicks came to his death by a pistol shot fired by his own hand but not with the intention of taking his life."

It was many weeks before Victorians ceased arguing the merits of the case. Whether it was hoax, holdup or homicide, one thing was sure: John Hicks carried the answer to the riddle to his grave.

His pretty young wife didn't outlive him by long. Five years later, in May, 1890, Victoria papers copied a brief item from Rosebud, near Gleichen, in the Northwest Territory to the effect that Mary Hicks had passed away at the age of 29. Perhaps she never fully recovered from the shock of the night-time tragedy that deprived her of her husband of less than a month; a tragedy dubbed in its day "The Oswego Street Mystery."

THEIRS a LABOR of LOVE

By Flora Hamilton Burns

Women Still Labor for Royal Jubilee

FROM the earliest days the women of Victoria have supported the Royal Jubilee Hospital with a dedicated enthusiasm. They have accomplished amazing things in the past, and provided inspiration and example for the future.

The original Royal Hospital, built in 1858, was "for men only," and in cases of emergency, the surgery, the kitchen, or the clothes room became a women's "ward."

In 1863, under the leadership of Mrs. Edward Cridge, wife of the rector of Christ's Church, and Mrs. Thomas Harris, the first mayoress, the ladies of Victoria organized the Female Aid Association, divided the town into nine districts, which they canvassed monthly, and established a "female ward."

The Royal Hospital placed a room at their disposal which the ladies furnished. They engaged a nurse, paid the hospital $6 a week for each patient, paid $5 a week for the nurses' board, and defrayed numerous other expenses, including coal at $11 a ton. But the application on behalf of the nurse to be allowed wine and porter was refused.

Miss Maud Cridge wrote: "No tram cars, no motors, no paved roads or sidewalks, almost no domestic help, but nothing daunted, the ladies picked their dainty steps over rough roads to collect the money, or lifted their voluminous skirts and stepped into the dirty ferry boat to visit the ward on the Indian Reserve across the harbor."

The location of the hospital was very inconvenient and unpleasant for visiting, and the ladies considered it "insalubrious for health," so within a year they built the Female Infirmary at the head of Pandora Green.

In 1869 the two hospitals were amalgamated, the Royal Hospital occupying the Female Infirmary until the erection of the Royal Jubilee Hospital in 1890.

In his first annual report in 1891 the treasurer of the hospital suggested that:

"A committee of ladies could materially assist the directors in obtaining subscribers, and the directors would hail with satisfaction such a valuable volunteer body, and there is no doubt that their labors would have a large amount of success."

The women responded immediately by forming the Ladies' Auxiliary committee. In addition to canvassing for subscriptions, they inaugurated the annual hospital ball, which became an outstanding event during the next 50 years, and was only discontinued during the last war owing to prohibitive costs.

The first annual ball in 1891 was, according to The Colonist, "the largest and most distinguished event of its kind ever attended in British Columbia, and passed off in a magnificent manner. . . . The officers of the fleet attended in strong force. The dances were carried out with a good deal of 'wim' and 'wall flowers' were few and far between."

"Verily this was a 'charity' ball in every respect as the ladies went on the principal that the hospital should get out of the proceeds every dollar that could be spared for it. The splendid supper was happily expressed by one of the gentlemen present as 'a poem in eatables,' and every dainty and delicacy obtainable formed a portion of the fare. Everything was supplied and prepared by the ladies, and the only things purchased were tea, coffee and sugar."

Receipts totalled $1,100, expenses only $218. In order that nothing should be wasted, the ladies made a practice of serving special luncheons or a children's dance the day after the ball. At their first luncheon they served over 200 people at 25 cents a head. There were no canned soups, jelly powders, packaged desserts or refrigerated foods, so the amount of work can be imagined.

Before the end of the year the auxiliary took a house which they called the "Samaritan Home," for maternity cases, strangers and others who could not be admitted to the hospital. To raise funds they organized a concert, toy symphony and dance for the opening of the new Market Building. They sold 850 tickets in advance and from the moment the handsome, wrought-iron gates were opened, the inrush could hardly be handled. And Victorians discovered that the Market Building, with its colonnades and galleries was ideal for such an entertainment.

Said The Colonist: "The affair was a magnificent success, in both a social and pecuniary sense. Seldom have the citizens of Victoria had the pleasure of attending such an informal and pleasant affair which brought in ample funds to relieve distress."

In his next report, the honorary treasurer stated: "The lists of donations and subscriptions have assumed a much more healthy aspect, especially the subscribers' list of $2,580. The result is entirely due to the arduous labors of the Ladies' Auxiliary committee. . . . The hon. treasurer hardly expected such substantial results when he suggested last year the formation of a ladies' committee, and trusts they will act with future bounds."

At the first of their famous bazaars the ladies made over $3,000. It was opened by Mayor Robert Beaven, and the newspaper writeup concluded: "Standing room only was the condition of the assembly hall during the evening, and no extra supplies of that. If the various drapings and decorations were handsome in the afternoon, they were brilliant under the electric lights. . . . During the evening a 'stately minuet' was danced, and Master Reginald Hayward performed a Sailor's Hornpipe in a manner to turn an Ancient Mariner green with envy."

Little did Mayor Beaven know, as he watched that hornpipe, that 30 years later Master Reginald Hayward himself would be occupying the mayoral chair.

Three years later the baby son of Attorney-General D. M. Eberts lay dangerously ill in the hospital. There were no extra nurses and Mrs. Eberts stayed at the hospital to help nurse her three-month-old child. When the hospital was built there had been no funds to install gas or electricity, and while at the hospital Mrs. Eberts daily helped the hard-pressed nurses "do" the huge collection of lamps. Her baby died, and in the days that followed, the hospital was constantly in Mrs. Eberts' thoughts. She felt the most crying need was for electric lighting, and decided that something must be done immediately to remedy the situation.

She called together her friends and neighbors — Mrs. Crowe-Baker of Sissinghurst (now the Gorge Road Hospital), Mrs. Rocke Robertson, her sister-in-law and mother of Dr. Herman Robertson, Mrs. James Dunsmlir, and others, and in 1895 Mrs. Eberts formed the Ageronian Society of Charitable Ladies, for purely philanthropic work in aid of the Jubilee Hospital.

Their activities fill pages of The Colonist for the next five years, but not even Mrs. Herman Robertson, an Ageronian, nor Mrs. H. J. Adams, nee Phyllis Eberts, could tell me why they called themselves Ageronians. Encyclopedias merely state that Ageron was a Phoenician King—a son of Neptune—and father of Cadmus and Europa. At last, in a classical dictionary so ancient that all the s's look like f's, a light gleamed: Electra, "the bright one," a sea nymph, sister of Cadmus, therefore a daughter of Ageron. Victoria's Sea Nymphs, dedicated to bringing electric light to the Jubilee Hospital, adopted the name of Ageron, whose son introduced the alphabet to Europe, and whose daughter gave her name to electricity.

Two years of hard work culminated in December, 1897. The Colonist reported:

"There was an unwonted stream of businessmen up and down Fort Street yesterday, between the hours of noon and 2 o'clock, the reason being that the luncheon at the Ageronian bazaar was too great an attraction to be neglected. In fact, so large was the demand that, work as they might, the ladies could not keep up with the custom offering, and more than one hungry man was seen going hungry away. Afternoon tea was served in a cosy nook by the ladies of the 'Willing Workers of Christ Church Cathedral,' and high tea was served at 6 o'clock."

Ten days later, on Dec. 12, 1897, the Jubilee Hospital was brilliantly illuminated throughout by electric light, completely installed by the Ageronian Society at a cost of $1,000. A plaque in the administration building commemorates this deed of the offspring of Ageron.

The Ageronians also pioneered in hospital practice when they built and furnished two recovery rooms for post-operation care. These rooms were afterwards used for other purposes, but it is amusing that 60 years later the hospital recently provided recovery rooms to conform to the "latest" ideas in hospital care.

At the same time the Ladies' Auxiliary was fighting for maternity and children's wards. They were bitterly disappointed in 1895 when donations from Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Pemberton for a maternity ward were used for a new operating room, and again in 1903 when Lord Strathcona's important gifts were diverted to a new private ward.

Consequently 20 years passed before the first maternity ward was opened during the First World War, solely through the valiant efforts of the Women's Auxiliary, who defrayed the entire cost of converting a convalescent ward for maternity purposes. It served until the East Wing was built in 1925.

During the decade from 1896 the auxiliary worked unceasingly for a children's ward, and when it was finally commenced in 1906, the Women's Auxiliary donated $5,150 of the total cost of $6,900.

In 1898, only three years after the discovery of X-rays, Mrs. H. Dallas Helmcken, a member of the auxiliary, initiated a fund for an X-ray machine which was manufactured in Victoria by Robert Hutchison, a young electrical engineer. The machine was described as "not to be excelled by any other hospital on the Pacific Coast."

This was no exaggeration, for even 12 years later, when the Jubilee Hospital was installing the latest equipment from England in a new X-ray room built "with extensive help from the Women's Auxiliary," many large city hospitals in Canada and the United States had no X-ray equipment.

By the end of the century Victoria was growing rapidly and the ladies reorganized on a broader basis to meet the increasing needs of the hospital. The society was henceforth called the Women's Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital; every woman in Victoria was invited to enroll at an annual subscription of $2, and it was hoped every church would be represented upon the executive.

During the 20th Century the Women's Auxiliary has responded to the demands of the hospital at every turn. By 1912 a large addition, including a maternity ward, was much needed. The auxiliary put on a drive and collected the amazing sum of $112,000 of the required $500,000. However, owing to the war, this major undertaking had to be postponed until 1925, when the East Wing was erected. Since then the auxiliary has made important contributions to the building of the nurses' home, the central block, the maternity wing and many other departments. The work has covered every aspect of hospital care, including mountains of dressings, linen, garments, furnishings, books, comforts of every description, mechanical, electrical and scientific equipment, in addition to great sums for building operations.

Since its inception in 1891 the Women's Auxiliary has contributed the astounding amount of $258,593.19 in cash, in addition to their other benefactions. If the women-hours of labor and energy could be computed, the results would be astronomical. Above all, their personal service of love, care and sympathy has radiated to the sick and suffering through all their activities.

The ideals and qualities of the Women's Auxiliary are fittingly expressed in Joseph Conrad's epic words:

"For life to be large and full, it must contain the care of the past and of the future in every passing moment of the present. Our daily work must be done to the glory of those who have passed on and for the good of those who come after."

In the Sooke Woods Now

Loggers Commute

IT'S COLD in the woods these days.

But that doesn't stop the logger. He shrugs into an extra sweater, tucks into a hot breakfast and punches into the job.

Out on Muir Creek, a charming little harbor facing Juan de Fuca Strait, the logs come down from the bush with regularity, the booms are made up and a tug tows the logs, 300,000 feet at a time, down to the Moore (Stan)-Whittington (Ron) mill at Victoria. These co-owners are native sons, operating a business established by their families over a half century ago.

RON WALKER

4 Daily Colonist
SUNDAY, NOV. 29, 1939

The operation isn't simple.

Charlie Grieve is a faller. He lives in Sooke, and he's the man who sets in motion the first phase of logging. He cuts down the tree.

Of course, Ron Walker, superintendent at the Muir Creek stand, formerly owner and logged by the Elder Logging Company, a family affair, selects the area of activity. He sends Charlie into the bush with his working mate, Charlie Gard, a buckler, and the two of them start the harvest.

You can hear the chain saws screaming from a mile or more away, even with the wind whipping the tall tree tops.

Where the logs have been felled and bucked, the branches cleaned off and piled for burning, Russ Heathman goes in to work. He's a hooker. He sets the gear for hauling the logs out to the spar tree. They come in on the wire cable and are dropped on a stockpile which a shovel loader is continually depleting.

This shovel loader is quite a piece of apparatus. Art Jones is the operator, and one of the highest-paid woods workers. His caterpillar-track machine is equipped with a three-pronged "grab" that manipulates the logs like matchsticks. It's a highly manoeuvrable piece of equipment, and costly. And Art is a virtuoso.

The hook tender clears the high-line and puts the company's brand, 3BS, on the logs, and the truck, with Al Peters of Victoria driving, heads for tidewater.

Here, at the booming ground, Frank Jessiman operates the dumping engine. He lifts the load and tips it into the sea with no time wasted, and Fred George and his father, Eddie, working with a boom boat, make ready the sea-going load.

Eddie, in spite of the handicap of a missing arm, chopped off when a fan blade caught him, is a marvel with a pike pole.

Sometimes, when it's blowing hard down the strait, it's a tricky business rigging a tow-line from the tug to the boom. There's a reef in the middle of the entrance to Muir Creek and the tug stands off while the boom boat runs out to her and picks up a line. Fred George secures it to the boom and the boom boat manipulates the load clear of the narrow creek mouth, with Eddie George leaning on his pike pole to clear the forward end of the rocky point.

DOWN COMES a fir, to the familiar faller's cry, on a Sooke hillside.

Muir Creek isn't a big operation. Most of the men live close by. There are snug dwellings at the old Elder camp, but the bunkhouses are empty and the cookhouse is no longer in use. The loggers live at home.

Bunkhouse life in the modern camps is as pleasant as clean sheets and foam rubber can make it, and the cookhouses and dining halls provide fare to rival the best hotels' menus. But there's much to be said for living at home. The Muir Creek loggers like it.

They have become commuters.

Charles Clark, who is logging manager for Moore-Whittington, is an old-timer in the woods. He's by way of being a pretty efficient cougar hunter, too, and when times were hard in the thirties, he and his brother and their dogs made a substantial sum in bounties.

Charles Clark is one of those quiet-spoken men who doesn't have to raise his voice to be incisive and impressive. When he talks about the woods you get the sure impression he knows what he's talking about.

His work takes him to the Parksville and Nitinat properties of the company, too, and he travels for the most part by air.

Ron and Ada Walker live in the "village" which is part of the headquarters camp. The Elder family built these attractive bungalows. The superintendent's home is comfortable, roomy, attractively situated among the trees, with a little garden.

Ada Walker is a handsome woman, with the milky complexion that goes so often with red hair, and possessing a quiet pride in her family.

There are seven children, Mickey, 20, and Eric, 18, away from home teaching and serving the RCAF respectively. Linda, 16, George, 13, and Judy, 11, go to the high school in Sooke.

Jack, 4, and small Ada, 2, are still underfoot around the house, the little boy chattering of an imaginary bear hunt, and his smaller sister tagging along on his adventures.

This is a happy family, typical, perhaps, of the people of the industry. Logging is hard work, and the men set their own fast pace. But they have time for recreation and a wholesome family life.

And if they want venison or a salmon, game abounds in the timbered hills and on the slopes where second growth is crowding, and the fishing off Muir Creek is still as rewarding as at just about any spot on Vancouver Island.

IT'S A LONG, HARD ROAD TO TIDEWATER

DUNSMUIR DAUGHTERS INTRIGUED VICTORIANS

WHEN THE DAUGHTERS and the granddaughters of Robert Dunsmuir were wed, all Victoria — even those not invited — was treated to glamorous events that made everyone feel that this place was quite as fashionable as San Francisco or London.

The first Dunsmuir wedding in Victoria was that of Mary Jean, the third daughter of Robert, to Henry Croft. This high-society event was at "Farview," the Dunsmuir home in James Bay, where the Embassy Hotel is today. That was in 1893, while Craigdarroch Castle was building.

And so it went through the years—Dunsmuir weddings that cost small fortunes. The first wedding in the Castle was that of Jessie Sophia, the sixth daughter, to Sir Richard Musgrave, an Irish baronet.

After the turn of the century came the weddings of the granddaughters, and they were on the same lavish scale, attracting crowds of rubber-necks to the churches, hundreds of guests to the receptions.

In 1904 was the wedding of Laura May Dunsmuir, a daughter of Hon. James Dunsmuir, son of Robert; in 1910 was the wedding of Joan Olive, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bryden, the latter a daughter of Robert Dunsmuir.

Laura May Dunsmuir was married to Lieut. Arthur Bromley, now Sir Arthur, whom she had met at a dance in Victoria; and Joan Olive Bryden was married to Alistair Douglas Macdonald, son of Senator and Mrs. William John Macdonald of Armadale, a castle-like residence on the Outer Wharf waterfront in James Bay.

In recent months Lady Bromley died in London and Mrs. Macdonald died in Victoria.

It was a June wedding in 1904 for Laura May and young Bromley, and The Colonist gave all the details:

"Lieut. Arthur Bromley, of his Majesty's first-class cruiser Good Hope, a son of Sir Henry and Lady Bromley of Stoke Hall, Newark, England, led to the altar of St. Saviour's Church, Victoria West, Miss Laura May, the fourth daughter of Hon. and Mrs. James Dunsmuir of Burleigh.

"The Rev. Mr. Barber, rector of the church, performed the ceremony, the bride being given away by her father, and attended as bridesmaids by Miss Vernon, Miss Bessie Dunsmuir, Miss Muriel and Miss Kathleen Dunsmuir, Miss Bromley and Miss Gertrude Rithet. The groomsmen were Lieut. Bromley Wilson of the South Notts Imperial Yeomanry.

"The bride was most becomingly attired, in a lovely gown of chiffon cloth, embroidered in opals, and embellished with beautiful old lace. Her ornaments were diamonds and she carried a bridal shower bouquet. The bride went through the evening with perfect self-possession. The bridesmaids were beautifully gowned, the scene at the altar being one of the most brilliant ever witnessed in Victoria.

"After the ceremony the bridal party drove to Burleigh for the reception. The grounds there presented a scene like fairyland, with colored electric lights and Japanese lanterns strung everywhere across the paths and drives and through the woodland portions of the estate. The 5th Regiment band discoursed music in a marquee opposite the main entrance to the mansion. Dancing and music were enjoyed by the guests, who are estimated to have numbered not fewer than 300.

"After midnight the happy young couple proceeded from Burleigh to the Outer Wharf, and embarked on the steamer Lorne, which had been most tastefully decorated for their reception, and set sail for Vancouver, where they will take the Imperial Limited for New York and thence go on to Southampton. The honeymoon will be spent in England and it is expected that Lieut. and Mrs. Bromley will then make a tour of the continent.

"Last evening's wedding is generally conceded to have been the happiest event of the kind that has taken place in Victoria society for many a year."

BURLEIGH, the James Dunsmuir residence, faced the waters of the Gorge, and sat among many acres. There are traces of the estate left—high stone fences along Craigflower Road, and there are still the gates, green painted, and the coachman's house—historically valuable links with an age that is gone.

Even more elaborate was the June, 1910 wedding of Joan Olive Bryden, named for her Grandmother Dunsmuir. Miss Bryden was one of the most beautiful of Victoria's belles of her time, and she was a clever watercolorist, and her paintings are now collectors' items.

Her mother was not living, and so her aunt, Mrs. Henry Croft of Mount Adelaide, was the hostess, and everyone in Victoria who was anyone at all was invited.

The Colonist gave columns to the wedding:

"Quite the most interesting and smartest function of the present season—the church was exquisitely decorated—the altar was adorned with Madonna lilies and lilies-of-the-valley, quite a feature of the decorations being a white satin cushion on the pulpit, on which was a wreath of lilies-of-the-valley. These decorations were carried out by Mrs. Tilton.

"The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, looked very lovely, being beautifully attired in ivory satin, one side of the skirt entirely embroidered in handsome pearl embroidery, the design being Madonna lilies, while the other side was draped with beautiful Carrickmacross lace, the gift of Sir Richard and Lady Musgrave. Her long court train was also handsomely embroidered in pearls and she wore her mother's bridal veil, over a wreath of orange blossoms, her only jewels being a diamond and emerald pendant, the gift of the bridegroom, and a diamond and emerald brooch, and diamond and emerald earrings, the gift of her aunt, Mrs. Henry Croft. She carried an exquisite sheaf of Madonna lilies.

"The bride was followed by eight bridesmaids and one little page. The bridesmaids were Miss Muriel Dunsmuir, Miss Kathleen Dunsmuir, Miss Betty Kirk, Miss Dola Dunsmuir, Miss Peggy Burns, Miss Katharine Oliver, Miss Betty Bryden, Miss Mab Pemberton, the little page boy being Master Jimmie Audain.

"The young ladies were most picturesquely gowned in dresses of the period of Charles II. These were carried out in a soft shade of green satin, with panels down the front of the skirts on Dresden silk, and they wore pointed lace bodices with large lace collars, and the lace caps of the period. They wore true lovers' knot bow brooches, set with aquamarines, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried sheaves of Madonna lilies.

"The page wore the costume of the period, in the same shade of green satin, and a three-cornered plumed hat. The bridegroom's gift to him was a gold tie pin. Capt. Macdonald, who was in full regimentals, was supported by Capt. Elliston as best man. During the signing of the register Mrs. Harry Pooley and Mr. A. T. Goward rendered a very beautiful duet.

"At the conclusion of the ceremony the bride and bridegroom passed down the aisle beneath an arch of crossed swords, formed by the groom's brother officers in full uniform, the bride's train being borne by the Misses Betty Kirk, Mab Pemberton and Dola Dunsmuir.

"A reception was held at 'Dalzellowie,' the residence of the bride's father on Head Street, Esquimalt, and Mr. Bryden was assisted in receiving his guests by Mrs. Henry Croft, beautifully gowned in blue, veiled with black chiffon, trimmed with gold, black and lace embroideries, with a picture hat trimmed with long blue plumes. She carried a bouquet of pale yellow roses.

"A large marquee was erected on the lawn and the decorations here were exquisite. . . . Miss Thain's orchestra played a delightful selection of music."

"IT WAS A BRIGHT and happy wedding party, gathered under the June sunshine, on the lawns of a fine home:

"... after the bride had cut the wedding cake with her husband's sword, the health of the happy couple was proposed by Col. Peters, Mr. Bryden's health was proposed by Col. E. G. Prior, and Mr. Bryden, in replying, proposed the health of the bridesmaids. Capt. Elliston replied on their behalf, and Mr. Henry Croft proposed the health of Senator and Mrs. Macdonald, and hearty cheers were given for Mrs. Croft.

"Shortly afterward, Capt. and Mrs. Macdonald, amidst showers of rice and the good wishes of all their friends left by motor for the country where the honeymoon will be spent.

"Her traveling dress was a clinging white robe, trimmed with silver embroidery. With this she wore a picture hat, and a most chic coat of blue lace."

This wedding was certainly a fashion show! "Amongst the many handsome toilettes were noticed the following: Mrs. W. J. Macdonald, a lovely black lace robe, with handsome gold scarf and gold lace bonnet, trimmed with white plumes; Mrs. Gavin Burns—a soft white satin, with gold embroideries and picture hat; Miss Macdonald—white embroidered gown and pink toque; Mrs. Frank Barnard—embroidered pale grey chiffon and large black picture hat with apricot plumes; Mrs. Kirk—Nile green crepe-de-chine and hat to match; Mrs. James Dunsmuir—in black with black toque, trimmed with white plumes; Mrs. Guy Audain . . . soft pale yellow satin; and black picture hat; Mrs. John Hope . . . in a new shade of blue cloth, with overdress of gold embroidery, and hat en suite.

"Miss Marion Dunsmuir . . . pale pink muslin and large picture hat; Mrs. Parlor—handsome Irish lace dress, with black picture hat; Mrs. Fletcher, mauve silk; Mrs. W. Atkins, pale pink, large black hat; Mrs. Fred Pemberton, very smart in pale grey; Mrs. Harry Pooley, in mauve, with black hat; Mrs. J. Harvey, white embroidered muslin, green hat trimmed with roses.

"Mrs. Slingsby, very smart Doucet gown; Mrs. J. S. H. Matson, white, with black picture hat, and black boat; Mrs. Peters, in smart blue; Mrs. Scott, in white, with black picture hat."

It was customary in those days for the papers to run lists of the wedding presents, and who sent them, and one can well imagine the days of talk that this prompted.

Major and Mrs. Macdonald, it would appear, received a surfeit of pudding dishes.

Senator and Mrs. Macdonald gave a Queen Anne tea service in silver; Mr. and Mrs. R. P. and the Misses Butchart, silver flower basket; Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Hamilton Burns, set of sporting prints; Mr. and Mrs. Bosanquet, menu holders; Bishop and Mrs. Cridge, photograph of Bishop Cridge; Rev. C. E. and Mrs. Cooper, poems of Browning and Ruskin; Capt. and Mrs. Gaudin, silver pudding basin; Mr. and Mrs. Genge, pudding dish; Major and Mrs. Parker Hibben, lace handkerchiefs; Mr. and Mrs. Luxton, hat pins; Hon. and Mrs. Richard McBridge, silver pudding dish; Hon. and Mrs. E. G. Prior, silver tray; Miss Gladys Perry, bon bon dish; Mr. and Mrs. D. Perrin, silver revolving dish.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Curtis Sampson, brass finger bowls; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Wilson, silver pudding dish; Dr. and Mrs. O. M. Jones, water color; Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Helmecken, high silver vase; Baby Mab Pemberton, vinaigrette cover.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pemberton, old silver toddy ladle; Lady Crease, silver mounted tea pot; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Wilson, black basalt Wedgwood cups and saucers and jug; Patricia and Torquhill Hamilton Burns, jewel box, silver mounted; George Johnson, silver vase; Mr. and Mrs. Biggestaff Wilson, silver vase; Lieut. Col. Currie and officers of 5th Regiment, oak and cut glass tangle stand; Major and Mrs. E. C. Hart, silver bread tray; Mr. and Mrs. John Hope, silver bonbonniere; Miss Violet Pooley, cut glass olive dish; Lieut. Governor and Mrs. T. W. Paterson, cut glass dish; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pooley, cut glass fruit dish; Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Todd and Mr. W. Todd, silver candlesticks; Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Rithet, cut glass bowl.

Maj. and Mrs. Macdonald lived in India and England, and traveled extensively, returning to Vancouver Island to live at "Duntulm Farm," in North Saanich, where Maj. Macdonald died about 10 years ago. Then Mrs. Macdonald moved to Gordon Head.
